B. (e).

532 i. Whether defence available.]—The mere fact of a warehouseman, who has a lien on goods for a certain sum for storage, claiming also to hold them for an untenable claim for money alleged to be due either to himself or a third person, does not dispense with a tender of the sum due, & amount to a conversion, unless the evidence fairly warrants the conclusion that such tender would be useless, as it would be refused.—ILLADO v. MORGAN (1874), 23 C. P. 517.—CAN.

532 ii. ——Pltf. sold to R. a quantity of furniture under a lien & hire agreement, in the usual form, duly registered, by which the property in the furniture was retained by pltf. R., before making all her payments, stored the furniture with deft., a warehouseman, without the consent or knowledge of pltf. After the furniture had remained with deft. for some months, pltf. demanded it under the agreement, but deft. refused to deliver it up until his warehouse charges had been paid; & pltf. brought this action for damages for the wrongful detention & conversion of the goods:—Held: deft. was not entitled to retain the goods until his warehouse charges were paid.—*SMITH v. 543. — Lien in respect of guarantee.]—In an action of detinue, a plea setting up a lien on the chattel detained, in respect of a guarantee entered into by deft., at pltf.'s request, for a debt to be incurred by a third party, but not stating that the debt has been, or is about to be, incurred, is good; & pltf. must show, by way of answer, that the guarantee is terminated. — *MECKLENBURGH v. (g) Negligence of Plaintiff.

544. General rule.]—(1) If a party possess himself of a stolen bill or note improperly, a demand & a refusal are not necessary previous to an action of trover brought for its recovery by the loser.

(2) If a party be robbed of a negotiable security eight days before it is payable, & he does not give notice of his loss till the end of seven days, & then only to the payer, but gives no notice of any kind to the public, he does not use due diligence, & cannot recover in trover against a party who discounted such security six days after the loss. — BECKWITH v. COHIAL (1826), 3 Bing. 444; 2 C. & P. 261; 11 Moore, C. P. 335; 4 L. J. O. S. C. P. 139; 130 E. R. 584.

545. —.]—MORRISON v. BUCHANAN, No. 478, ante.

546. —.]—It appeared that N. had pledged with pltf's. two separate consignments of tobacco. He paid off the advance on one consignment, & presented to pltf's. a properly drawn delivery order in respect of it. They signed it, & N. subsequently added above their signature the description & distinguishing marks of the other consignment, & thus obtained from defts. delivery of both consignments:—Held: an action for conversion would lie against defts., since pltf's. had not been guilty of any negligence which was the proximate cause of the wrongful delivery. — UNION CREDIT BANK, LTD. v. MERSEY DOCKS & HARBOUR BOARD, UNION CREDIT BANK, LTD. v. MERSEY DOCKS & HARBOUR BOARD & NORTH & SOUTH WALES BANK, LTD., [1899] 2 Q. B. 205; 68 L. J. Q. B. 842; 81 L. T. 44; 4 Com. Cas. 227.

(h) Payment into Court.

547. Whether admissible.]—In an action against a coach owner for losing a trunk deft. was allowed to pay into ct. the amount of the sum to which he had by notice limited his responsibility. — HUTTON v. BOLTON (1782), 3 Doug. K. B. 59; 1 Hy. Bl. 209, n.; 99 E. R. 537.

Annotations:—Mentd. Yate v. Willan (1801), 2 East, 128; Broadhurst v. Baldwin (1817), 4 Price, 58.

548. —.]—(1) If in trover the declaration enumerate a great number of articles, & deft. pay money into ct., & plead that pltf. has sustained no greater damages, pltf. must show what articles

deft. has converted; & a declaration in trover being general, deft., by this plea, does not admit anything beyond his payment into ct.; & in such a case the proper measure of damages is the value of the articles which pltf. proves that deft. has taken & kept.

(2) If in trover for stone masons' tools pltf. prove that deft. took & used some of the tools & returned them, this is a conversion, but one for which the jury ought to give small damages & not the value of the tools so used. — COOK v. HARTLEY (1838), 8 C. & P. 568; 173 E. R. 621, N. P.

Annotation:—As to (1) Apld. Story v. Flinns (1851), 6 Exch. 123.

549. —.]—To an action of trover there was a plea that the conversion complained of was the sale of certain cattle after deft. had seized & impounded the same as the surveyor of the highway, & that pltf. ought not further to maintain the said action, in respect of the said conversion, because deft. now brings into ct. the sum of £10 ready to be paid to pltf., & that he had not sustained damages to a greater amount:—Held: bad, on special demurrer, as not warranted by the new rules. — KEY v. THIMBLEBY (1851), 6 Exch. 692; 2 L. M. & P. 478; 20 L. J. Ex. 292; 17 L. T. O. S. 243; 15 Jur. 565.

551. —.]—To an action of detinue, deft. cannot plead payment of money into ct. in satisfaction of the value of the goods. — ALLAN v. DUNN (1857), 1 H. & N. 572; 26 L. J. Ex. 185; 28 L. T. O. S. 257; 156 E. R. 1330.

552. — Offer to return goods.]—In trover for goods deft. pleaded payment of money into ct., & pltf. replied that he had sustained more damages; deft. paid into ct. the cost price of the goods, having offered the goods in specie to pltf. two days only after they ought to have been delivered. Pltf. proved that he had sustained inconvenience & loss by not having the goods delivered at a proper time. The jury, however, found for deft. & the ct. refused to set aside the verdict. — EVANS v. LEWIS (1835), 3 Dowl. 819.

553. Effect of plea.]—A plea of payment into ct. has a different effect when pleaded to a count in trover & a count for money had & received. In the former case, it admits any evidence admissible under not guilty to reduce the damages; in the other case it admits of no evidence which, admitting a debt for a certain cause, goes to reduce its amount, by proof of payment or set-off.

In an action of trover & for money had & received, brought by an administratrix against a party who by mistake had acted as exor. de son tort:—Held: under a plea of payment into ct. to the whole declaration, deft. could not prove in reduction of the amount recoverable under the indebitatus count payments made by deft. & which pltf. would have been bound to make in course of rightful administration. — GOLDY v. GOLDY (1856), 26 L. J. Ex. 20.

557. — Before action brought.]—If a man find my horse, & after ride him, & then delivers the horse unto me, & I bring an action of trover for the conversion, it is no plea that you have delivered the horse to me before the action brought, for you ought to answer to the conversion (POPHAM, J.).—ANON. Subsequently, on the discovery of the will being inoperative, administration was obtained, & the administrator sued A. in detinue for all the goods. A. restored the goods he had himself taken, & pleaded it, paying one shilling into ct. as damages for the detention, & pleaded non detinet as to the portion taken by B.:—Held: the administrator could not recover against A.—CROSSFIELD v. SUCH (1853), 8 Exch. 825; 1 C. L. R. 668; 22 L. J. Ex. 325; 21 L. T. O. S. 187; 1 W. R. 470; 155 E. R. 1587.

1. Land Act or Statute of Frauds.]—Pltf. contracted orally with deft. that he should clear & plough part of deft.'s land & take as compensation the crop which he might raise. Pltf. cleared & sowed the land, reaped the crop & removed it for safe custody to deft.'s house on another part of the land. In an action of trover for the crop:—Held: neither Land Act or Stat. Frauds afforded any defence.—

556. — —.]—To a declaration in trover, deft. pleaded that, before & at the time of the committing, etc., he & pltf. were jointly & together the owners and proprietors of the chattel:—Held: bad, on special demurrer, because, if the conversion was denied, the plea amounted to not guilty, & if it was confessed, the plea could be understood only as confessing a destruction of the chattel, which was not justified.—HIGGINS v. THOMAS (1846), 8 Q. B. 908; 15 L. J. Q. B. 261; 10 Jur. 753; 115 E. R. 1116.

557. Theft—Failure to prosecute to conviction.]—(1) An action of trover is maintainable to recover the value of goods which have been stolen from pltf., & which deft. has innocently purchased, although no steps have been taken to bring the thief to justice; for the obligation which the law imposes on a person to prosecute the party who has stolen his goods does not apply where the action is against a third party innocent of the felony. Qu.: whether pltf. can maintain such action against a party who has received the goods knowing them to have been stolen.

(2) Seem: in order to set up as a defence that the goods had been stolen, & that pltf. has not prosecuted the thief to conviction, it ought to be specially pleaded.

(b) Value of Goods.

i. In General.

574. Value of goods converted—General rule.—In an action of trover the general rule is, that the damages should be the value of the thing taken; & if in trover deft. only plead that he did not convert the goods, his counsel will not be allowed to cross-examine plff.'s witnesses, to show, in mitigation of damages, that the goods taken really belonged to a third person.—*FINCH v. 576. Goods assigned for money advanced.—A, a manufacturer at Stockton-upon-Tees, gives goods to the carrier there to have delivered at deft.'s wharf, London, & receives the usual receipt. He then hands over to plffs., in consideration of an advance of money, the carrier's receipt, invoice, & an order upon defts. to deliver the goods in question upon their arrival:—Held: upon disobeying such order, etc., previously lodged with & acknowledged by them, defts. were liable in trover, though plffs. were never in actual possession of the goods, & the measure of damages was the value of the goods, not the sum actually advanced.—*HOLL v. o. Damages in excess of value of property.—M. having sold produce, & received notes in payment, refused to give up the property. the captain sold the cargo & repaired the vessel, & came home. The jury found that the sale was unnecessary. Damages were composed of the cost price of the cargo here, & the amount of freight actually paid:—Held: a reasonable estimate.

The captain, acting bond fide in the course of his employment, but under a mistake, the effect of circumstances or authority, has been guilty of an act amounting to a conversion. His act was not so ultra his employment as to be without the scope of his authority; for though acting under a mistake, he meant to act under his authority. I cannot find any circumstances to sever the owners from the captain; & I think that the act amounts to a conversion against the owner (WILDE, C.J.).—EWBANK v. NUTTING (1849), 7 C. B. 797; 13 L. T. 585 i. General rule.—In trover the principle of law (though not an inflexible one) is, that the jury can give no more damages than the value of the goods at the time of the conversion.—MORTON & McGEHEE v. McDOWELL (1850), 7 U. C. R. 338.—CAN.

585 ii. — The measure of

586. — In an action for the conversion of goods of which pltf. has the immediate right of possession, the true measure of damages is the full value of the goods at the time of the conversion.

Pltf. had certain looms in deft.'s mill, & demanded possession of them, deft. having no right to detain them. Deft., however, having obtained a judgment against pltf. in the county ct., in respect of which he would be entitled to issue execution against him on the next day, refused to deliver them up; & the looms were taken in execution on the following morning, & sold. In an action for this wrongful conversion:—Held: the liability of the looms to the county ct. process, & the fact that by the wrongful seizure pltf.'s debt was apparently satisfied, were not circumstances which the jury could take into consideration in estimating the damages.—EDMONDSON v. NUTTALL (1864), 17 C. B. N. S. 280; 4 New Rep. 366; 34 L. J. C. P. 102; 13 W. R. 53; 144 E. R. 113.

589. —.]—Pltf. warehoused hops with defts.

The warehouse rent not being paid, defts., on July 7, sold the hops to R. On July 29 R. sold them back to defts., who, on the same day, sold them to L. On Aug. 16 L. sold them to K., who, on Sept. 20, removed them from defts.' warehouse, where they had remained up to that time, not having been removed by any of the purchasers. None of these sales was in market overt. A letter was sent by defts. to pltf. on July 5, giving him notice of their intention to sell, & a second letter was sent on July 22, informing pltf. of the sale, & enclosing a cheque for the balance of the purchase-money after deducting the warehouse rent. Pltf. never received either of these letters. In an action to recover damages for the conversion of the hops:—Held: the measure of damages was not to be restricted to the value of the hops on July 7, but was their value on Sept. 20, when K. removed them from defts.' warehouse.—JOHNSON v. HOOK (1883), 1 Cab. & El. 89; 31 W. R. 812.

590. Where no special damage.]—Special damage may be recovered in trover if laid in the declaration. Therefore, where, in trover for a horse, it was laid as special damage that pltf. was obliged to hire other horses, semble, the amount of damages should be the value of pltf.'s horse when taken & the sum he paid for hire, deducting what would have been the expense of keeping his own horse for the time.

In cases of trover, where no special damage is laid, the value of the article at the time of the conversion is the measure of damages (PRAKE, B.).—DAVIS v. OSWELL (1837), 7 C. & P. 801; 173 E. R. 351, N. P.

591. Where offer by defendant to restore.]—

In trover, the conversion proved was a refusal to deliver upon demand; but it was also proved that after writ issued deft. offered to return the chattels; which offer was then declined:—Held: the measure of the damages was the value of the chattels at the time of the conversion, & not the difference in their value between the time of the conversion & the offer to return.—HOMER v. MALLARS (1858), 30 L. T. O. S. 241.

593. Sale by auctioneer after notice of claim by third party.]—

An auctioneer has not merely the custody of goods entrusted to him for sale, but also an interest in & possession of them, whether the sale be on the premises of the owner or in public auction room.

An auctioneer having been requested by A. to sell certain goods, agreed to do so at a warehouse where they were stored by A. The day before the sale he received notice that B. claimed the goods, notwithstanding which he put them up for sale & returned to A. those not sold. B. having proved her right to the goods:—Held: the auctioneer was liable for the value of the goods returned to A., as well as of those sold.—DAVIS v. ARTINGSTALL (1880), 49 L. J. Ch. 609; 42 L. T. 507; 29 W. R. 137.

594. Goods held by warehouseman for fraudulent vendor—Refusal of warehouseman to deliver to innocent purchaser.]—

The owner of goods lying at a warehouse was induced by the fraud of F. to instruct the warehouseman to transfer the goods to the order of F., & the goods were accordingly placed at F.'s disposal. F. then sold the goods to an innocent purchaser, who, before paying the price, obtained a statement from the warehouseman that he held the goods at the purchaser's order. On the discovery of F.'s fraud the warehouseman refused to deliver the goods to the purchaser. In an action by the purchaser against the warehouseman:—Held: the warehouseman, having attorned to the purchaser, was estopped from impeaching his title, the refusal to deliver was a conversion, & the measure of damages was the market value of the goods at the date of the refusal to deliver.—HENDERSON & CO. v. R. WILLIAMS, [1895] 1 Q. B. 521; 64 L. J. Q. B. 308; 72 L. T. 98; 43 W. R. 274; 11 T. L. R. 148; 14 R. 375, C. A.

After it had been up eleven days, deft. came in the morning before pltf. was up, & under the pretence of repairing it, took it away. Pltf. saw him in the evening, & asked him to return it, & why he had taken it away, he said, "Because I supplied the clock in the shape of a cash transaction, & I will not bring it back until I have my money"—Held: this, coupled with a letter from pltf.'s attorney, requiring him to deliver up the clock, was evidence of conversion in an action of trover; & inasmuch as the delivery was not complete, & pltf. could not therefore be liable to pay for it, the judge who tried the cause was right in directing the jury to find nominal damages only. But semble, even then, if it had been taken away in a very insulting or aggravating manner, the ct. might sustain a verdict for damages to the full amount of the article.—DAVIES v. MITCHELL (1846), 1 New Pract. Cas. 588; 8 L. T. O. S. 193.

A party delivered to a railway co. certain goods to carry from A. to B., paying the carriage, to be delivered to a party there. Part of the transit was effected by another railway co., which refused to deliver up the goods to the consignee without payment of an additional specified sum; but an action having been threatened against the contracting co., an offer was made to deliver them up without that payment. The action was, however, persevered in, pltf. declaring against the co. as carriers, with a count in trover for the conversion of the goods, subsequently to which they were given up in a damaged state:—Held: the additional sum demanded for the goods was not the measure of damage.

604. — Effect of delay in bringing action.]—A shipload of timber having been consigned to defts., the consignor sent the bill of lading & other shipping documents, & also a bill of exchange, to pltf., in pursuance of the usual course of business between him & them, to cover certain advances which they from time to time made to him. Pltfs. placed the shipping documents & bill of exchange relating to the cargo of timber in the hands of agents, who acted between pltfs. & defts. The agents, at the request of pltfs., forwarded the documents to defts., in order to have the bill of exchange accepted by them. Shortly afterwards defts. informed the agents that the cargo was thoroughly out of condition, & that they could not take it in its then state. The agents replied that, unless defts. returned the bill of exchange accepted, they ought to send back the shipping documents. This defts. declined to do, as they had paid part of the freight, & intended to take possession of the cargo. Later on they stated that they had been compelled to remove the cargo under the rules of the dock co., but that, if the agents would repay them the freight & certain charges and their profits on a portion of the cargo which they had sold, they would return the documents. The agents replied that the matter must be left in the hands of pltfs., the owners of the cargo. Defts. then returned to the agents the bill of exchange unaccepted, but retained the bill of lading as security against freight & charges. They offered to yield up the bill of lading on the freight & charges being refunded. Thereupon pltfs. commenced an action against defts., asking that they might be ordered to accept & deliver up the bill of exchange; & that it might be declared that, until such acceptance & delivery defts. were not entitled to retain the bill of lading. They also asked for an injunction, a receiver, & damages. Owing to delay, caused by the fault of both parties, the action did not come on for hearing until about four years after its commencement:—Held: defts. must pay damages, in the nature of interest, for keeping pltfs. out of possession of their goods; the ordinary measure of such damages would be 5 per cent. on the value of the cargo from the time defts. wrongfully took possession thereof; but, having regard to the delay which had occurred in bringing the action on for hearing, attributable no less to pltfs. than defts., half damages, computed at the rate of 2½ per cent. only, would be awarded.—REW v. PAYNE, DOUTHWAITE & Co. (1885), 53 L. T. 932; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 515.

605. —.]—In an action in the Ch. Div. pltfs. claimed delivery of cargoes of guano, an injunction to restrain defts. from delivering otherwise than to pltfs., & the appointment of a receiver. Defts. who claimed the right to the cargoes, after the issue of the writ took possession of them under a consent order by which it was agreed that the receipt of the cargoes by defts. should be "without prejudice to any question between the parties, & that they would keep separate accounts of their expenditure & receipts in respect of the cargoes, & abide by any order the ct. should make with respect to the cargoes." An order for the appointment of a receiver was afterwards made, & to the receiver when appointed defts. delivered the unsold cargoes & the proceeds of the cargoes they had sold. The action was defended on the ground that the cargoes were not the property of pltfs. At the hearing the Vice-Chancellor made a decree declaring that pltfs. were entitled to the cargoes, & that defts. were not entitled to reimbursement of any expenses, & directing an inquiry "what damages had been sustained by pltfs. by reason of the detention of the cargoes by defts." On appeal this House having regard to the terms of the consent order varied the decree by declaring that defts. were entitled to receive out of the proceeds of the cargoes payment of all sums properly disbursed by them on account of freight & landing charges, & otherwise affirmed the decree. Upon the inquiry as to damages the chief clerk found that the detention began on the arrival of the cargoes respectively at their ports of discharge, & computing the damages on the principle that the illegal detention continued until the decree of the Vice-Chancellor, allowed interest at 5 per cent. upon the proceeds of the cargoes until the decree, less the interest gained in ct. & paid in by the receiver. Upon a summons to vary the chief clerk's certificate:—Held: after the order for the appointment of a receiver the cargoes were in the possession of the ct. & any damages suffered by pltfs. were due to the law's delay & not to any wrongful act of defts.; interest at 5 per cent. ought therefore to be allowed until the order for the appointment of a receiver but not after.—*PERUVIAN GUANO Co. v. not in equity, because the assignment passed the equitable interest; not in law, because the legal interest in the instrument passed. I think, therefore, that, having received the money unlawfully, she is liable to an action for money had & received. But, independently of that, the trustees, under the assignment, were entitled to have the instrument. Deft. wrongfully applies it to her own purposes; she thus converts it to her own use. I think, therefore, that the amount which she receives is the measure of damages, because, if plffs. had had the instrument, they would have had no difficulty in obtaining that amount (COCKBURN, C.J.).—WATSON v. McLEAN (1858), 5 B. & E. 78; 6 W. R. 721; 120 E. R. 436, Ex. Ch.

627. Assessment of value of each paper—Duty of jury.] (1) If A. has employed B. as his attorney, & has paid his bill, A. has a right to have his papers delivered up to him; & it is no defence to an action of detinue brought by A. against B. for B. to show that his London agent detains the papers, he having a lien on them as against B. for a balance of account for business done.

(2) In an action of detinue for papers, the jury must find the value of each paper separately; & it is the duty of pltf. to prove the value of the articles he sues for.—ANDERSON v. PASSMAN (1835), 7 C. & P. 193; 173 E. R. 85, N. P.

641. ————In Mar. 1881, pltf. handed to B., a broker, shares in a mining co., with a transfer signed, a blank being left for the name of the transferee for the purpose of sale. B. died; & it was then discovered that he had, without the knowledge or authority of pltf., lodged the shares with deft.'s firm as security for an advance. Having received notice from the co. that they were about to register the shares in the name of deft., pltf. commenced an action in the Ch. Div. of the High Ct. to restrain deft.'s firm & the co. from parting with the shares or registering deft. as transferee, concluding with the usual prayer for "such further or other relief as the nature of the case might require." On Feb. 23, 1882, defts. in that action consented to an order for the delivery up of the shares to pltf. forthwith. The order directed that "upon delivery of the deed or form of transfer & the securities representing the same, & upon payment of costs to pltf. & the mining co., all proceedings in the said Ch. action should be stayed." The shares were not delivered up to pltf. until Apr. 28, 1882, when they were sold at a considerable loss. In an action against deft. in the Q. B. Div. to recover damages for this detention, the jury found that pltf. did not authorise B. to pledge the shares for his own debt, or lend them to him for that purpose:—Held: pltf. was estopped by the consent order made in the Ch. action Feb. 23, 1882, from recovering in this action damages for such detention, & deft. was not responsible for the detention of the shares by the mining co. after the order had been made in the suit in the Ch. 645. ————Jurisdiction of court of bankruptcy.—Bkpey. Act, 1869 (c. 71), gives the Ct. of Bkpey. jurisdiction to restrain by injunction the proceedings in an action at law brought to try the legal question whether certain goods form part of a bkpt.'s estate.

A trader procured a loan of £55 on the security of two bills of sale which included the whole of his property, which was worth more than £600. At the same time he agreed verbally with the lender of the money that the bills of sale should be given up & fresh ones substituted for them within the time allowed for registration under the Bills of Sale Act, & that this should be repeated from time to time. The original bills were executed in May, 1870, & they were renewed in June, & again in July, no fresh advance being made to the mtgor. of either occasion. Early in Aug. the mtgor. filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement, & the July bills were then registered within the proper time:—Held: the proceedings in an action of trover brought by the mtgee. against the trustee to recover the goods were properly restrained by

648. — As to acts done by parties—Evidence of claim in bankruptcy.]—In an action of trover by the assignees of a bkpt. it appeared that the goods had been assigned by the bkpt. to B., who assigned them to C, to whom the purchase-money as was contended, was advanced by pltf., to whom C. subsequently transferred the goods by bill of sale. In order to show that these transactions were fictitious, certain evidence was adduced; & a question was asked, "whether C. had not made a claim to these goods after the bkpcy.":—Held: the question could properly be asked, as the claim was an act done by one of the parties to the alleged fraud.—FORD v. ELLIOTT (1849), 4 Exch. 78; 18 L. J. Ex. 447; 154 E. R. 1132.

649. — Admission by counsel—Of client's possession of goods.]—Where a party appears by counsel before the ct. or a judge at chambers in any stage of the cause, & counsel makes an admission of a fact, though unsupported by affidavit, the ct. will regard such statement as presumably true, & will admit it in evidence when offered by the other side.

In an action of detinue to recover possession of certain papers deft. took out a summons before a judge at chambers to change the venue, & appeared by counsel to support the application. In the course of the proceedings before the judge counsel admitted that his client had the papers:—Held: this admission was rightly received in evidence at the trial of the cause, as a statement made by counsel in discharge of his functions as counsel, relevant to the matters at issue, & made for the purpose of influencing the judge to take a step in favour of his client.

When counsel makes before the ct. or a judge a statement, or does an act in the presence of the attorney on the record, or any authorised person who represents him, & the statement or the act is not repudiated by the attorney or his representative, that amounts to an assent to or adoption of it, & it becomes the statement or act of the attorney (WILLIAMS, J.).—HALLER v. WORMAN pltf. against deft. to recover damages for the conversion of a quantity of hay, pltf.'s right to recover depended upon whether the hay in question was "upland" or "intervale":—Held: the question was peculiarly one for the trial judge, the evidence being contradictory, & the question being one that the judge had exceptional advantages for determining.—GUILD v. GIBSON (1905), 37 N. B. R. 126.—CAN.

m. Right to amend pleadings.]—Pltf.'s claim was for damages for the alleged wrongful detention of five horses. He did not allege conversion of the horses. The evidence at the trial, however, in the opinion of the trial judge, proved a conversion of the horses by defts. to their own use absolutely; that defts. were not taken by surprise; & that the amount for which defts. could be found liable in detinue would exceed their liability for conversion.—Held: pltf. should have leave to make all proper amendments to the statement of claim, & should have judgment for the value of the five horses as in an action for conversion of them to his own use.—MCCUTCHEON v. JOHNSON (1913), 24 W. L. R. 868; 13 D. L. R. 41; 23 Man. L. R. 559.—CAN.

p. Onus of proof on defendant.]—Where in an action for return of goods & damages for detention it was alleged in defence that the goods had been seized by the collector of customs for alleged infraction by pltf. of the customs laws:—Held: defts. were bound to show not only that the goods were held under that seizure at the time the action was commenced, but also that the customs authorities were entitled to make the seizure.—LOMAX v. BROWER (Alta.), [1919] 3 W. W. R. 385.—CAN.

q. Stay of proceedings.]—In an action of detinue, although alleging no special damage, the ct. will compel pltf. to elect whether he will stay all proceedings on delivery of the chattel in dispute, on payment by deft. of nominal damages, & all the costs of the action, or will proceed for greater damages at the risk of all costs.—*LYONS v. 651. Right of defendant to set-off or counter-claim.]—A distress for rent was levied upon certain property, & cattle lent for hire by pltf. to the tenant were seized. Deft., the holder of a bill of sale upon the goods & chattels of the tenant, then paid off the distress, & seized the cattle in question under his bill of sale. Upon an action for trover & wrongful conversion:—Held: deft. was not entitled to set off & counterclaim the amount paid by him to relieve the cattle from the distress.—JONES v. SIMMONS (1881), 45 J. P. 666.

652. —.]—Pltf. co. had deposited cigars with defts. to secure a debt. An order for winding up the co. was afterwards made, & the secured debt having been paid off, the liquidator of the co. claimed a return of the cigars, but defts. refused to give them up. The liquidator brought an action of detinue for the cigars. Their value having been assessed in the action, defts. claimed by way of counterclaim to set off another debt due from the co. to them against such value by virtue of the conjoint effect of sect. 38 of Bkpcy. Act, 1883, (c. 52), & sect. 10 of Jud. Act, 1875 (c. 77), which applies the rules of bkpcy. law to cases of winding up:—Held: they were not entitled to do so, on the ground that sect. 38 is only applicable where the claims on each side are such as result in pecuniary liabilities, whereas the right of pltf. was to a return of the goods.—*FRERLE'S HOTELS & RESTAURANT CO. v. t. Whether court will strike out groundless counts & remit action.]—When the ct. was satisfied that counts in detinue had been introduced into a summons & plaint without any bona fide foundation & for the purpose of ousting the jurisdiction of the ct. to remit the action to the civil bill ct. & that, if the other counts in the summons & plaint had been the sole causes of action, the case might properly be remitted, the ct. struck out the counts in detinue & remitted the action.—*KEOGH v. a. Procedure on motion for non-suit.]—On a trial for the detinue of a ship on the termination of pltf.'s case a motion for a non-suit was made. The judge was of opinion that there had not been any sufficient demand & refusal of the vessel but ordered deft. to go on with his defence, who supplied by his evidence the defects in pltf.'s case. On a renewal of motion for a non-suit:—Held: the ct. in considering the motion was not bound to reject the evidence supplied by deft., not to confine itself to what had been given when the motion was first made, but could have regard to the whole of the evidence.—*SNEA v. property in the chattel in debt. as against pltf. i. Right of plaintiff to costs up to offer to confess judgment & right of defendant to subsequent costs.—[Deft., in trover, about a month after the conversion, offered to confess a judgment under 18 Vict. c. 9, for $18, which pltf. refused. On the trial (upwards of two years afterwards), pltf. recovered a verdict for $19—a part, $15.30 being found by the jury as the value of the goods, & the balance as damages in the nature of interest since the conversion.—Held: as the amount tendered was more than the value of the goods & damages up to that time, pltf. was only entitled to costs up to the time of the offer, & debt. was entitled to the subsequent costs.—BELYEA v. 681. ————. On footing of tort.—Pltf., a dealer, bought a hydraulic press from deft., an auctioneer, at a sale, under conditions of sale requiring payment before delivery. Time was allowed for payment. Payment was tendered within the time allowed, but deft. refused to deliver the press, having contracted to resell it, & in fact reselling it, subsequent to the tender. Pltf. had also contracted to resell the press, after delivery, at a profit. In the action the sole issue in dispute, namely, whether there had been tender within the time allowed for payment, was found in favour of pltf., & evidence of pltf.'s loss of profit on resale having been given as a measure of damage, judgment was given for pltf. for £29 15s. 3d. Deft. contended that the action was one for breach of contract, & that costs would therefore only be recovered on the county ct. scale.—Held: the action was for a wrongful conversion subsequent to & independent of the contract passing the property, & it was therefore an action of tort in which, more than £20 having been recovered, costs followed on the High Ct. scale.—COHEN v. FOSTER (1892), 61 L. J. Q. B. 643; 66 L. T. 616; 8 T. L. R. 519, D. C.

682. ————. Articles returned.—During progress of case.—Pltf. brought an action in the High Ct. to recover from defts. certain drawings that had been deposited with them as agents for sale, & damages for their detention & he claimed also an account in respect of such of the drawings as had been sold, & the amount that might be proved to be due on the taking of the account. Defts. pleaded that they had always been ready & willing to return the drawings in their possession, & offered to return them forthwith on obtaining a proper receipt. Pltf. replied accepting the offer to return the drawings, & they were accordingly returned to him. They were of the value of £20 & upwards. The action went to trial on the question of the amount due from defts. in respect of the drawings that had been sold, & resulted in a verdict for pltf. for £33.—Held: pltf. was entitled to costs on the High Ct. scale on the grounds (a) that he had recovered the drawings through the exigency of the writ, & that the return of them during the progress of the case did not affect the rights of the parties at the date of the writ; & (b) that the action being one of detinue in which pltf. had recovered the things claimed in specie, it was not within the class of actions founded on tort to which County Courts Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 116 (2), applies.—DU PASQUIER v. CADBURY, JONES & Co., LTD., [1903] 1 K. B. 104; 72 L. J. K. B. 78; 87 L. T. 519; 51 W. R. 113; 19 T. L. R. 41; 47 Sol. Jo. 49, C. A.

683. ————. After judgment.—Pltf. in an action of detinue recovered judgment for the return of the goods claimed or £6 10s. their value & the goods were returned to him.—Held: County Courts Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 116 (2), did not apply & pltf. was entitled to costs.—TROTTER v. WINDHAM & Co. (1907), 23 T. L. R. 676; 51 Sol. Jo. 625, C. A.

684. Security for costs.—Action by bankrupt.—In an action of trover, by an insolvent debtor, to recover property acquired subsequently to adjudication, the ct. will not direct him to give security for costs, unless the Insolvent Debtors Ct., on an application by the assignees, under 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 57, have permitted execution to issue in respect of such property.—CLAPWORTHY v. COLLIER (1832), 2 Cr. & J. 631; 1 L. J. Ex. 229; 149 E. R. 265.

685. Divisibility of costs.—Partial success of both parties.—In trover for waggons, wheelbarrows, iron rails, etc., a verdict was given for pltf. at the trial for £1,850, but afterwards, on the argument of a special case, was reduced by consent to £600, & the following rule was drawn up:—

"It is ordered, by consent, that the verdict found for pltf. on the trial of this cause be reduced to the sum of £600, & that as to the residue of the claim, the verdict be entered for defts.:—Held: this was the proper course, the issue being divisible, & pltf. were not entitled to have the verdict entered generally for them, but defts. were entitled to a verdict & to their costs, as to so much of the cause of action as they had succeeded on.—WILLIAMS v. GREAT WESTERN RY. Co. (1841), 8 M. & W. 856; 1 Dowl. N. S. 10; 10 L. J. Ex. 472; 151 E. R. 1287.

o. Right of one defendant to indemnify for costs against another.—In an action for wrongful seizure & detention of chattels, the co. which, under instructions from the principal deft. had removed & stored the chattels, was joined as deft., after judgment had been given in pltf.'s favour in respect of detention of the chattels, the co. applied for an order that the other deft. should pay the costs of the action:—Held: in the absence of any evidence of an express or implied contract by the other deft. to indemnify for the co. the order could not be made.—*SCHOLLUM v. insolvent, pltf., in order to establish the insolvent's title to the goods in question at a certain time, gave in evidence a bill of sale, by which the insolvent, in consideration of the sum of £499 sold absolutely the goods to deft. & other persons, & pltf. then produced evidence to impeach the validity of the bill of sale, by showing that it was wholly void on the ground of fraud. Pltf. having obtained a verdict:—Held: he was entitled to the costs incurred in the production of that evidence.—HARDY v. TINGEY (1850), 5 Exch. 294; 19 L. J. Ex. 233; 155 E. R. 126.

698.—J.—Where specific chattels are necessary for carrying on a particular trade, & a right is asserted by those who have acquired a lien upon them to sell them, the ct. has jurisdiction to restrain, by injunction, a threatened sale, where an injury would ensue from such sale to the trader or other person whose right would be interrupted & whose position in life would be injured by a sale.

A railway co. claimed a lien on certain coal waggons in their possession belonging to B., & threatened to sell them. B. thereupon filed a bill to restrain the sale & detention of such waggons. By arrangement the co. agreed not to sell them, until after a specified day. Subsequently to that day, B. brought an action of trover & detinue against the co., & in that action he recovered possession of the coal waggons from the co. 705. Affirmance of implied contractual relationship—Between plaintiff & tortfeasor.]—In a simple case, such as that of a wrongdoer having taken property of pltf. & sold it at a price beyond its ordinary market value, there is no difficulty. The question of affirmance [of contract] here concerns only the relation between two persons, the owner & the tortfeasor, & by waiving the tort & treating the latter as his agent in selling, the owner secures the advantage of the high price received (per CUI.).—JOHN v. DODWELL & Co., [1918] A. C. 563; 87 L. J. P. C. 92; 118 L. T. 661; 34 T. L. R. 261, P. C.

cc. Necessity for proof of demand for goods.]—Pltf. brought an action of replevin for certain goods seized under a warrant of distress for water rates claimed by the city, & the writ alleged an unjust detention, but contained no allegation of an unlawful taking. Dft. denied the detention, & pleaded a second plea, justifying under a distress for water rates, to which pltf. replied, disputing the liability.—Held: as there was no complaint in the writ of an unlawful taking, & no proof of a demand of the goods by pltf., he could not recover in this form of action.—*INGLIS v. delivered to deft. a bill of parcels as for goods sold & delivered by bkpt., & made two several demands for payment, which deft. refused, & he also refused to deliver up the goods when they were subsequently demanded:—Held: the demand for payment amounted only to a qualified offer by the assignees to adopt the sale, & that they were not thereby precluded from suing in trover.—VALPY v. SANDERS (1848), 5 C. B. 886; 17 L. J. C. P. 249; 11 L. T. O. S. 201; 12 Jur. 483; 136 E. R. 1128.

708. Demand of proceeds of sale—Effect of demand—Demand unsatisfied.]—The master of a ship, which was injured by the perils of the sea, put into the Mauritius, & there abandoned the ship & cargo, which were afterwards sold under an order of the Vice-Admty. Ct. there, & the proceeds paid into that ct. The cargo was not damaged or perishable, nor was there any pressing necessity for the sale of it. The owners of the cargo brought an action on the case against the owners of the ship for wrongfully selling the cargo instead of carrying it to London, according to their contract, with a count in trover, & recovered a general verdict for the value of the ship & freight, which was one-fifth of the value of the cargo. They also sent out a power of attorney to an agent at the Mauritius to procure from the Vice-Admty. Ct. there the proceeds of the sale which had been paid in. The agent demanded them, but they had been previously remitted to the High Ct. of Admty. in this country. In an action for money had & received by the owners against the purchaser of the goods:—Held: the proceeds of the sale at the Mauritius not having been paid when demanded, pltf. were in the same situation as if no such demand had been made, & therefore entitled to recover the value of the goods from deft.—MORRIS v. The Ct. of Bkpcy. having made the order prayed for, & the assignee having accordingly paid over the proceeds of the sale:—Held: the trustee could not afterwards bring an action of trover against the assignee under the bill of sale to recover the difference between the value of the goods & the amount realised by the sale, inasmuch as by the proceedings in bkpcy. to recover the proceeds of the sale he had affirmed such sale & waived the tort.—SMITH v. 712. ——[Pltf.'s servant wrongfully sold goods of his master to deft., who knew that the servant was improperly dealing with them, & the servant paid the proceeds of the sale into his account at his bank. Pltf. brought an action against the servant & the bank, claiming as against the servant damages for conversion of the goods, & in the alternative for money had & received, & as against the servant & the bank an injunction to restrain them respectively until the trial of the action from drawing out or parting with the sum of £1,500 then standing to the servant's credit at the bank. Pltf. applied for an interim injunction as above upon an affidavit that £1,500 at the least could be specifically traced to the servant's account as being moneys paid by deft. for the goods wrongfully sold. An interim injunction was granted, but no further steps in the action were taken, an agreement being arrived at between pltf. & the servant that £1,125 out of the £1,500 then at the bank should be paid to pltf. in full settlement of all claims against the servant, without prejudice to pltf.'s claim against deft. This agreement was embodied in a judge's order, but no judgment was signed. Before the agreement was made pltf. had brought an action against deft. claiming damages for the conversion of the goods:—Held: pltf. had not, by his proceedings in the former action & by his dealings with the servant therein, elected to affirm the sale & to waive the tort, & the action against deft. was maintainable.—RICE v. REED, [1900] 1 Q. B. 54; 69 L. J. Q. B. 33; 81 L. T. 410, C. A.

Part I.—Trusts.

SECT. 1.—NATURE AND CHARACTERISTICS.

1. Creation of equity.—VEDALE v. ETRICK (1682), 2 Cas. in Ch. 130; 22 E. R. 880, L. C.

2. — Confidence between parties.—A trust is where there is such a confidence between parties that no action will lie, but is a case merely for the consideration of equity.—STURT v. MELLISH (1743), 2 Atk. 610; 26 E. R. 765, L. C.

Annotation :—Consd. Wilson v. Bury (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 518.

3. — Agreement between parties.—Agreement concerning any subject, though in form personal, raises a trust in equity against the party himself, volunteers, & claimants, with notice under him, except where the effect would be to restore the power of violating it, as where tenant in tail has suffered a recovery contrary to his covenant.

Wherever persons agree concerning any particular subject, that in a Court of equity as against the party himself & any claiming under him voluntarily or with notice, raises a trust (LORD HARDWICKE, C.)—LEGARD v. HODGES (1792), 1 Ves. 477; 3 Bro. C. C. 531; 30 E. R. 447, L. C.; subsequent proceedings (1793), 4 Bro. C. C. 421, L. C.

4. Whether distinct from use.—An use which is but a trust & confidence, & a thing in equity & conscience, shall be by operation of law to him who in truth was owner of the land, without having regard to estoppels or conclusions, which are averse to truth & equity (per CUR.)—BECKWITH'S CASE, COLGATE v. BLITHE (1589), 2 Co. Rep. 56 b; 76 E. R. 541.

Annotations :—Mentd. Bury & Taylor's Case (1610), Godb. 179; Floyer's Case (1611), 9 Co. Rep. 125 b; Berry v. Perry (1615), 3 Bulst. 62; Child v. Baylie (1620), Palm. 48; Collingwood v. Pava (1664), 1 Sid. 193; Harris v. Evans (1666), O. Bridg. 547; Bushell v. Burland (1708), Holt, K. B. 733; Acherley v. Vernon (1739), Willes, 153; Armstrong d. Neve v. Woolsey (1755), Barnes, 467; Tarleton v. Liddell (1851), 17 Q. B. 390.

5. —.]—BROUGHTON v. LANGLEY (1703), Holt, K. B. 708; 2 Ld. Raym. 873; 1 Lut. 814; 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 383; 2 Salk. 679; 90 E. R. 1291.

Annotations :—Reid. Garth v. Baldwin (1755), 2 Ves. Sen. 646; Legard v. Hodges (1792), 3 Bro. C. C. 531. Mentd. Idght d. Philipps v. Smith (1810), 12 East, 455.

6. —.]—We take trusts & uses to be the same, in respect of trusts in their larger extent, & so within the Statute of Uses (HOLT, C.J.)—BUSHELL v. BURLAND (1708), Holt, K. B. 733; 11 Mod. Rep. 196; 90 E. R. 1304.

7. —.]—The common law makes no distinction between trusts & confidences & uses; & there is no foundation to make a difference between trusts & uses, since 27 Hen. 8 though they have done it in Chancery; & now since Stat. Frauds no stranger can take a use by any parol averment (HOLT, C.J.).—ALTHAM (LORD) v. ANGLESEY (EARL) (1709), Gilb. Ch. 16; 11 Mod. Rep. 210; 25 E. R. 12; sub nom. ANGLESEA (LORD) v. ALTHAM (LORD), Holt, K. B. 736.

Sect. 1.—Nature and characteristics. Sect. 2: Sub-sect. 1, A. & B.; sub-sect. 2.]

9. —[—].—BURGESSE v. WHEATE, A.-G. v. WHEATE, No. 638, post.

10. —[—].—The term "trust" would be read . . . in the old sense in which it was understood before & in the Statute of Uses, which admitted of no difference between "uses" & "trusts" (CHITTY, J.).—Re BROOKE, BROOKE v. BROOKE, [1894] 1 Ch. 43; 63 L. J. Ch. 159; 70 L. T. 71; 42 W. R. 186; 10 T. L. R. 64; 8 R. 24.

11. Distinguished from power.—Power considered as distinguished from trust. This ct. cannot execute a mere power; but will execute a trust, which fails by the death of the trustee, or accident.—BROWN v. HIGGS (1803), 8 Ves. 561; 32 E. R. 473, L. 13. Distinguished from contract.—(1) If the only relation which it is proved deft. or person charged bears to the matter is a contractual relation, he is not in the view of equity a trustee at all, but only a contractor (LORD ESHER, M.R.).

(2) A constructive trust is therefore, . . . "a trust to be made out by circumstances (BOWEN, L.J.).—SOAR v. ASHWELL, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390; 69 L. T. 585; 42 W. R. 165; 4 R. 602, C. A.

15. —[—].—KING v. DENISON, No. 93, post.

16. Obligation to do act in respect of property.—An obligation to do an act with respect to property creates a trust; & if the party who is subject to the obligation acquires or retains by means of his neglect of duty a greater interest than he would otherwise have had, he becomes a trustee of such excess for the benefit of those who would have been entitled to it if the obligation had been duly fulfilled.—FLEEMING v. HOWDEN (1808), L. R. 1 Sc. & Div. 372.

*Annotations:—*Dtd. Bank of Scotland v. Macleod, [1914] A. C. 311. Reid. Heritable Reversionary Co. v. Millar, [1892] A. C. 598.

17. —[—].—(1) Trusts, i.e. equitable obligations to deal with property in a particular way, can be imposed in any language which is clear enough to show an intention to impose them (LINDLEY, L.J.).

(2) There is . . . abundant authority for saying that, if property is left to a person in confidence that he will dispose of it in a particular way as to which there is no ambiguity, such words are amply sufficient to impose an obligation (LINDLEY, L.J.).—Re WILLIAMS, WILLIAMS v. WILLIAMS, [1897] 2 Ch. 12; 66 L. J. Ch. 485; 76 L. T. 600; 45 W. R. 519; 41 Sol. Jo. 452, C. A.

18. Necessity for trustee & cestui qui trust.—There is a trust in almost every relation of life in which one person does something for another. Those who deal . . . with a broker trust him to make a selection of certain securities. In a broader sense, & one frequently used, we are all trustees, some for the public, some for different sections of the public, of our abilities, our time, our goods, & so on. But in cts. of equity, & in the text books & authorities, trustee & cestui que trust have a technical & defined meaning. You must have a person who is a trustee, then you must have property, which may be chattels, or land, or money, or anything, & you must have persons who are the cestui que trust—in trust for whom that property is held by the person who is the trustee. That combination must exist before you get the relation of trustee & cestui que trust (KEKEWICH, J.).—DOOBY v. WATSON (1888), 39 Ch. D. 178; 57 L. J. Ch. 805; 58 L. T. 943; 36 W. R. 764; 4 T. L. R. 584.

*Annotation:—*Reid. Hackney v. Knight (1891), 7 T. L. R. 254.

19. —.]—In order to constitute a man a trustee there must be a person or persons for whom he is a trustee—called cestui or cestuis que trust—& there must be property vested in him of which he is trustee for such person or persons (KEREWICH, J.).—Re BARNEY, BARNEY v. BARNEY, [1892] 2 Ch. 265; 61 L. J. Ch. 585; 67 L. T. 23; 40 W. R. 637.

SECT. 2.—EXPRESS AND IMPLIED TRUSTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—EXPRESS TRUSTS.

A. In General.

22. What is an express trust—Trust created by act of parties.—All trusts are either express trusts, which are raised & created by act of the parties, or implied trusts, which are raised or created by act or construction of law; again, express trusts are declared either by word or writing; & these declarations appear either by direct & manifest proof, or violent & necessary presumption. These last are commonly called presumptive trusts; & that is, when the ct., upon consideration of all circumstances presumes there was a declaration, either by word or writing, though the plain & direct proof thereof be not extant (RAYNSFORD, C.J.).—COOK v. FOUNTAIN (1870), 3 Swan. 585; 36 E. R. 984.

Annotation:—Mentd. Gloucester Corpn. v. Wood (1843), 3 Hare, 131.

23. — Trust created by express words—Oral or in writing—Presumptive trust.—COOK v. FOUNTAIN, No. 22, ante.

24. —.]—An express trust is a trust which has been expressed, either in writing or by word of mouth, & does not include a trust which arises from the acts of the parties. The term does not apply . . . to a resulting trust, to an implied trust, or to a constructive trust (FRY, J.).—SANDS v. THOMPSON (1883), 22 Ch. D. 614; 52 L. J. Ch. 406; 48 L. T. 210; 31 W. R. 397.

25. — Not by facts & circumstances.—FITZGERALD v. STEWART, No. 969, post.

26. — In will or other written instrument.— . . . Express trusts, that is trusts expressly declared by a deed or a will or some other written instrument (KINDERSELY, V.-C.).—PETRE v. PETRE (1853), 1 Drew. 371; 1 W. R. 139; 61 E. R. 403.

McCallum*, [1901] 1 Ch. 143.

27. —.]—CUNNINGHAM v. FOOT, No. 259, post.

28. —.]—I do not think that is an exhaustive definition of an express trust, namely, that it must be a trust expressly declared by a deed, will, or some other written instrument (KAY, J.).—BANNER v. BERRIDGE (1881), 18 Ch. D. 254; 50 L. J. Ch. 630; 44 L. T. 680; 29 W. R. 844; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 420.

SUB-SECT. 2.—IMPLIED TRUSTS.

See Sect. 14, post.

PART I. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

a. What is an express trust—Survivor of deceased's estate after payment of debts.—An administratrix, desiring to borrow money in order to pay off certain mtgs. on a station belonging to the estate of deceased, & in order to carry on the business of the said station, applied to the ct. under Trustee Act, 1900, s. 45, for leave to mtge. the station. A question was referred to the full ct. to decide whether the administratrix was a constructive trustee under Trustee Act, 1900:—Held: the administratrix was an express trustee for the next-of-kin as regards the surplus of the estate after payment of debts, & was therefore, a trustee under Trustee Act, 1900.—Re MATTHEWS (1915), 17 W. A. L. R. 61.—AUS.

b. — Trust for specific purpose.—Testator bequeathed his personal estate to his extrix. & exors., in trust for the purposes of his will, & he gave to them, in the quality of trustees, for the use of his son for life, & after his death for the use of his son's children, or child, if there should be but one, "the sum of £1,500, due to me by C. & secured by a certain mtge." etc.:—Held: the legatee was entitled to claim more than six years' arrears of interest, the trust being express, & the statute therefore not applying to the case.—LORING v. LORING (1866), 12 Gr. 374.—CAN.

g. Trusts of a general nature.—The words "in trust for a specific purpose" are intended to apply to trusts created for some defined or particular purpose or object as distinguished from trusts of a general nature such as the law impresses upon exors. & others who hold recognised fiduciary positions.—GRENDER CHUNDER GHOSH v. MACKINTOSH (1879), 1 L. R. 4 Cal. 897; 4 C. L. R. 193.—IND.

44. —.]—A. asked B. to go with him to an auction of a house which he wished to buy, & "be his friend." At the auction a verbal agreement was come to between them that B. should bid, so that A. might become the purchaser. The house was knocked down to B., who paid the deposit, & procured the conveyance of the house to himself. In an action by A. against B. to have it declared that B. was his agent & trustee, & should reconvey the house to him, B. denied the agency, & pleaded Stat. Frauds, s. 4.

After the reply to A.'s counsel B. sought leave to amend by pleading sect. 7, which had been mainly relied upon in argument:—Held: although by sect. 4 an agency might be established by parol, sect. 7 applied, by which all declarations of trusts of lands, tenements, etc., must be proved by some writing, but, as sect. 7 had not been pleaded, & could not be added by amendment at so late a stage, it was not available as a defence.—JAMES v. 57. —.]—A husband may constitute himself a trustee for his wife; the declaration need not be in writing but the words must be clear, unequivocal & irrevocable.

The question here is, whether the husband has used words which are equivalent to a declaration of trust. . . . These words need not be in writing. . . . They must be clear, unequivocal & irrevocable, but it is not necessary to use any technical words; it is not necessary to say, "I hold the property in trust for you," nor is it necessary to say, "I hold the same for your separate use." Any words that show that the donor means, at the time he speaks, to divest himself of all beneficial interest in the property are, in my opinion, sufficient for the purpose of creating the trust (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*GRANT v. (c) Effect of Fraud.

See, generally, CONTRACT, Vol. XII., pp. 167, 168.

61. Statute cannot be used to cover fraud.—Stat. Frauds cannot be used by deft. to cover a fraudulent act. Pltf. conveyed an estate to deft. by a deed, in which the conveyance was expressed to be absolute in consideration of a sum of money paid by deft.; but no purchase-money actually passed, & pltf. alleged that he conveyed the estate to deft. as a trustee for him. Deft. in his answer admitted that he gave no consideration for the estate, but stated that pltf. made the conveyance fearing that an adverse decision would be made against him in a suit then pending in Chancery; & that it was understood that deft. should account to pltf. for the rents until he could make arrangements for paying the purchase-money, & if no such arrangements could be made, that he should reconvey the estate. Deft. claimed to hold the estate discharged of any trust, & claimed the benefit of Stat. Frauds :—Held : Stat. Frauds could not be pleaded in answer to pltf.'s claim; & as the evidence did not establish the existence of any such agreement as was alleged by deft., deft. must reconvey the estate to pltf.—*HAIGH v. The deed was in form an absolute assignment. The Duke subsequently mortgaged the house for the purpose of raising money to pay his debts. The Duchess joined with the Duke in covenanting to pay the mtge. debt, but the equity of redemption was reserved to the Duke alone. Upon the death of the Duke in 1892, the Duchess claimed to be entitled to the house subject to the mtge. There was evidence that she had assigned the house to the Duke solely to enable him to mtge. it in his own name, & that it was part of the arrangement between them that he should re-assign to her, which, if he had lived, he would have done :—Held : the case fell within the authorities which forbid Stat. Frauds to be used to cover what would amount to a fraud, & consequently the Statute could not be successfully pleaded in opposition to the claim of the Duchess.—Re MARLBOROUGH (DUKE), *DAVIS v. B. Sufficiency of Writing.

See Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 53.

77. Writing showing existence & nature of trust.—When the ct. is called upon to establish or act upon a trust of lands, it must not only be manifested & proved by writing signed by the person by law enabled to declare the trust that there is a trust, but it must also be manifested & proved by writing signed as above what the trust is.—SMITH v. MATTHEWS, Re MATTHEWS'S SETTLEMENT (1861), 3 De G. F. & J. 139; 30 L. J. Ch. 445; 4 L. T. 206; 7 Jur. N. S. 378; 9 W. R. 644; 45 E. R. 831, 1 L. J.

79. — Beneficial owner only.—Where lands are held in trust, the declaration of trust, required by Stat. Frauds, s. 7, to be signed "by the party who is, by law, enabled to declare such trust," must be signed by the beneficial owner, & not by the trustee who has the legal estate.—TIERNY v. WOOD (1854), 19 Beav. 330; 23 L. J. Ch. 895; 23 L. T. O. S. 266; 2 W. R. 577; 52 E. R. 377.

80. — — — — ——*When the legal estate in land is vested in a trustee for an absolute beneficial owner, "the party who is by law enabled to declare a trust" of the land, within Stat. Frauds, s. 7, is the beneficial owner only. The absolute beneficial owner of land vested in a trustee wrote a letter to the mother of her infant grandson. The letter was signed with the writer's initials. Inclosed in the same envelope, but on a separate piece of paper, was another document in the handwriting of the same person, & headed "Supplement." This document was not signed in any way. It commenced thus, "I had quite omitted to tell you," but it contained no other reference to the letter, & the letter in no way referred to it. It was alleged that the "supplement" contained a declaration of trust of the land in favour of the infant:—Held: the "supplement" was not signed so as to satisfy the statute.—KRONHEIM v. JOHNSON (1877), 7 Ch. D. 60; 47 L. J. Ch. 132; 37 L. T. 751; 20 W. R. 142.*

81. — Unsigned supplement to letter—Not referred to in letter.—KRONHEIM v. JOHNSON, No. 80, ante.

82. — Fee simple of intended wife—Agreement before marriage—Signature by intended husband.—In order that the fee simple of an intended wife may be affected with a trust for her separate use by an agreement made between the intended husband & wife before marriage, the agreement must be in writing & signed by the wife as well as by the husband: if it is signed by the husband alone, it is, owing to Stat. Frauds, s. 7, invalid as a declaration of trust for separate use as to the fee simple.—DYE v. DYE (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 147; 53 L. J. Q. B. 442; 51 L. T. 145; 33 W. R. 2, C. A.

83. Declaration of trust—After death of beneficiary.—A., as freeman of London, purchases in the name of B. but no trust declared; A. dies, & B. gives a declaration of trust; this is good against the custom. Evidence of a trust where an estate is purchased in another's name.

The strength of the evidence was, that this purchase made in the life of A. in the names of E. & his clerk, was in trust for A. However, it plainly appearing, upon the evidence on both sides, that the consideration-money of this purchase was the proper money of A., had it not been for Stat. Frauds, this would have made a resulting trust; & the said E., after the death of A. executing the declaration of trust, this plainly took it out of the statute. . . . The declaration given by E. was evidence of the trust (LORD COWPER, C.).—AMBROSE v. AMBROSE (1716), 1 P. Wms. 321; 24 E. R. 407, L. C.

84. Letter—By party against whom trust established.—A. agrees for a beneficial lease of forty-one years, B. advances money towards paying the fine, etc., & the lease is taken in B.'s name, without any declaration of trust:—Held: (1) B. was a trustee for A., & upon being paid the money he advanced, with interest, should assign the lease to A. account with him for the profits, & pay him his costs; (2) the trust being proved by letters of B.'s own handwriting, this case was not within Stat. Frauds.—O'HARA v. O'NEILL (1717), 7 Bro. Parl. Cas. 226; 3 E. R. 148.

86. — Parol evidence of circumstances of writing.—A person who occupied a large farm as tenant under a lease fell into difficulties & surrendered his lease to his landlord. The tenant had, by means of his private expenditure, increased the value of the property by about the rate of £100 per annum. The brother of the tenant's wife then applied to the landlord to become tenant of the farm for the residue of the term, at the rent & under the covenants comprised in the surrendered lease. This application was made by letter, in which the writer stated it to be his wish to be of use to his unfortunate sister & her young family, & spoke of his disinterested motives. The application was acceded to by the landlord with the sole view, as he stated in his evidence, of benefiting the sister & her family. By a subsequent arrangement it was agreed that a third person should be joined as lessee with the brother, who should manage the bulk of the property, & give the brother £55 per annum for his occupation, the brother underletting the residue of the property. In his letters respecting this arrangement the brother expressed himself as having taken the farms with no selfish motives, but from a wish to assist his sister & her unfortunate family. This arrangement was acted upon until the brother's death; the brother for some years receiving the £55, which was secured to him by the bond of his co-lessee, & underletting the residue of the premises at £45 per annum:—Held: by means of the letters, which the ct. considered to be a sufficient manifestation in writing within Stat. Frauds, aided by parol evidence of the circumstances under which they were written, a trust was created of the annual sums of £55 & £45 in favour of the sister & her children.—*MORTON v. 87. — Partial evidence of trust.]—(1) Prior to 1873 pltf., a married woman, was owner of certain estates in Ceylon subject to a considerable mtge. In 1873 the mtgees. sold & conveyed the estates to deft., who, without the privity of pltf., raised large sums by mtge. of them, & afterwards became bkpt. in 1879, & obtained his discharge in 1880. The estates were afterwards sold by the mtgees. Pltf.'s case was that deft. had purchased the estates as trustee for her subject to a lien for his advances. In 1880 deft.'s trustee in bkpcy. repudiated pltf.'s title. Deft. never expressly did so, & pltf. never gave either of them to understand that she had given up her claim; but she took no active steps to assert it till 1894, when she commenced an action against deft. asking for a declaration that deft. purchased as a trustee for her, & for an account of his dealings with the property, & payment of what should be found due from him. Deft. pleaded—(a) that the estates were conveyed to him as beneficial owner; (b) that the trust alleged by pltf. was not evidenced by any writing signed by deft., & that Stat. Frauds was a defence; (c) that pltf.'s claim, if proved, was barred by deft.'s bkpcy.; by the Statutes of Limitations; by laches & delay. The judge held that no trust was proved, & dismissed the action on the first ground. The Ct. of Appeal, being of opinion that the evidence, which partly consisted of letters signed by deft., completely proved that deft. purchased as a trustee for pltf. & held the estates as such trustee subject to a lien for his expenditure:—Held: even if the letters signed by the deft. did not contain enough to satisfy s. 7 of the Stat. Frauds, parol evidence was admissible; & as the whole of the evidence taken together established that deft. had purchased as a trustee, pltf. was entitled to a decree.

(2) Stat. Frauds does not prevent proof of a fraud, & it is a fraud for a person to whom land is conveyed as a trustee, & who knows it was so conveyed, to deny the trust & claim the land as his own. Therefore a person claiming land conveyed to another may prove by parol evidence that it was so conveyed on trust for claimant, & may obtain a declaration that the grantee is a trustee for him.—*ROCHEFOUCAULD v. 94. —————.]—A trust may well be created in the absence of any expression importing confidence; & the obligation on the surviving partner created by the partnership articles, with reference to the legal interest in the partnership, did not in substance differ from a trust, & therefore the articles of partnership created a trust in favour of the wife, to arise on the death of testator leaving a widow surviving, which would attach on the property as it should then exist.

In cases of this nature the ct. is to regard the substance & effect & not the mere form of the instrument, & that a trust may well be created although there may be an absence of any expression in terms importing confidence (TURNER, V.-C.).—PAGE v. COX (1852), 10 Hare, 163; 68 E. R. 882.

He subsequently acted, in respect of a portion of the property, according to the intention thus expressed; & with the assent of the other children, & at a valuation approved by them, he became the purchaser of a house & premises, part of the estate:—Held: with regard to the property which remained undivided, the expressions of the devisee were no more than a promise to give & divide it amongst the brothers & sisters, & as such promise it was nudum pactum, & did not amount to a declaration of trust in their favour.

I agree that it is not necessary that the precise words "trust" or "confidence" should be used in order to make a trust, & that any expressions will suffice from which it is clear that the party using them considers himself a trustee & adopts that character (PAGE WOOD, V.-C.).—DIPPLE v. The stock remained untransferred, & the £8,000 continued at his banker's, in settlor's name, until his decease twelve days afterwards:—Held: the trusts of the voluntary settlement were effectually fastened upon both the Consols & money. —*AIREY v. F. accepted the trust, but the deeds remained in the custody of the donor:—Held: notwithstanding the retention of them by the donor, a valid trust was effectually created in favour of the donees. —*PARKER v. 117. Instructions as to separate account—"Subject to my control alone."—C., M., & J. in 1829 mortgaged certain estates & plantations, of which they were joint owners in equal shares, to F. & co. of Bombay, as a security for advances with interest, the repayment being further secured by the joint & several covenants of C., M., & J. The estates were for a long time not cultivated to a profit. In 1830 the firm of F. & co. was reduced to two partners only, C. & J. In 1836 the interest charged in the books of F. & co., in account with the proprietors of the estates, was directed to be divided under two heads, one being carried to an account called "reserved interest account" & the amount of the balance of this account was to be held subject to the instructions of C. Both the partners concurred in these directions thus given to F. & co. In 1837 both the partners concurred in another letter to F. & co. of Bombay, directing that as to the portion of the interest thus passed to the "reserved interest account" part of it should be carried to a new account to be intituled "C. for himself, M., & J.," & in such letter it was further directed that the balance of such new account was to be subject to the control of C. alone, & that in the absence of other instructions from C., it was to be applicable towards the liquidation of the account of the proprietors of the estates in question, for which the three proprietors, C., M., & J. were responsible. In 1839 M. died. In 1840 estates sold for more than enough to liquidate all demands of the mtgees. In 1841 C., with the concurrence of J., directed one-third of the balance at the credit of the account "C. for himself, M., & J." to be paid to himself another third to J. & the remaining one-third to be retained subject to the future instructions of C. In 1843 C., with the like concurrence of J., directed F. & co. of Bombay to remit the remaining one-third to London subject to his orders, & stated his intention to be to hand it over to the family of the late Mr. M. in such manner as he might think proper. The fund was accordingly remitted to F. & co. of London "subject to the orders of C." & so remained up to the decease of C. C. died in 1849, without having ever made any further disposition of the fund. On a bill by the widow & extrix. of M.:—Held: (1) by the letter of 1836 there was no declaration of trust or other clear appropriation of the fund, for the benefit of C., M., & J. in equal shares, which would have entitled M. to file a bill for his share; (2) by the letter of 1837 there was no declaration of trust, or clear expression of intention which would enable the family of M. to make a claim.

Semble: the expressions enabling C. to retain the control over the balance of this account, though used with the full knowledge of J., would not authorise C. to appropriate the whole balance to his own use, irrespective of the rights of J.

Semble: the letter of 1836 did not amount to a declaration of trust in favour of C., M., & J. generally with a power of revocation & new appointment in C. but rather to a contingent declaration in favour of C., M., & J. in one event only, viz. a deficiency on a realisation of the estates; & there being portation for life, presented a petition in the revenue ct. in which, stating that he owned a certain zamindari estate, that he had been so sentenced & that it was necessary to make arrangements for the payment of the Govt. revenue & the management of the estate, he prayed that his name might be removed from the revenue registers, & that of P. be recorded in its stead:—Held: the transfer of the property by B. to P. was in the nature of a trust. —*HARRAM v. 118. — Series of letters—Fund remaining in control of settlor.]—A. V., a merchant in China, directed his correspondents in London to transfer £1,000 from his tea account, & employ it in exchange transactions for the benefit of his children. In subsequent letters he wrote to the same correspondents "that he had declined giving any opinion as to the reinvestment of the fund, as he considered he had no further control over it, as it belonged to his children," "that he had appropriated it to them, & his correspondents were to consider it as theirs." The correspondents accordingly opened a separate account, headed "A. V., Esq., exchange account on account of children," previously informing him of their intention so to do:—Held: by the first letter a trust was well created in favour of the children, although the fund was still so far in the control of A. V. as to be liable to his drawing: & notwithstanding A. V., in one of the letters, had desired his correspondents to consider it as "subject to the order of his exors." in the event of his death.—VANDENBERG v. PALMER (1858), 4 K. & J. 204; 32 L. T. O. M. by his will, & by a codicil thereto bequeathed to him a stud of horses & a sum of £10,000 in terms importing an absolute gift which he, testator, declared to be "in addition to all the benefits given to him by my will." But by a letter addressed to & duly received & answered by A. M., testator stated that he had left a letter with his solr. expressing a wish that the sum of £10,000 which he described as left for that purpose, should be settled on H. M. & F. M. for their joint use in the event of their intermarrying. No such letter was left with his solr. or any one else:—Held: that the £10,000 was bequeathed upon trust, & A. M. could not in any event take it beneficially.—BAILLIE v. WALLACE (1869), 17 W. R. 221.

120. M. & her children":—Held: a valid trust was declared by the letter in favour of C. M. for life, & afterwards of her children as joint tenants.—Re BELIASIS' TRUST (1871), L. R. 12 Eq. 218; 24 L. 122. Sum entered to "trustee account"—As "private property" of beneficiary.]—W. E., a partner in the firm of S., E. & co., previously to Apr. 1854, advanced to the firm certain moneys, some of which were standing in the books to the credit of an account intitled "W. E.'s Trustee Account," & others to his private account. Defts. M. & C. F. had in that month certain sums belonging to them standing in the books of the firm to their credit. On Apr. 1854, W. E. transferred a sum of £2,700 from his trustee account to M. & C. F.'s account, by entries in the books of the firm, & on the same day, S., E. & co. signed a promissory note for that amount, which bore interest at 5 per cent., & gave it to W. E., who placed it in an envelope, upon which he wrote, "This note of hand stands to the credit of M. & C. F. in the books of S., E. & co., & is to be the property of Mrs. E." W. E. in the presence of Mrs. E., told M. F. that he had got a security from his firm for his wife's money; that the note of hand securing it was in the joint names of her & her sister C. F., & that they were to recollect that it was his wife's money, & not theirs. W. E., in Sept. 1854, without the knowledge or consent of pltf. or of M. & C. F., transferred the said sum from M. & C. F.'s account to his own "trustee account" & at the same time wrote across the above memorandum, "The within amount of £2,700 is transferred to W. E.'s trustee account, but it is to be considered the private property of Mrs. E." W. E., by his will dated in June, 1853, after bequeathing an annuity to his wife of £1,000, gave the residue of his estate to his niece. No reference was made to the £2,700. W. E. died in 1856, & at his decease only £2,661 18s. 6d. was standing to the credit of his "trustee account" in the partnership books. On bill filed by Mrs. E., the ct. declared that a valid trust had been created for her sole & separate use, & that she was entitled to the sum of £2,700, with interest at 5 per cent. from the death of her husband.—*EVANS v. 123. Appropriation of future proceeds of annuity.]—Testator entered in a memorandum book, & signed a memorandum, that he had decided to invest the future proceeds of an annuity which had been absolutely assigned to him by his second son F., & that he intended to leave the proceeds at his death to F.'s daughter.

An account, also in testator's handwriting, was found of the investments of the annuity "from the period that I determined thus to appropriate this money."

On his death bed testator referred his eldest son to the account book, & said that he wished the accumulations to be given to the daughter of F., & the annuity at his death to revert to F. The annuity & accumulations were undisposed of by the will:—Held: there was no declaration of trust, & the annuity & accumulations went to the next of kin.—Re GLOVER (1862), 2 John. & H. 186; 70 E. tained to pay outstanding legacies—Payment of interest by executor.]—T. G. by his will, bequeathed a legacy of £500 to W. G. to be paid after the death of testator's wife. Testator died in 1863, & a residuary account was passed then, & also on the death of the widow in 1875. The account contained, on both occasions, the item "Retained to pay outstanding legacies to William Glover, £500." Deft., the acting exor., became trustee of a marriage settlement which comprised the £500, & continued to pay interest on the sum of £500 to the beneficiary until 1884, when he, for the first time alleged insufficient assets & declined to continue such payment:—Held: the item in the residuary account, coupled with the continued payment of interest, was equivalent to a declaration of trust, & the exor. could not now, in an action to make him liable for the £500, be permitted to adduce evidence to show that the residuary account was erroneous.—*BREWSTER v. B. apparently thinking there was an intestacy as to the residue in the residuary account prepared for the revenue authorities, declared it was correct, & offered to pay duty on a certain sum as "being the said residue & moneys to which I am entitled, & intend to retain to my own use & for the use of J., being a sister & a descendant of a brother of deceased":—Held: B. had not thereby declared a trust of the residue for J. so as to prevent Stat. GOMPERTZ* (1910), 55 Sol. Jo. 76.

128. — [The mere fact that an exor., who is not also appointed a trustee by the will, retains a fund to answer the claim of a particular next of kin, is not enough to turn the exor. into an express trustee of the fund, but if, in addition, he earmarks the fund as the fund of the particular next of kin & uses express words which show that he intends to hold the fund not for himself but for persons entitled to it, he does become an express trustee of the fund.—Re GOMPERTZ,

PARKEN v. GOMPERTZ (1911), 105 L. T. 664; 56 Sol. Jo. 11.

129. Private accounts of defaulting trustee—Pencil entry.—In all cases where it is alleged that a defaulting trustee has appropriated securities to make good his breaches of trust, & a declaration of trust is relied on, the ct. must be satisfied that a present irrevocable declaration has been made.

The ct. refused to accept as evidence of such a declaration of trust pencil entries in private accounts kept by the defaulting trustee never communicated to any one, & which in some cases appeared to have been altered.

Semble: the absence of communication in itself raises a strong inference against an intention to make the appropriation irrevocable.—Re COZENS, GREEN v. BRISLEY, [1913] 2 Ch. 478; 82 L. J. Ch. 421; 109 L. T. 306; 57 Sol. Jo. 687.

Solr. died insolvent & the trustees now claimed to redeem the mtge.:—Held: they were entitled to do so, the declaration not being revocable & not being void under either 13 Eliz. c. 5, or Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1914 (c. 47), s. 1.—*RADCLIFFE v. The next day she instructed her solrs., by letter, to prepare the mtge., inclosing a cheque for the amount, on the counterfoil of which she wrote, "In trust for M." Twelve days after she had an interview with T., of which she entered this memorandum in her diary: "T. came, & agreed to take charge of £1,800 for dear M." :—Held: the above several documents in the handwriting of C., combined with the relationship & adoption of M., constituted a complete & final declaration of trust in favour of M., which could not admit of any parol variation by T.'s present recollections of what passed at the interview.—Re CANE'S TRUSTS (1867), 36 L. 140. Indorsement on envelope containing bonds.]—Deft., an illiterate woman, having wrongfully possessed herself of certain bonds belonging to the estate of testator, whose exor. pltf. was, was ordered to repay the proceeds of the sale of the bonds, although there was much doubt as to the equitable jurisdiction of the ct. in such a case.

It was alleged by the deft. that testator, by whom she had several illegitimate children, had shown her an envelope containing the bonds & bearing an indorsement to the effect that they were to be delivered to her as the property of her & her children. The envelope was lost, & testator had always retained possession of the bonds:—Held: there was some foundation of truth in the story of deft., though uncorroborated, & such an indorsement would have created a trust for her & her children, which, though a slight equity, might give the ct. jurisdiction.—*INGLIS v. B. invested the produce, together with £1,000 of his own moneys, in the funds in his own name, & afterwards treated & admitted the aggregate fund as held in trust for his daughters. On the death of B. the fund was found mixed with like funds of his own:—Held: under the circumstances, there was sufficient to constitute a trust of the £1,000 in favour of the daughters.—*THORPE v. 142. — Intention of testator to give further sum—Intention effectuated by trustee.]—Testatrix gave to A. & B., in trust for the benefit of C., her sister, a sum of £2,000 3 per cent. Consols. She afterwards expressed to B., whom she also appointed her extrix., an intention that C. should have a further sum of £2,000 Consols, but she did not alter her will. A. died in her lifetime: after her death B., the surviving trustee & extrix., sold £2,000 consols, & invested the produce in her name in the 3 per cent. Reduced, & shortly afterwards she invested a further sum of £2,000 3 per cent. Reduced in her name: she was proved to have declared frequently her intention of carrying out testatrix's intention:—Held: the second sum of stock was duly impressed with a trust in favour of C.—*GRAY v. others, that if no child of the marriage, the property to be disposed of by C. by will; if no disposition by her will, to go to her next of kin. This paper was signed by A. & C., but nothing further done by way of settlement. Soon after the marriage C. died intestate, without having had a child:—Held: A., who had taken out administration to C., & possessed himself of her property, in which was included a reversionary interest, was entitled to it for his own benefit, no declaration of trust in favour of the next of kin having been created by this agreement to execute a future instrument.—*POWELL v. The trustee accepted the new trust, & acted upon the deed:—Held: there was a valid executed trust created, which A. could not revoke.—RYCROFT v. CHRISTY (1840), 3 Beav. 238; 4 Jur. 599; 49 E. 149. Instructions to donee of cheque—To apply part in increase of legacy—Legacy given to another—No alteration in will.—Testatrix drew a cheque on her bankers for £150 in favour of A., & she verbally directed A. to apply that sum or so much of it as might be necessary to make up to a legatee the difference in value between a legacy of £100, which testatrix, by her will, had given to the legatee, & the price of a £100 share in a certain railway; testatrix informing A. that she intended to give the share instead of the legacy, but she did not think it necessary to alter her will. The bankers gave credit to A. for the £150. Testatrix afterwards died. In a suit for the administration of her estate:—Held: no trust in respect of the £150 was created for the benefit of the legatee.—HUGHES v. STUBBS (1842), 1 Harc. 476; 6 Jur. 831; 60 E. R. 1119.

Direction to invest in joint names—With express declaration of trust—Notice of bank's refusal of trust.—A. directed his agents to invest part of his balance in their hands, in the purchase of £4,000 stock, in the names of himself & his wife, in trust for his infant son. The agents made the purchase in the joint names; but without any trust expressed, because, as they afterwards informed A., the bank objected to trust accounts appearing on their books. A. allowed the stock to remain without any trust being declared, & received the dividends of it down to his decease:—Held: neither his son nor his wife, who survived him, were entitled to the stock, but it formed part of his assets.—*SMITH v. The interest was not duly paid:—Held: ptfs. were trustees of the money for an unascertained class of individuals, & they could not be called upon to ascertain, at their own risk & expense, who was included in that class; & therefore deft., who claimed to be an unsatisfied bondholder, & had in that character commenced his action against ptfs. for part of the £5,000, was restrained by injunction.—Seem: the trust was so clear in its creation that the £5,000 might in that respect have been brought into ct. under Trustee Relief Act, 1847 (c. 96).—*HANKEY v. 154. Purchase of stock in name of another—Accompanied by declaration to beneficiary.—A married woman, out of the savings of her separate estate, purchased stock in the name of a niece, & told the niece by letter that it was her intention that the stock should be for the niece herself, but took from the niece a power of attorney to receive the dividends & sell the stock:—Held: on the death of the aunt, the niece was entitled to the stock.—*BEECHER v. 156. Payment of instalment of annuity—By consignee.—Where a consignee undertakes with his consignor to make certain payments mentioned, to creditors of the consignor out of the produce of property consigned to him from abroad, & in pursuance pays an annuity to one of the creditors named, a trust is created by such payment in favour of the annuitant, & the consignee cannot afterwards discontinue such payment, so long as he has any proceeds of consignments in his hands.

An annuity, though from its nature payable by instalments is, nevertheless, an entire sum; & a payment of one instalment under the above circumstances creates a trust which a ct. of equity will enforce in favour of a stranger.—*KIRWAN v. 157. Payment of interest by executor—On greater sum than sum bequeathed.—Belief in testator's intention to give larger sum.]—Testator bequeathed £2,000 on certain trusts, & he empowered his exor., who was also his residuary legatee, to retain the amount in his hands uninvested, he paying interest thereon. After testator's death, the exor., being satisfied that testator intended to bequeath £3,000, & not £2,000, promised to make it up £3,000; he made no investment, but continued to pay interest on the £3,000 to his death:—Held: there was a complete voluntary trust as to the additional £1,000, which this ct. would enforce.—GEE v. LIDDELL (No. 1) (1866), 35 Beav. 621; 55 E. R. 1038.

158. Provision in partnership deed.—For securing annuity to third party.]—Testator by his will gave his property in a certain newspaper in trust, out of the residue of the profits thereof to pay an annuity to his daughter for life. By a deed, to which the daughter was not a party, made upon the introduction of a new partner, it was agreed that a certain proportion of the profits should be annually set apart with a view to forming a capital fund of £1,000 for the purpose of answering the said annuity, whereby the partnership property would be cleared of the same; & certain sums were so set apart accordingly:—Held: the relationship of trustee & cestui que trust was created by the above deed, & the daughter was entitled to the £1,000.—BURTON v. JACKSON (1856), 26 L. T. O. S. 321; 2 Jur. N. S. 224; 4 W. R. 271.

159. Approval of draft trust instrument.]—Upon evidence that a married woman desiring to execute a voluntary settlement transferred stock to which she was entitled for her separate use into the names of trustees, & approved of a draft declaration of trust:—Held: there was a locus penitentie & the trusts did not attach, unless the draft had been finally authorised before the transfer to the trustees.—Re SYKES' TRUSTS (1862), 2 John & H. 415; 6 L. 160. Direction by holder of promissory note.—Interest & principal payable to named persons.—Possession retained by holder.]—Testatrix, who had lent £300 to S. on his promissory note, payable on demand, directed him, after her death to pay the interest to her sister for her life, & afterwards to divide the principal among her sister's children, which S. agreed to do. Testatrix died without having demanded payment of the note, which was found uncanceled among her papers at her death:—Held: as testatrix had not parted with her legal title to the money, the direction did not create a trust.—Re CAPLEN'S ESTATE, BULBECK v. SILVESTER (1876), 45 L. J. Ch. 280.

161. Declaration by testator.—Variation of property bequeathed.]—Testator having varied or re-invested the proceeds of certain investments which had been specifically bequeathed by his will to his wife, made frequent declarations in his lifetime that the substituted property was or would be his wife's property after his death:—Held: this did not amount to a declaration of trust.—Re STALLON, STALLON v. STALLON (1907), 51 Sol. Jo. 628.

162. —.]—Settlor entered into a voluntary covenant in an indenture under seal to settle upon certain trusts any freehold properties, with one exception, that he should afterwards acquire in Kent, & that until such assurance should have been actually made he, his heirs, exors., & administrators "shall & will stand seised of all & any such after-acquired hereditaments upon such trusts & with & subject to such powers & provisions as last aforesaid." Settlor afterwards acquired four freeholds in Kent that came within the covenant. Settlor by his will, which was executed after the two first freeholds had been acquired by him, confirmed the settlement, & declared that the benefits under the will were to be in addition to those under the settlement. After acquiring the last two freeholds testator executed two codicils, in each of which he confirmed his will.—Held: by confirming the settlement in his will & directing that the benefits under the settlement & will should be cumulative, testator had declared in his lifetime that the trustees of the settlement were entitled to the first two freeholds, & that he, testator, held them on the trusts of the settlement & by confirming his will in the two codicils he republished his will at the dates of the codicils, & so made the same declaration with regard to the two freeholds last acquired, & that therefore the exors. of the will were entitled to assure to the present trustees of the settlement the freeholds aforesaid.—Re NORTHCLIFFE, ARNHOLZ v. HUDSON, [1925] Ch. 651; 95 L. J. Ch. 41; 133 L. T. 460.

163. Letter inviting subscriptions.—For gift to retiring employee.]—The Council of the Royal Botanic Society, upon the retirement of pltf., who was an old servant of the society, sent a circular to the members stating that, as the society was unable to provide a pension, it was thought that a purse of money would be the most acceptable gift, & Fellows & members of the society were invited to send donations to the secretary. A large sum of money was subscribed, & in view of that fact the council sent a circular to each of the subscribers suggesting that an annuity should be purchased for pltf. & his wife, & stating that unless they heard from the subscribers to the contrary they would assume that he approved of the proposal. A large majority of the subscribers did not reply, & the subscriptions of the dissenting subscribers were paid to pltf. Pltf. brought an action for an injunction to restrain the society from dealing or parting with the money except to pltf., or as he might direct:—Held: under the first circular there was a trust of the fund subscribed for the benefit of pltf., & he was entitled to have it paid over to him.—PARKES v. ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY OF LONDON (1908), 24 T. L. R. 508.

164. Recital in deed.—That person seised as trustee.]—An abstract of title delivered to a purchaser under a contract for sale of freeholds disclosed a recital in a partition deed that F., one of the parties thereto, was then seised of the freeholds in question & other hereditaments "as trustee partly for himself & partly for L., the other party to the deed, as he F. did thereby admit":—Held: the recital being clear & unambiguous in its terms & in itself a sufficient declaration of trust, the purchaser was not entitled to inquire how the trust was created.—Re CHAFFER & RANDALL'S CONTRACT, [1916] 2 Ch. 8; 85 L. 166. Must be clear & distinct.]—BENTLEY v. MACKAY, No. 112, ante.

167. —.]—(1) Where a person sets up a case of declaration of trust, the onus probandi is upon him, & the evidence must be clear & distinct; the ct. must determine according to the evidence on both sides, having special regard to the consideration on whom the burden of proof lies.

(2) A lady, having some money belonging to her in the hands of her son, drew a cheque upon him in favour of his wife. A few days afterwards she told him to take the cheque, & to invest the money for the benefit of his wife & children. He took it accordingly, & after his mother's death he invested the money in the names of himself & his wife:—Held: a valid trust of the £500 was constituted by the mother in favour of the son's wife & children.—ROBERTS v. ROBERTS (1886), 15 L. T. 260; 12 Jur. N. S. 971; 15 W. R. 117, L. JJ.

175. "Confidence"—Equivalent to trust.]—(1) Bequest "of all my property to my husband, hoping he will leave it after his death to my son, if he is worthy of it," accompanied by the following explanation: "My reason for leaving all I have to dispose of to my husband, & in his entire power, is, that my son is already certain of a fortune, & that I cannot now feel any certainty what sort of character he may become. I therefore leave it to my husband, in whose honour, justice, & parental affection I have the fullest confidence. If my son dies before my husband, though I leave all without reservation to my dear husband to dispose of as he thinks fit, yet should my son leave any children, I do not doubt it will go to them from him, knowing his steady principles, & clear judgment of right & wrong, & his sense of justice"—Held: not to create a trust.

(2) The word "confidence" was the old name for trust, & may now by virtue of the context be of the same efficacy as the word "trust" (STUART, V.-C.).—EATON v. WATTS (1867), L. R. 4 Eq. 151; 16 L. T. 311.

176. "Trust"—Does not necessarily create obligation—Construction as recommendation.]—A ct. of equity will look at the circumstances existing at the date of a will, & if necessary, construe words importing a trust, as an expression of hope or confidence.

Testator devised real estate in the Isle of Man, consisting of a farm, to his wife for life, & after her death to D. "in trust for his son being brought up to work the farm," with a gift over in the event of D. having no male issue. D. had no male issue at the date of the will, but had a son born after testator's death:—Held: under the will, D.'s son did not take any beneficial interest in the real estate, the words "in trust for his son being brought up to work the farm," being a mere recommendation or expression of hope or confidence, that his oldest or only son should be brought up to work the farm.—QUAYLE v. DAVIDSON (1858), 12 Moo. P. C. C. 268; 32 L. T. O. S. 362; 7 W. R. 164; 14 E. R. 913, P. C.

177. ——— Crown & public officers—"In trust for."—Now the words "in trust for" "are quite consistent with, & indeed are the proper manner of expressing, every species of trust . . . a trust not only as regards those matters which are the proper subjects for an equitable jurisdiction to administer, but as respects higher matters, such as might take place between the Crown & public officers discharging, under the directions of the Crown, duties or functions belonging to the prerogative & to the authority of the Crown. In the lower sense they are matters within the jurisdiction of, & to be administered by, the ordinary cts. of equity; in the higher sense they are not. What their sense is here is the question to be determined, looking at the whole instrument & at its nature & effect" (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—KINLOCH v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1882), 7 App. Cas. 619; 51 L. 178. ——— Unascertained class.]—The expression "to be held in trust" for a definite class of persons is not always sufficient to create an equitable right or obligation which can be enforced by legal proceedings.

The idea that the grantees were to hold in trust for an unascertained & practically unascertainable class of natives who were loyal in the old rebellion, or who came in & submitted within a reasonable time after Jan. 12, 1867, appears to their lordships too extravagant to require serious comment (per CUR.).—TE TEIRA TE PAEA v. TE ROERA TAREHA, [1902] A. 197. ———— Entire & implied confidence—Provision for children.]—W. devised & bequeathed all his real & personal estate unto his wife C. & her heirs, etc., absolutely for ever, “entertaining as he did the most entire & implicit confidence that she would, during her life, appropriate same, or the would thoroughly accord with his wishes on the subject, with all of which she was perfectly acquainted. There was some evidence of testator having communicated some wishes to his wife, but none as to what they were:—Held: the terms of the gift, to the wife did not amount to a precatory trust, & she took the property, both real & personal absolutely.—Reid v. ATKINSON (1871), 5 I. R. Eq. 373.—IR.

m. ———— Every confidence.]—Testatrix left all her property to deff. “to be disposed of by him as to him might appear just, having every confidence he would act fairly & in accordance with her wishes”: in a conversation between testatrix & deff., previously to the will, testatrix had said that she would leave her property to deff. “to be disposed of by him as to him might appear just, having every confidence he would act fairly & in accordance with her wishes”: in a conversation between testatrix & deff., previously to interest thereof, with maternal discretion, prudence, & economy, as well towards the maintenance, support, & liberal education of their children as towards the immediate support & maintenance of herself, & that she would bequeath so much & such part of his estate thereby devised to her, as might be by her judicious management preserved for their family, unto & equally between & amongst all & every their children who should be living at the time of the decease of C., & the lawful issue of such of them as should be then dead, in equal shares," etc. C. was appointed sole extrix. of the will & guardian of the children. W. died in Oct. 1826, leaving real & personal estate of large amount; & there remained, after payment of all the debts, etc., a considerable residue, which under the management & control of C. was increased in value, & became greatly augmented. Testator left five children & two granddaughters, the children of a daughter of testator who died in his lifetime, one of whom died an infant, & the other, A., was deft., him surviving. Subsequently, to testator's decease his eldest son died, leaving two sons him surviving. C., on the supposition that under the will of W. she took an absolute estate for her own benefit in the property thereby devised & bequeathed to her by her will, dated in Apr. 1856, devised & bequeathed the real & personal estate in manner therein-mentioned, for the benefit of her sons, daughter, granddaughter, A., & two grandsons. Questions having arisen as to whether the real & personal estate of W. became absolutely vested in C., & whether same was effectually disposed of by her will, this bill was filed by one of her sons:—Held: the widow did not take the property absolutely, the granddaughter, A., was under the will of W. entitled to a share of the property; & a granddaughter who died in the lifetime of the widow was not entitled to a share.—SMITH v. SMITH (1856), 2 Jur. N. S. 967.

198. — Every confidence — Provision for children & grandchildren.—Testator gave his residuary real & personal estate to his widow, "to & for her own sole use & benefit for ever, feeling assured & having every confidence that she will hereafter dispose of the same fairly, justly & equitably amongst my two daughters & their children," & he appointed her sole extrix. & residuary legatee:—Held: the widow took beneficially for life, with remainder to the two daughters & their children, as she should appoint.—GULLY v. CREGOE (1857), 24 Beav. 185; 53 E. R. 327.

199. — "Comply with my wish."—Testatrix by her will after giving & bequeathing several legacies, among others some for charitable purposes, proceeded as follows: "I give, demise & bequeath to T., deft., all my real estates both freehold & copyhold, in," etc., "& all the residue of my personal estate & effects, 'to hold to him, T., his heirs, exors., administrators & assigns for ever'; upon this express condition, that if my personal estate should be insufficient for the purpose that he or they do & shall, within twelve months after my decease pay & discharge all & every the legacies hereinafter bequeathed, & I feel confident that he will comply with my wish, it being my particular desire that all the above legacies shall be paid. I do hereby charge & make chargeable all my real & personal estate with the payment of the aforesaid legacies & bequests":—Held: these words did not show that testator intended to make a gift of an estate to deft. on a condition, of which the heir might take advantage by way of forfeiture, if deft. failed to perform it by paying the legacies within the twelve months; & the true construction was that they created a trust in deft., the performance of which was cognisable in a ct. of equity.—*WRIGHT v. 200. — "Act justly to our children."—(1) Testator gave to his widow the whole of his real & personal property "feeling confident that she will act justly to our children in dividing same when no longer required by her":—Held: the widow took an absolute interest, & the doctrine of precatory trusts did not apply.

Afterwards, on the same day, she executed a testamentary paper, which contained a list of a number of persons by name, & among others, the name of the person who was her sole next of kin, with the several sums to be given to them respectively, & concluded with a declaration that such was testatrix's wish:—Held: C. took the personal estate for his own use, absolutely, subject only to the payment of the legacies specified in the testamentary paper, & three other sums, which, by his answer, C. admitted that testatrix had directed him, & which he submitted, to pay.—*WOOD v. 206. —“I trust to the liberality of my successors.”—R. being entitled, under a settlement & will of his grandfather, to real estates in tail male, with remainders to his cousins in tail, with remainder to himself in fee as right heir of settlor, suffered a recovery, & acquired the fee simple. He had other estates in fee simple by purchase, & considerable personal estate. He by his will gave all his estates, real & personal, to his brother T., if living at his own decease, & if not, to T.'s son, T. the younger; & in case he should die before testator, to his eldest son or next descendant in the direct male line; & in case he should leave no such descendant, to the next male issue of his said brother & his next descendant in the direct male line; but in case no such issue or descendant of his brother or nephew should be living at the time of testator's decease, to the next descendant in the direct male line of his grandfather, according to the purport of his will, under which testator inherited those estates, subject in every case to certain reservations out of the rents; & he appointed the person who should inherit his estates under his will, his sole exor. “& trustee, to carry the same & everything contained therein duly into execution, confiding in the approved honour & integrity of his family to take no advantage of any technical inaccuracies, but to admit all the comparatively small reservations which he made out of so large a property, according to the plain & obvious meaning of his words.” He then, after giving some legacies, gave his gems & other articles to the British Museum, “on condition that the next descendant in the direct male line then living of his grandfather should be made an hereditary trustee, to be continued in perpetual succession to his next descendants in the direct male line.” & he concluded thus: “I trust to the liberality of my successors to reward any others of my old servants & tenants according to their deserts; & to their justice, in continuing the estates in the male succession, according to the will of the founder of the family, my above-named grandfather.”

T. survived testator, & died without leaving belonging to claimant, in his hands at the time of his death. By his will he left claimant a legacy of £2,500, concerning which he had written to her in the following terms not long before his death:—“Now I have willed you £2,500. I can surely trust you to give it to him, J. (an infant son of claimant).”—Held: the amount of the legacy should not be applied in satisany son:—Held: T. took the estates in fee, absolutely, & no trust was, or was intended to be, created by the will, a discretion being left to the devisees to defeat testator's expressed desire. Semble: the property to which the words of desire applied, & the nature of the estate to be taken in it, were not sufficiently certain to raise a trust.—*KNIGHT v. D. wrote down, after leaving testator, his wishes, but the paper was not submitted to or signed by him:—Held: D. took the residue of testator's estate beneficially, subject only to the performance of testator's wishes communicated to her, which were treated as legacies carrying interest at 4 per cent. from the expiration of one year from testator's death.

The will then recited the power of appointment contained in the settlement, & by virtue of that power testator appointed £10,000, part of the £35,000, to the same daughter; but his will was that the same should be paid to the trustees thereinbefore named with reference to the legacy of £150,000, & should be held by them upon the trusts thereinbefore declared thereof. so as thereby to carry out my wishes." After testator's death the son R. executed a declaration of trust of the £10,000 to carry out his father's wishes. There was no evidence, other than the will itself, of any bargain between the son & testator that the former would settle the £10,000 :—Held : the appointment of the £10,000 in favour of the daughter J. was invalid ; the £10,000 did not pass to the son under the appointment of the residue to him ; but, under the last appointment to him, there being only an expression of testator's wish, & no evidence of any bargain by the son that the fund should be settled, it passed to him absolutely, free from any obligation to settle it, & was, therefore, validly appointed.—*Re CRAWSHAY, CRAWSHAY v. B. Directions as to Employment of Particular Persons.

224. Appointment of sugar factor—"Recommend"—"My desire."—A. by will devises all his estates to his eldest son in tail male, with remainders over ; part of the property consisted of an estate in Jamaica, & therefore testator added the following clause : " & I recommend to my exors., that all sugars, rum, & other plantation produce that is sent to the Port of London, be consigned to the house of C., E. & co. until such time as any of my sons shall set up in the business of a sugar factor ; then my desire is, that the consignments may pass through his or their hands." C., a natural son of testator's, set up the business of a sugar factor, during the minority of the devisee, & accordingly got the consignments. Upon the devisee's coming of age, C. accounted with him, but insisted on being entitled to his commission not only upon the produce which he had actually sold, but also upon the produce which had been consigned to him, but was not then arrived in the Port of London :—Held : the words of the above clause were not imperative, or amounted to words of bequest in favour of C. but were recommendatory only.—*BECKFORD v. 232.—"Maintain" until shares assignable.—Testatrix, under a power given by her marriage settlement, bequeathed a sum of stock to trustees in trust to pay the interest to her husband, in order the better to enable him to maintain the children of the marriage until their shares should become assignable to them ; & if no children, or none that should live till their shares became assignable, she gave the interest of the fund to her husband for his life, & after his decease the principal to such person or persons as should be her next of kin. There was only one child of the marriage :—Held : this bequest was a trust for the benefit of the child, until the principal should become assignable to the child, & gave no beneficial interest so as to entitle trustees for creditors, to whom the husband had assigned all his personal property, to claim the income or any part of it.—*WETHERELL v. my extrix." Some of the children were adults, others infants, at the time of testator's death :—Held : by the terms, "universal heir" & "legacy" testator referred to the whole residue of his estate real & personal after payment of his debts & funeral expenses ; & the children were clearly pointed out as the objects of the gift along with the wife so as to create a trust in their

233. — “Manage & appropriate in the best manner” — “Welfare of her family.”]—Testator bequeaths the whole of his property to C., the wife of his elder brother, “for her to manage & appropriate in the best manner for the welfare of her family.” He then mentions that he makes this disposition on account of the exceedingly embarrassed circumstances of his elder brother which might leave nothing for his family; to obviate which testator adds, that all his property is to be placed in trustees’ hands, for C.’s sole & separate use:—Held: there was no trust for the children of the elder brother, & C. was entitled to the fund absolutely.—CRAWFURD v. CRAWFURD (1825), 3 L. J. O. S. Ch. 105.

234. — Dispose for benefit of donee & children — “As to her shall seem meet.”]—Testator devised his real estate to his wife, “for her own sole & separate use, to dispose of as she should think proper,” & out of his real & personal estate to provide for his children in such manner as to her should seem meet”:—Held: the widow had power to sell the real estate.—PRATT v. CHURCH (1830), 4 Beav. 177, n.; 49 E. R. 307.

235. — “As donee deem most advantageous — Effect of relationship.”]—(1) A., by his will, gives all his moneys, etc., to his wife, “to the intent that she may dispose of same for the benefit of herself & our children, in such manner as she may deem most advantageous,” & appointed his wife executrix. Semble: the wife does not take an absolute interest in the fund, but there is a trust for the children to some extent.

I give the above devise to my wife, that she may support herself & her children according to her discretion, & for that purpose.” Testator left several children, adults & infants:—Held: the wife took an absolute estate for life, without any binding trust in favour of the children.—THORP v. OWEN (1843), 2 Hare, 607; 12 L. J. Ch. 417; 1 L. T. O. S. 286; 7 Jur. 894; 67 E. R. 250.

E. Trust by Imposition of a Condition.

259. General rule—Construction according to context.—(1) “An express trust,” by which I understand the legislature to mean a trust which arises upon the construction of the written instrument, not upon any inference of law imposing a trust upon the conscience; a trust arising upon the words of the instrument itself (LORD CAIRNS, C.).

(2) There is no authority for affirming the creation of an express trust binding a particular estate from an imposition of collateral duties, & a general direction that testator's purposes should be carried into effect. The words “on condition” may or may not import a trust according to their collocation in the sentence (LORD O'HAGAN).—CUNNINGHAM v. FOOT (1878), 3 App. Cas. 974; 38 L. T. 889; 26 W. R. 858, II. 260. — Intention of testator.—Testator devised land at M. to his son R. in fee, on the express condition that R., his exors. or administrators, should, within three months after testator's death, relinquish all claim to a sum of £3,400 due to him by testator; & he devised other land to trustees, on trust for sale, & to stand possessed of the proceeds of sale, after payment of the deficiency, if any, of his residuary personal estate to pay his debts as thereafter mentioned, on trust for his wife for her life, with remainder in trust for some grandchildren; & he devised all other his real estate not thereinbefore disposed of to his sons J. & R. in fee, in equal shares; & after making some specific bequests of personal estate, he bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to trustees upon trust for conversion, & to stand possessed of the proceeds upon trust to pay his debts, except the debt of £3,400 due to R. & two other specified debts, & on trust to retain the surplus for the benefit of his sons J. & R. in equal shares. But, in case his residuary personal estate should be insufficient to pay his debts, except as aforesaid, he directed that the deficiency should be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the real estate which he had directed to be sold. R. died before testator without issue:—Held: the condition bound the land at M. notwithstanding the lapse of the devise, & the debt of £3,400 must be discharged out of it.

The lien will be bound if the ct. can see that the real intention of the testator was to create a trust (FRY, J.).—Re KIRK, KIRK v. KIRK (1882), 21 Ch. D. 431; 47 L. T. 30; 31 W. R. 94, C. A.

265. Payment of annuity.—Testator bequeathed his business to trustees, upon trust to permit J. to carry on & manage the business upon condition (inter alia) that he should pay a certain annuity to pltf. The annuity was not paid, & pltf. filed her bill against J. for the purpose of enforcing the performance of the condition. To this bill J. demurred for want of equity, on the grounds that he was not a trustee for the annuitant but beneficial owner of the business, & also for want of parties, submitting that the exor. ought to be a party to the suit. He also answered as to certain parts of the bill:—Held: the condition was equivalent to a trust, & the exor. was not a necessary party to the suit.—REES v. ENGELBACK (1871), L. 266. Condition against waste.—A lady, tenant for life of an estate, subject to a condition not to commit waste, married; & during the coverture her husband cut & sold timber on the estate:—Held: the condition was not in the nature of a trust, & consequently, neither the wife nor her estate, but the husband alone was answerable for the waste.

If a person to whom an estate for years is given, coupled with an express trust to raise money for payment of debts or to do any other act, assigns the term to a third person upon the trusts declared, he is guilty of a breach of trust, because he had no authority to make the assignment (SHADWELL, V.-C.).—*KINGHAM v. 268. To provide a home.]—Testator directed his trustees to pay the interest on £5,000 to M. A. while unmarried provided she should act as guardian to his children & provide a home for such of them as should require it, but this condition was not to deprive her of the income, while unmarried, although no child should so reside with her:—Held: the bequest was for the benefit of M. A. & did not create a trust which would exempt it from legacy duty.—A.-G. v. SHARPE (1800), 7 T. L. R. 165, D. C.; affd. (1801), 7 T. L. R. 558, C. A.

269. — Residence in settled house.]—Testatrix gave her residuary estate, in the events which happened, to her niece C. on condition that she resided in testatrix's house during the life of testatrix's sister M., & provided there a home for M. so long as she wished; in the event of C. not complying with the condition, to another niece upon the like condition; in the event of neither niece complying with the condition, upon trust for M. for life with other trusts over on her death. At the date of testatrix's death M. was a lunatic not so found, confined in an asylum, & was not expected to recover her faculties. Upon a summons by C. under the Settled Land Acts:—Held: C. was a person having the powers of a tenant for life, the condition as to providing a home was void so far as it prevented C. from exercising her power of sale, & she was entitled to sell the house & keep the proceeds absolutely.

This provision . . . is in truth a condition, & not merely a trust or reservation for the benefit of this lunatic (JOYCE, J.).—Re RICHARDSON, RICHARDSON v. RICHARDSON, [1904] 2 Ch. 777; 73 L. J. Ch. 783; 91 L. T. 775; 53 W. R. 11; 48 Sol. Jo. 688.

F. Trust by Creation of a Charge.

270. General rule—Distinction between trust & charge—"Charged & chargeable."]—General devise & bequest to two persons, their heirs, exors., administrators, etc., upon trust in the first place to pay, & charged & chargeable with all testator's debts & funeral expenses, & the legacies after given.

Those persons, being afterwards appointed exors., taking the absolute property, subject only to a charge, are entitled to the residue undisposed of, including a legacy to a charity, void by charitable Uses Act, 1736 (c. 36), for their own benefit, against the claim of the next of kin; the whole property being personal. Upon their right, as exors., qu.

The difficulty I feel is, whether I am to construe the words "upon trust" to mean "charged & chargeable" . . . The question is whether upon the whole will this is to be taken as a devise & bequest to these exors. with reference to their office; upon a trust to pay; or as giving them the absolute property subject only to a charge; & I think the latter was the intention (LORD ELDON, C.).—DAWSON v. CLARKE (1811), 18 Ves. 247; 34 E. R. 311, L. C.

272. Charge of annuity—Lands devised to trustees upon trusts.]—Testator gave an annuity to A., & charged the same upon all his freehold & leasehold estate. He afterwards devised his freehold estates to trustees, who were also his exors., upon trust, subject to the charge to, & for the use of his grandson & his heirs. The trustees, being in possession of the estates, paid the annuity to A. during the minority of the grandson, & within twenty years before the filing of the bill by A. against the grandson:—Held: the grandson was not a trustee for the annuitant within Real Property Limitation Act, 1833 (c. 27), s. 5, or otherwise.—FRANCIS v. GROVER (1845), 5 Hare, 39; 15 L. J. Ch. 99; 6 L. T. O. S. 235; 10 Jur. 280; 67 E. R. 818.

273. — "Paying."]—Testator devised freeholds & copyholds to his son for life, & after his decease, to his first & other sons, paying £10 a year to M. for life:—Held: the word "paying" created a charge & not a trust.—HODGE v. CHURCHWARD (1847), 16 Sim. 71; 60 E. R. 799.

275. Necessity for object.—The will of testator contained the following devise, "I give, devise, & bequeath unto my said two daughters, the said A. H. & A. M., all my freehold & leasehold messuages, dwelling-house, lands, hereditaments, & premises at . . . with their & every of their rights, members, & appurtenances to hold the same freehold & leasehold messuages, dwelling-houses, lands, hereditaments, premises, unto & to the use of my said two daughters, the said A. H. & A. M. & their respective heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, unto & equally between them, share & share alike, as tenants in common, & not as joint tenants, & to & for their several & respective sole & separate use & benefit absolutely, & it is my will & request that they shall not sell or dispose of any part of my said freehold or leasehold premises." A subsequent part of the will contained a bequest of a sum of stock to trustees, in trust to pay the income to another daughter for her life "for her own sole & separate & inalienable use & benefit, & without power of anticipation":—Held: the words of the devise, even if they had stood alone, would have been insufficient to operate as a restraint on anticipation; the cases as to precatory trusts did not apply, as there was no trust imposed in favour of some other person; & the subsequent bequest strengthened this construction by showing that testator, when he intended to impose a restraint on anticipation, knew of & used the appropriate words for so fettering the estate.

The ct. often implies a trust from precatory words, but only in favour of some other person (COTTON, L.J.).—Re HUTCHINGS to BURT (1888), 59 L. T. 490, C. A.

(b) Construction.

i. In General.

276. General rule—Gift accompanied by words of entreaty.—EATON v. WATTS, No. 175, post.

277. ———]—The words "precatory trust" . . . [are] used as a roundabout way of saying that the ct. found that there was a trust, although the trust was not expressed as such, but by words of prayer or suggestion or the like (CHITTY, J.).—Re SANSON, SANSON v. TURNER (1890), 12 T. L. R. 142.

278. ———]—Re ATKINSON, ATKINSON v. ATKINSON, No. 378, post.

279. Construction depends on circumstances of case.—(1) It is necessary for a person in his will velle, not only petere & rogare, & whether such expressions are declarations of testator's absolute will & pleasure, or only a request to be granted or refused, depends upon the circumstances of the case (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).

(2) The question here is, whether the words of testatrix are imperative, & it is plain they are not so: there is no request to settle the whole lands, or any particular part, but a power is left in him to dispose of, sell, or give away the whole estate in his life, & only so much as he should stand seised of at his death, she requests he should settle (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—BLAND v. BLAND (1745),

280. ———]—The proposition that the ct. does not presume & that merely precatory words do not create a trust, supposes the whole intention of testator, so far as it had been committed to writing, to be before the ct., & that the uncertainty is occasioned by the intention which is declared, & does not apply to a case in which, from the terms of the bequest, it would appear that there was a written expression of the intention of testator, which is not before the ct., & uncertainty is occasioned by the absence of that written declaration.—GLOUCESTER CORPN. v. WOOD (1843), 3 Hare, 131; 2 L. T. O. S. 117; 7 Jur. 1125; 67 E. R. 326; on appeal, sub nom. GLOUCESTER CORPN. v. OSBORN (1847), 1 H. L. Cas. 272, II. L.

281. ———]—The doctrine of precatory trusts is not to be extended, & in considering whether precatory words create a trust, the ct. will not look only to particular expressions, but see whether on the whole will testator's intention was to create a trust, & regard will be had to any embarrassment & difficulty which would arise from a trust. Testatrix gave all her property, real & personal to her daughter, "her heirs & assigns; & it is my desire that she allows to [my relative & companion] A. G. an annuity of £25 during her life, & that A. G. shall if she desire it have the use of such portions of my household furniture as may not be required by my daughter." The daughter & her husband were appointed exors.:—Held: no trust or obligation to pay the annuity was imposed upon the daughter, but there was only a request to the daughter, not binding her in law, to make that provision for A. G.—Re DIGGLES, GREGORY v. EDMONDSON (1888), 39 Ch. D. 253; 59 L. T. 884, C. A.

(3) The words "in the fullest confidence" are imperative.

285. — Intention to create trust. — (1) Testatrix, by her will, after giving, among other legacies, a sum of £3,000 to S. & a like sum of £3,000, in addition for the trouble she would have in acting as extrix., bequeathed all her residuary personal estate & effects unto S., "well knowing that she will make a good use & dispose of it in a manner in accordance with my views & wishes"; testatrix appointed S. sole extrix. of her will:—Held: S. did not take the residue for her own benefit, but the words of the bequest created a trust.

(2) Words accompanying a gift or bequest, expressive of confidence, or belief, or desire, or hope, that a particular application will be made of such bequest, will be deemed to import a trust upon these conditions: (a) that they are so used as to exclude all option or discretion in the party who is to act, as to his acting according to them or not; (b) the subject must be certain; & (c) the objects expressed must not be too vague or indefinite to be enforced.

Vagueness in the object will, unquestionably, furnish reason for holding that no trust was intended yet this may be counterbalanced by other considerations, which show that a trust was intended, while, at the same time, such trust is not sufficiently certain & definite to be valid & effectual.

(3) It is not necessary to exclude the legatee from a beneficial interest that there should be a valid or effectual trust; it is only necessary that it should clearly appear that a trust was intended. —*BRIGGS v. 288. —.]—N., by his will dated Dec. 13, 1901, devised & bequeathed all his estate & effects of every description to his brother, C. T. C., absolutely, & he appointed his brother, H. J. M., & C. G. exors. & trustees of his will. On Jan. 11, 1902, N. signed a document or letter which was headed "Instructions to my exors. C. M., & G.—Dear brother C. (I dictated this to G.)—Like many others who have gone before me, I have failed to make provision for the distribution of my property amongst my relatives & friends before it became too late to do it with care. For this reason I have left all my estate to you in the fullest reliance that you will, as far as possible & to the uttermost, carry out any wish that I may express in writing now or later, or which may be conveyed to you verbally by G. or my good-hearted cousin H. I have made a settlement on P. which should suffice for him in the struggle of life which we all have to face. As regards our family, you will be the best judge how & when a suitable distribution should be made. I do not fetter your discretion in any way. You are an old man, & therefore do not delay the distribution." Then followed directions as to the disposal of certain property & amounts to be paid to certain persons. The document concluded: "Finally, these are the instructions referred to in my will. They are not in any way to fetter

C., & may probably be added to if I am spared, or I may carry some out in my own lifetime." A copy of this document was sent to C. T. C., who, on Jan. 14, 1902, wrote to C. G. a letter in which he said: "All I wish to say now is that every wish expressed by my brother shall be carried out to the very fullest extent so far as I am concerned, & as far as all we three exors. are concerned, for his wishes are sacred, every word."

The effect of this letter was communicated to N. N. died on Feb. 18, 1902, & his will was proved by all exors., & estate duty & legacy duty was paid on his estate, including sums given or settled by testator within twelve months of his death. C. T. C. took possession as beneficial owner of the residuary personal estate and of the freehold & leasehold estate of N., & he made on May 13, 1902, within twelve months next before his death, a settlement of £5,000 on each of his four nephews & niece. C. T. C. also gave & paid other sums to various persons in accordance with the instructions in the letter of Jan. 11, 1902. C. T. C. died on Dec. 13, 1902:—Held: no trust was created.—*A.-G. v. Sec. 3.—Creation of trusts: Sub-sect. 3, H. (b) ii.]

The Master of the Rolls was of opinion that E., under the will of N. took only beneficially during her life, & that so much of the household goods in Hatton Garden, not disposed of by her according to the power given her by the will of N. in case the same remains in specie, or the value thereof, ought to be divided equally among such of the relations as were his next of kin at the time of her death.

The words willing or desiring in a will have been frequently construed to amount to a trust.

(2) Where the uncertainty is such that the ct. cannot possibly determine who are meant in a will, it may be construed only as a recommendation to the first devisee, & make it an absolute gift to him. Where there is a devise to relations in a will, the Statute of Distributions is a good rule to go by, in construing who are meant by that word.—HARDING v. subject-matter & a certain object: but it is not necessary that the object should be so defined that it can be distinctly ascertained: if there is a definite object intended, that is a sufficient creation of a trust to exclude the legatee from taking beneficially.

Thus, where testatrix bequeathed to her husband absolutely a specific sum of £13,000, & requested that after reserving to his own absolute use & benefit £2,000, he would make such disposition of the remainder as he might deem most desirable to carry out her wishes, often expressed to him by word, & it appeared that she had never expressed any wishes on the subject, it was held, that there was a definite object intended; & though that object could not be ascertained, there was a sufficient creation of a trust to exclude the husband from taking the beneficial interest in the remainder of the fund, although the trust itself failed.—*BERNARD v. It is incumbent on those who claim that there is a trust, whether created by precatory words or otherwise, to point out with reasonable certainty who are the objects of the trust; these objects must be ascertained from the words used construed reasonably (CHITTY, L.J.).—*HILL (VISCOUNT) v. 316. —[Testator devised certain real estates to trustees for the use of W. S. for life, with remainders over, & he directed the residue of his personal estate to be invested in the purchase of other real estates. He gave a legacy of £100 to B. E. L. as a token of esteem. The will then contained this clause: "& it is also my particular desire that my said exors., whilst acting in the management of all or any of my affairs under this my will, as also my friend W. S. when he shall enter into the receipt & perception of my said rents of K. V. & K., shall continue the said B. E. L. in the receipt & management thereof, & likewise

E. L.

There is, it is true, a great variety of cases in which the expression of a wish has been held to create a trust; but the rule of construction in these cases is, that there should be certainty in the object & in the subject of a trust so created (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—*SHAW v. The paper then went on to make certain requests in very vague & ambiguous language. It was admitted to probate. One of the Vice-Chancellors decided that the absolute gift of the residue contained in the will was cut down to a life estate by the terms of the letter; but on appeal, it was held, that though the letter was a testamentary instrument, it was uncertain in its meaning, & did not revoke or cut down the absolute gift to R. in the will; & moreover, that the words of the letter were not sufficient to create a trust which this ct. could enforce.—Re PINCKARD'S TRUST (1858), 27 L. He then declared, "that though his meaning was to give his daughter the absolute disposal of the collieries, etc., to prevent the expenses & trouble that must attend the management of affairs of such a nature, under the direction of the Ct. of Ch.; he requested his daughter to direct the money arising therefrom, to be applied in such manner as he had directed the same in default of her direction & appointment." He then declared trusts of an equal share of his property for each of his surviving children, for their lives, with remainders to their children. He then made a codicil as follows: "My dear daughters, is that you do give my dear granddaughter, K., £1,000, & that you will be kind to E.; & it is my desire that you do give her some part of my table linen & sheeting. This is my last wish." By a subsequent codicil he made some alteration in the bequest made, by his will, in favour of one of his daughters, & subject thereto, confirmed his will: Held: the second codicil confirmed the first, as being part of the will, & the concluding sentence of the first codicil was sufficient to create a bequest of the £1,000 to K., & as the articles specifically given by it to E., passed, by the will, to the trustees, & not to the daughters, so the £1,000 was to be paid, not by the daughters out of their life interests, but by the trustees, out of testator's general

m. — — — — —.]—"His earnest wish."]—Testator devised to his wife his house

(2) The case is one of the class known as "precatory trust" cases. I am not very fond of the word "precatory." But I think that we all understand what it means. In order to create a trust it is not necessary that we should use the word "trust." There may be other words that in form may be less mandatory than the word "trust," which, taking the will as a whole, the ct. will construe as creating a trust. It is beyond all doubt that, in years gone by, words which were in form merely expressing hope, desire, wish, intention, & so on, were construed in a manner which would not now be followed. It has been pointed out by the cts. for the last quarter of a century & longer that the current has turned. The leaning of the cts. is now undoubtedly not to extend the doctrine of precatory trusts. I think I may go further & say that the leaning of the cts. is now not to construe words used in a will, not being words of a strict definite legal character or words that are beyond all doubt, equivalent words, in short, as creating a trust (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—Re ATKINSON, ATKINSON v. ATKINSON (1911), 80 L. J. Ch. 370; 103 L. T. 860, C. A.

379. — Earnest wish & desire.—Testator appointed his wife universal legatee. The will continued, "it is my earnest wish & desire that my wife should during her lifetime pay out of my estate to my sister . . . the sum of 30s. each & every week":—Held: this expression of a wish did not amount to a precatory trust or direction to pay, & gave to the sister of testator no interest to propound his will.—DOBIE v. EDWARDS (1911), 80 L. J. P. 119; 27 T. L. R. 464; sub nom. Re HAMMER, DOBIE v. EDWARDS, 55 Sol. Jo. 537.

(i) Words of Recommendation or Advice.

380. Recommend—Imperative word.—A gift of the residue of testator's personal estate to trustees for the perpetual endowment & maintenance of a school would be a valid bequest, & not within Charitable Uses Act, 1735 (c. 36). But if, after such completed bequest, testator goes on to recommend the trustees to collect the residue, & lay it out at a convenient time in the purchase of freehold lands, etc., for that purpose, it comes within the statute, because the word "recommend" is imperative on the trustees, & leaves them no discretion, but raises a trust which must be carried into execution, unless there be in some other part of the will an express option given to them in terms so to lay out the money, or not in their discretion.—KIRKBANK v. HUDSON (1819), 1 Dan. 259; 7 Price, 212; 146 E. R. 951, Ex. Ch.

381. — As to dispositions of donee's will.—F. C. having two sons, & being engaged in the sugar trade, devised his sugar houses, etc., to his eldest son; nevertheless, in case his eldest son should die without a son or sons of his body, then he recommended to him to give & devise the sugar houses, etc., to his brother, testator's second son. The eldest son died without issue male, leaving a daughter, & without devising to his brother:—Held: not a trust for the brother, but a mere recommendation.—CUNLIFFE v. CUNLIFFE (LADY) (1770), Amb. 686; 27 E. R. 446.

Testator's sister died in his life, & her two daughters were his co-heiresses. Some real estates were purchased between the executions of the will & codicil. As to the real estate, the will is not revoked but is republished by the codicil; & the two nieces are entitled to all the real estates, & to those directed to be purchased as tenants in common in fee.—*MEGGISON v. 392. ———.]—Tenant to remain in occupation.]—Devise to a son, recommending him to continue his cousins, A. & B., in the occupation of their respective farms in the county of W. as heretofore & so long as they continue to manage the same in a good & husband like manner & to duly pay their rents. A trust for the cousins, who had been tenants at will; & the son, being the heir was put to his election.—TIBBITS v. TIBBITS (1816), 19 Ves. 656; 2 Mer. 90, n.; 34 E. R. 659, L. C.

393. ———.]—“But not absolutely enjoin.”]—YOUNG v. MARTIN, No. 289, ante.

394. ———.]—Work qualifying absolute gift.]—Testator bequeathed to his wife for her life the use of all his property, & directed that certain specific chattels should be finally appropriated as she pleased, with a sum of £4,000; which sum, however, he recommended her to divide among certain persons:—Held: no trust was created in favour of any of those persons as to any part of the

£4,000.—WHITE v. BRIGGS (1846), 15 L. J. Ch. 182; 6 L. T. O. S. 477, L. C.

395. ———.]—No trust unless subject certain.]—Wish & desire that a particular person should be appointed manager of testator's estate for all purposes for which his trustees might have occasion for a manager, considered only as opinion & advice & not as a trust.

Words of recommendation are never construed as trusts, unless the subject be certain.—FINDEN v. STEPHENS (1846), 2 Ph. 142; 1 Coop. temp. Cott. 318; 16 L. J. Ch. 63; 8 L. T. O. S. 249; 10 Jur. 1019; 47 E. R. 874, L. C.

396. ———.]—Guardianship of children.]—Words of recommendation or desire in a will not raise a trust if such construction would conflict with other provisions of more definite & positive import in the same instrument; but the ct. will give such effect to them as may not be inconsistent with those provisions.

A father having by his will appointed a guardian to his children, with a recommendation that, in the event of their mother's death during their minorities, they should be placed under the care of two female relations:—Held: on a contest between those ladies & the testamentary guardian, in reference to the management of the children after the mother's death, the ct. was bound to give effect to the recommendation, but not further than might be consistent with preserving to the testamentary guardian the general superintendence & control over the children & their fortunes, which, by virtue of his office, it was his right & duty to exercise.—KNOTT v. COTTEE (1847), 2 Ph. 192; 8 L. T. O. S. 462; 41 E. R. 915, L. C.

Annotation:—Refd. Ware v. Mallard (1851), 18 L. T. O. S. 191.

397. “Advise” — Settlement of estate.]—Testator devised some copyhold estates to his son T., & “advised him to settle it upon himself, & his issue male by his lawful wife, & for want of such issue, upon E. & his lawful issue:—Held: these words created a trust.—PARKER v. BOLTON (1835), 5 L. J. Ch. 98.

398. “Directions to my executors” — Investment.—Recommendation only.]—Testator, by his will, devised his residuary real estates to trustees, in trust for certain tenants for life, with remainder to D. F. for life, with remainder in trust for the sons of D. F., as tenants in common in tail male, with cross remainders & remainders over, & he directed his residuary personal estate to be laid out in the purchase of land, to be settled to the same uses. By a testamentary paper of the same date as the will, & headed, “Memorandum, alias, directions to my exors.” he directed, as to his residuary personal estate that his exors. should apply for an estate of an uncle of testator as an investment “for the use & behoof of D. F.”; & if not attainable, to inquire if any part of a certain other estate was to be disposed of.

Neither of the specified properties could be obtained on fair terms, as an investment:—Held: D. F. did not take any further interest under the codicil than under the will, & testator thereby either meant to express merely a recommendation to his trustees as to the mode of laying out his residuary personalty, or expressed no intention on which the ct. could act.—FITCH v. FRIEND (1848), 2 De G. & Sm. 405; 64 E. R. 181.

400. "Conjure"—Following absolute gift.]—Testator, after reciting that he was desirous of making a suitable provision for his wife, as well as for his daughter & grandchild, in order to mark his unbounded confidence in his wife, & his belief that she would be actuated by the most maternal regard towards his child, gave her all his property, for her own use, benefit & disposal absolutely, implicitly relying on her attachment to his daughter & grand-daughter. He then directed his exors. to sell his property, & to invest the proceeds on Govt. or real securities, in his wife's name alone, or jointly with his exors., with power to change the securities: "To hold the same unto my wife for her own absolute use, benefit & disposal; & whereas I have hereby manifested abundant proof of entire confidence in my dear wife, by thus giving her the sovereign control over the whole of my property, for her sole use & benefit, which she will duly appreciate accordingly; but in so doing I, nevertheless, earnestly conjure her, under the advice of my exors., to proceed forthwith to make ample provisions, by deed or will, for our only child & grandchild." The will concluded with a power to the wife, who was extrix., & to the exors. to retain their expenses out of testator's estate:—Held: no trust was created by the will in favour of either the daughter or the granddaughter.—WINCH v. BRUTTON (1844), 14 Sim. 379; 4 L. T. O. S. 271; 8 Jur. 1086; 60 E. R. 404.

401. "I would have"—Imperative.]—Testator had a power to appoint the produce of a policy on his life amongst his children, by writing or will. By his will he bequeathed all his personal estate to his daughter F. By a contemporaneous writing, unattested & headed "memorandum," he gave directions to F. as to his property, & said, "the money from the Equitable Insurance Office I would have equally divided between my daughters F., G. & A.," & it also expressed his wish that his two sons should have certain interests out of his own property:—Held: the words "I would have" were imperative & not mere instructions to F.—PROBY v. LANDOR (1860), 28 Beav. 504; 30 L. J. Ch. 593; 6 Jur. N. S. 1278; 9 W. R. 47; 54 E. R. 460.

I. Other Cases.

402. "Sufficient to pay & discharge all estate duty"—Whether trust for payment.]—Testator by a codicil to his will, executed after the passing of Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), bequeathed to his eldest son, to whom certain settled estates would pass on testator's death, "a sum of money sufficient to pay & discharge all the estate duty which may be payable by" him; & he directed such sum to be paid out of moneys in the hands of his bankers at his death, but if the sum at the bankers should not be sufficient, he declared that no other part of his estate should be liable to make good the deficiency:—Held: the legacy was a gift to the eldest son for his own benefit absolutely, & was not impressed with a trust to pay the estate duty out of it.—*MEXBOROUGH (EARL) v. 408. — Fund contingent on certain event.]—Testator devised certain estates by name, together with his farming stock & furniture, to his beloved wife to sell, to discharge all his creditors; & he constituted his wife & W. his exors., whom he appointed to sell & dispose of all his estates & chattels, in such manner as they should jointly agree upon, or not to sell if it seemed most advisable to keep them, or in any way they should think proper, so that every creditor had his money, & if sold, all overplus to his wife, towards her support & her family:—Held: testator's children had such an interest in the devised estates as enabled them to sustain a bill against the widow & her co-exor., impeaching a sale on the ground of fraud, & praying an account of the rents & profits.

Now, I have already stated it to be my clear opinion, that in a certain event, the event, namely, of a sale, the widow would take the property, subject to a trust (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—WOODS v. WOODS (1836), 1 My. & Cr. 401; Donnelly, 61; 40 E. R. 429, I. C.

409. Alternative gifts—Effect of word “prefer.”] —Testator by a holograph letter, which by the law of Scotland is a testamentary writing, instructed his solr. to pay to applt., a single lady, on the first of each month after his death, the sum of £12 10s., being at the rate of £150 a year. “But in lieu of this I would prefer that as soon as you conveniently can, that the sum of £3,000 should be taken from my life insurance funds & paid over to her.”

Testator’s trust disposition contained a general direction for payment of debts, & the insurance funds, after paying off the charges upon them, amounted to £1,900:—Held: the trustees were bound to pay over the capital sum of £3,000 to A., & had no option to decide whether she was to receive the monthly allowance or the capital sum.

The use of the word “prefer” indicates not an alternative for selection by the trustee, but that there has been an alternative in the mind of testator, which he proceeds to resolve in the document before your lordships (LORD LOREBURN, C.).—DAWSON v. REID (1915), 113 L. T. 52, H. L.

SUB-SECT. 5.—DESIGNATION OF OBJECTS.

A. Necessity for Certainty.

410. General rule—Object must be certain.]—

Wife having a power to dispose by will, signed & sealed by her, of £300 in the hands of trustees, having made a will agreeable to the power, afterwards made a testamentary paper, by which she gives it to her husband; but so much as shall be remaining at his death, etc., to her brother & sisters. This paper is not sealed, but is on a stamp. The stamp is equivalent to a seal. It vests absolutely in her husband, & was decreed to be paid to him, the property not being sufficiently certain to raise a trust.

The property & the person to whom it is to be given must be certain in order to raise a trust (ARDEN, M.R.).—SPRANGE v. BARNARD (1789), 2 Bro. C. C. 585; 29 E. R. 320.

411. ———.]—CRUWYS v. COLMAN, No. 91, ante.

412. ———.]—Re BROOKE & FREMLIN’S CONTRACT, No. 400, ante.

413. ——— Limitations of trust of heirlooms.]

—When a trust is created to secure the devolution of chattels as heirlooms, any limitations which are to take effect by way of postponement of defeasance of any absolute interest are subject to all the rules which govern the validity of conditions subsequent. Such limitations, therefore, must be certain, not only in expression, but also in operation, & it is essential to their validity that it should be capable of ascertainment at any given moment of time, whether the limitation has or has not taken effect. Testator, who was a peer, bequeathed chattels to trustees, upon trust to permit & suffer the same to go & be held & enjoyed with the title, so far as the rules of law & equity would admit, by the person who for the time being should be actually possessed of the title, in the nature of heirlooms, & so that no person in existence at the time of testator’s decease, or born in due time afterwards, & afterwards coming to the title, should have any other than a life interest in the same, & so that no person should acquire an absolute interest in the same till the expiration of twenty-one years after the decease of all such persons as should be in existence at the time of testator’s decease & afterwards attaining the title:—Held: the latter clause of the limitations was void for uncertainty in operation, & the first person born after the death of testator who attained the title acquired an absolute interest in the chattels, notwithstanding that there was still living a person who was alive at the time of testator’s death, & who was capable of inheriting the title.—*Re EXMOUTH (VISCOUNT), EXMOUTH (VISCOUNT) v. By a codicil executed the same day, he gave legacies to each of his exors., irrespective of any interest they might ultimately take in the residue of his estate:—Held: the gift in the will was a trust, & not a power including ownership, & it was not affected by the words in the codicil, & therefore the exors. & trustees were not entitled beneficially under an appointment made to themselves.

In such a case the trust is void, as being too uncertain for the ct. to act on, & the heir-at-law & next of kin are entitled to the property.—BUCKLE v. BRISTOW (1864), 5 New Rep. 7; 11 L. T. 265; 10 Jur. N. S. 1095; 13 W. R. 68.

The residue was not severed from the trust with which testatrix had clothed all her property in the hands of her exors., but although a trust was intended to be created it failed for want of adequate expression of it.—YEAP CHEAH NEO v. He also gave real estates to trustees & their heirs, & declared it to be his intention that they should have no further trouble in it than to prevent the aforementioned estates being alienated before the contingencies mentioned in his will were completed. Testator gave life interests in the property to his son & daughter respectively, with remainder to their children; but in case they should die without leaving lawful issue, the longest liver of his two children was to have power to dispose of all his real & personal estate amongst his nephews & nieces or their children, either all to one of them, or to as many of them as his surviving child should think proper :—Held : a trust was created by the will for nephews & nieces & their children, subject only to a power of selection in the survivor of the son & daughter of testator.

Where there is a general intention in favour of a class, & a particular intention in favour of a portion of it to be selected by an individual named, the ct. will carry into effect the general intention in favour of the class, & will not suffer the gift to fail on account of the neglect of the donee to exercise his power (per CUR.).—*BURROUGH v. The brother predeceased the tenant for life:—Held: the effect of the gift was to empower the trustees to apply so much of the share as might be required for the personal benefit of their brother, but no trust was to be implied in his favour as to the whole of the share; consequently the share did not pass to his legal personal representative.—*Re STANGER, MOORSOM v. SUB-SECT. 7.—NECESSITY FOR LEGAL ESTATE.

439. Whether legal estate necessary—Co-extension with trust.]—BURGESS v. WHEATE, A.-G. v. WHEATE, No. 638, post.

440. —.]—(1) Trust estates do not depend upon the legal estate for an existence. A ct. of equity considers devises of trusts as distinct substantive devises, standing on their own basis, independent of the legal estate, or of one another; & the legal estate is nothing but the shadow which always follows the trust estate, in the eye of a ct. of equity (WILMOT, C.J.).

(2) Executory trusts fall under a very different consideration, for when the freehold is put into trustees, & the vacuum, which the law so much abhors, is thereby avoided, a trust to arise out of a remainder for a person not existing but who must exist within the compass of a life or lives in being,

will be as good, & to be supported by a ct. of equity as much, as a trust for a person in esse; & therefore, suppose a remainder, limited to trustees & their heirs, in trust for the first son which A. shall have & his heirs; the trust being in the mind & intention of testator for a person not then existing, but to exist, & where that existence must happen within the compass of a life or lives, would be clearly good. So in this case, testator does not only declare his intention to give to a person not in esse, but is actually giving directions for the creation of that person; & there is no difference between the cases, but that one is an executory trust for a natural person to be created & the other is for a political person to be created (WILMOT, C.J.)—*A.-G. v. 450. — Trust referred to in will.]—Testator appointed a lady his extrix., & gave her all his real & personal property upon trust to carry out his verbal wishes. He had, prior to the execution of the will, verbally given her to understand that she might help & educate certain of his relations if it were necessary, & that, subject to her doing so, the property was all her own.—Held: as there was nothing to show on the face of the will that the lady was to take beneficially the trusts failed, & the realty belonged to the heir, & the personality to the next-of-kin of testator.—*Re BAILLIE, FITZGERALD v. There was evidence that testatrix had been for a long time on very intimate terms of friendship with L. & his family, & that she had told them on one or more than one occasion that she intended to leave her property to L.'s daughters.—Held: the evidence was not sufficient to establish a trust in favour of the daughters, & the residue must go to testatrix's next-of-kin.—*LE PAGE v. The exors. objected to pay over the bequest, on the ground that there was a secret trust, & that such trust appeared to be an illegal one. The legatees accordingly applied to the ct. to order payment of the legacy. The exors. tendered affidavits to show that the bequest was upon a trust. The legatees objected that the ct. could

Detailed parol instructions for this codicil were given by testator to C., one of the five friends, & the object of the trust was known in outline to & accepted by all the rest before the execution of the codicil. On the same day, soon after the execution of the codicil, C. wrote out & signed a memorandum of the instructions given to him to the effect (inter alia), that the interest of the £12,000 was to be paid to a lady, whose name & full address were given, for the benefit of her & her son, whose full name followed. m. Application of Trusts Act, 1915, s. 71.—It is settled law that a deft. shall not be allowed to set up the above act. as an instrument of fraud. What may be the precise limits to be assigned to the operation of the doctrine, & how much actual operation it may leave to the sect. in cases of verbal agreements to create trusts, may be difficult to define: but it is clear that the doctrine takes out of the sect. cases in which any person has become possessed of another's land upon a verbal agreement to hold that property on certain trusts & where he or his representatives insist upon claiming to possess the property free from such trusts.—ORGAN v. SANDWELL, [1921] V. L. R. 622.—AUS.

468. — Deed of gift by testator.—Not communicated to donees.—In 1900 testator, a North Sea skipper, by a deed of gift gave his sons W. & F. in fee simple in equal moieties certain land at P. & at S. In July, 1901, he sold the land at S. & bought additional land at P. In Aug. 1901, W. died. Testator by his will, dated 1913, gave to F. all the land at P., & his residue to the children of a deceased son. Testator received the rents of the land at P. down to his death in 1914, the sons never having known of the deed of gift. F. died in 1915:—Held: as testator might have thought the deed non-effective until communicated to his sons, there had been no "concealed fraud" by him, & he had not become a trustee for W. & F.—Re LEVESLEY, GOODWIN v. LEVESLEY (1915), 32 T. L. R. 145; 60 Sol. Jo. 142.

469. — Declaration in will against testamentary character.—Testator by his will bequeathed £650 to the trustees of the Benevolent Fund of the Savage Club, in order that they might devote the income to the purposes set out in a memorandum. The will stated that the memorandum was not to form part of the will. The purposes set out in this memorandum consisted in the provision of free drinks & smokes for members of the club. Its contents were not communicated to the trustees until after testator's death:—Held: as testator had expressly directed that the above memorandum was not to form part of the will the trust failed.—Re LOUIS, LOUIS v. TRELOAR (1916), 32 T. L. R. 313.

470. ——By her will dated Apr. 22, 1922, testatrix devised & bequeathed her real & personal estate to two persons upon trust for sale & conversion & investment of the net proceeds as therein mentioned. She then bequeathed to the two persons by name "absolutely as joint tenants one half of the residuary trust moneys, with the request that they will dispose of same in accordance with any memorandum or paper signed by me & deposited with this my will or left amongst my papers at my death." There was a similar gift of the other half of the residuary trust moneys, subject to a life interest. She then declared that any such memorandum or paper should not have any testamentary character, "& the above expression of my wishes as to the disposal of the sums shall not create any trust or legal obligation, even if same shall be communicated to my trustees in my lifetime." The two persons were the partners in the firm of solrs. which prepared her will, & an earlier will dated Aug. 9, 1921, which contained the same bequests & declarations. Before the date of the first will testatrix sent to one of the partners a list containing the names of those she wished to benefit, & in preparing her first will he did his utmost to induce her to allow the names of beneficiaries to be inserted in the ordinary way, but she refused. On Oct. 18, 1921, testatrix sent him revised lists of the persons & institutions she wished to benefit, & requested him to destroy the earlier list, & he replied next day, "I have your letter of the 18th inst. with the enclosures, & quite understand your instructions." Subsequently she wrote letters making slight alterations in the lists, which he similarly acknowledged:—Held: the true inference was, seeing that the partners had full knowledge of the contents of testatrix's will, that they only agreed to give effect to testatrix's wishes in accordance with the scheme of the will, including the provision that there was to be no trust or legal obligation & accordingly they took the property bequeathed to them absolutely for their own benefit.—Re FALKNER, MEAD v. SMITH, [1924] 1 Ch. 88; 93 L. J. Ch. 76; 130 L. T. 405; 68 Sol. Jo. 101.

471. Effect of loss of writing.—Testator, by his will, after devising his real estate according to certain limitations therein stated, bequeathed all the rest of his property to trustees, "to form a trust fund to purchase land to go with the inheritance in a manner described in a paper marked "X." At his death no such paper was forthcoming:—Held: notwithstanding the absence of the paper marked X, the gift was not void for uncertainty, but there was a trust declared by the will, which was imperative as to the conversion of the residue of the personal estate into land, & that such land when purchased was to go according to the limitations which described the way in which the lands devised by testator were to be inherited.—*WILLOUGHBY v. On the death of the wife intestate, a bill was filed on the part of two natural daughters of testator, to recover the residue of his estate, alleging that he had intended to leave his residuary property to them after the decease of his wife, & had made the disposition before mentioned, on the faith of a promise & undertaking given by his wife to carry such his intentions into effect:—Held: in case of such a promise & undertaking being clearly proved, plffs. would be entitled to the relief of the ct., but as plffs. failed to make out such a case the bill was dismissed, with costs.—*PODMORE v. Testatrix devised & bequeathed all her real estate, & all such moneys as might be secured to her upon mtge. of real estates, & all her property not applicable under her will for the purposes of mortmain, to defts. J. & P., their heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, as joint tenants. Testatrix had considerable real estate & large personal property, mixed & unmixed. It was alleged that testatrix thought she had given the above property to J. & P. for charitable purposes, & on a secret trust which she also thought that they, or one of them at all events, had promised to perform. Defts., J. & P., claimed the property absolutely:—Held: whatever charitable desire or object might have existed in the mind of testatrix when she made the devise of her residue, plffs. had entirely failed to show that any secret trust for charity was communicated to, much less accepted or acquiesced in, by defts. or either of them.—*JONES v. 480. ——C. made a will leaving his whole property, real & personal, to G., whom he also appointed his exor. When about to die, C. sent for G., & in a private interview told him of the will, & on G.'s asking whether that was right, said he would not have it otherwise. C. then told G. where the will was to be found, & that with it would be found a letter. This was all that was known to have passed between the parties. The letter named a great many persons to whom C. wished sums of money to be given & annuities to be paid; but it contained several expressions as to G. carrying into effect the intention of testator as he "might think best," & this sentence, "I do not wish you to act strictly on the foregoing instructions, but leave it entirely to your own good judgment to do as you think I would, if living, & as the parties are deserving; & as it is not my wish that you should say anything about this document, there cannot be any fault found with you by any of the parties, should you not act in strict accordance with it." G. paid money to some of the persons mentioned in the letter, but not to all:—Held: in this case there was not any trust created binding on G.

If a legatee states to testator that upon testator's confiding his property, apparently disposing of it, to him, the legatee, by a regular & formal instrument, he will carry into effect all such intentions as testator shall confide to him, then that legatee . . . shall have fastened upon his conscience the trust of carrying into full effect those instructions which he received upon such representations (LORD HATHERLY).—*MCCORMICK v. 481. — Testator destroying codicil.—By the will & five codicils of testator real estates were settled to the use of his wife during widowhood, remainder to the use of A. for life, remainder to the use of the first & every other son of A. successively in tail male, remainder to the use of such person or persons of a special class as A. should by deed or will appoint, remainder in default of such appointment to B. for life, remainder to the first & every other son of B. successively in tail male, with remainders over.

A. was married but had no children. He was a member of the class, B. was not. Testator's wife, desiring that B. should not be excluded from trust for a person whom he then named, & that the legatee had consented to accept the legacy for this purpose, & had promised testator to carry out his wishes respecting it. The residuary legatee of testator having claimed the benefit of the legacy.—Held: to allow trust for the person named by testator had attached to the bequest.—RIRDAN v. BANON (1876), 10 L. R. Eq.

succeeding to the estates, induced testator to make a sixth codicil by which he revoked the power of appointment given to A. by the fifth codicil. On hearing of this A. had an interview with testator's wife, at which he gave her his written promise to leave the estates to B. on acquiring the power to do so if she would get testator to revoke the sixth codicil. Testator's wife communicated this promise to testator, who thereupon destroyed the sixth codicil. After testator's death, A. by deed appointed the estates to himself in fee on failure of his issue male. In an action by B. to enforce the promise:—Held: the appointment was fraudulent & void, for A. could not exercise the power so as to interfere with B.'s right of succeeding to the estates.—THARP v. THARP, [1916] 1 Ch. 142; 85 L. J. Ch. 162; 114 L. T. 495; 60 Sol. Jo. 176; on appeal, [1916] 2 Ch. 205, C. A.

482. Express promise subsequent to gift.]—Testator gave the residue, which amounted in value to about £6,500, of his personal estate upon trust to permit a married woman to receive the income during her life, with remainder after her death for the benefit of her children, & if no children, for the husband absolutely. In the event of the death of the wife in the lifetime of her aunt N., testator directed that the then legally secured income of the aunt, if below £250 a year, should be made up to that amount. From the death of testator, in Apr. 1861, down to Feb. 1865, an annuity of £300 was regularly paid to N. by arrangement, out of the husband's banking account; but the wife having eloped in Sept. 1864, the payment was, after the above date, discontinued. In 1869, the bill was filed by N. against the husband & wife, alleging by amendment, after the answer of the wife, who supported pltf.'s case, had come in, that the husband & wife both promised testator, at his request, on his death bed, to make an allowance of £300 a year to pltf., & praying for a declaration that the income of testator's residuary real & personal estate "was & is subject to a trust" for the payment of £300 a year to pltf. during the wife's life, if pltf. should so long live; & for payment of the arrears of the annuity by the husband. The husband denied having made any such promise; but it having been found as a result of the evidence that a promise, as alleged, was made to testator by the wife, & was assented to by the husband:—Held: the income of testator's estate was subject to the alleged trust.—NORRIS v. FRAZER (1873), L. R. 15 Eq. 318; 21 W. R. 431.

483. Promise implied from tacit acceptance.]—Testator devised real & personal property to F. & pltf.s, their heirs, exors., etc., as tenants in common; & by a memorandum of even date, addressed to them & signed by testator but not attested, he expressed his confidence that they would appropriate the property to charitable objects. On the day of testator's death the will & the memorandum, which for sixteen months had been kept secret by testator, were read over to him in the presence of F. by a solr., who was in attendance at testator's request, communicated through F. to take instructions for a codicil. Pltf.s remained in ignorance of the existence of the memorandum, & of its contents until after testator's death:—Held: (1) with respect to F., the case was the same as if testator had himself communicated to him the contents of the memorandum; & F.'s silence when the memorandum was read was equivalent to an undertaking on his part to carry testator's intentions, as therein expressed, into effect; the ct. therefore declared that the one-fourth share given to F. was affected by the trusts of the memorandum, so far as they were valid; & such trusts were invalid as to real estate, & as to personal estate affected with realty; (2) the devise, being to F. & pltf.s, as tenants in common, pltf.s were not affected by the communication of testator's intentions to F. & were entitled to the remaining three-fourths as tenants in common.—TEE v. FERRIS (1856), 2 K. & J. 357; 25 L. J. Ch. 437; 20 J. P. 563; 2 Jur. N. S. 807; 4 W. R. 352; 69 E. R. 819.

SUB-SECT. 2.—COMMUNICATION TO TRUSTEE.

486. Necessity for.]—Semble: it is impossible for the ct. to intend any trust, unless it can convert the legatees into trustees, by proof of some communication between them & testator, importing that he intended a trust, which they, in effect undertook, & by which, therefore, their consciences would be bound.—*CARTER v. 487. —.]—A. instructed his solr. to prepare for him a will leaving all his property to the solr. himself absolutely, but to be held & disposed of by him according to written directions to be subsequently given, & a will was prepared & executed accordingly, under which the solr. was universal legatee & sole exor. No such directions were, however, given to the solr., by testator in his lifetime, but after his death an unattested paper was found, by which testator stated his wish that X. should have all his property except a small sum of money which he gave to the solr. The solr. claimed no beneficial interest in testator's property, except to the extent of his legacy, & claimed to hold the rest of the property as trustee for X.:—Held: as testator had not in his own lifetime communicated to the solr. the object of the trust, no the terms of the trust.—KALI CHARAN GHOSAL v. RAM CHANDRA MANDAL (1903), 1 L. R. 30 Calc. 783.—IND.

t. One legatee informed of trust.]—Testator devised certain houses & also a legacy of £600, charged on the remainder of his property, which comprised landed property, to three persons absolutely, as tenants-in-common, coupled with a secret trust for charitable purposes. One of the legatees at the time the will was made was informed of the trust, the other

After his death a suit was instituted by two of the devisees against the other two, the alien, testator's next of kin & the A.-G. as representing the Crown, to have the rights of the parties declared.

The ct. refused to make any declaration, except that the lands were not subject to any trust.—BURNEY v. MACDONALD (1845), 15 Sim. 6; 6 L. T. O. S. 1; 9 Jur. 588; 60 E. R. 518.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

492. Time of taking effect—General reference.]—HARE v. HARE, No. 490, post.

493. Construction—Referential trusts in same instrument.]—Testator bequeathed his residuary estate, referred to as "the residuary trust funds," as to two-thirds in trust for the children & remoter issue of his son as his son should appoint, & in default of appointment for the children of his son as therein mentioned, but so that no appointee should take any part of the trust funds remaining unappointed without bringing the share appointed into hotchpot, & as to a moiety of the other third upon "the like trusts" in favour of his son & issue as had previously been declared of the two-thirds. In the events which happened A. became entitled to the two-thirds under an appointment, & to a share in the one-third in default of appointment:—Held: there was no presumption or rule of law applicable to a case of this kind, & upon the true meaning & effect of the will the hotchpot clause applicable to the two-thirds had no reference to anything except the two-thirds, & the hotchpot clause referentially incorporated in the trusts of the moiety of the one-third had reference only to the moiety of the one-third, so that A. could take her share in the one-third without bringing the two-thirds into hotchpot.—Re WOOD, WOODHOUSE v. PACKER, [1913] 1 Ch. 325; 82 L. J. Ch. 183; sub nom. Re BEAUMONT, BEAUMONT-NESBITT v. PACKER, 108 L. T. 181; 57 Sol. Jo. 283.

A. In General.

496. Intention of settlor—Settlement conformable to limitations of real estate.]—Devise in strict settlement, with power to the tenants for life to jointure, on condition that two-thirds of the portion should upon such marriage be settled; one-third upon the eldest son of the marriage & one other third upon the younger children.

Upon the intention, that the settlement should be conformable to the limitations of the real estate, a trust for the father for life was established; & the interest of the eldest son was not to be divested except by his death under twenty-one without issue male.—BURRELL v. CRUTCHLEY (1809), 15 Ves. 544; 33 E. R. 860, L. C.

497. Mortgage with provision for reconveyance on trusts of settlement—By tenant in tail in possession.]—Under a settlement of real estates made in 1831, A., in 1884, was tenant for life in possession, B. first tenant in tail, & C. second tenant in tail in reversion. B., being a lunatic, C., with the consent of A., disentailed his interest & resettled the estates, with a power to charge the same, which was exercised. In 1893 B., who was then tenant in tail in possession, acting by C. as his committee, mortgaged the estates with a proviso that on redemption they should be “reconveyed by the mtgees. to the uses, upon the trusts & with & subject to the powers & provisions in & by the settlement (of 1831) declared & contained”:—Held: notwithstanding that the estate tail was barred by virtue of Fines & Recoveries Act, 1833 (c. 74), s. 21, the proviso for redemption in the mtge. of 1893 was valid & operative, so that the uses, created by the settlement of 1831 were revived subject to the re-settlement of 1881.—Re OXENDEN'S SETTLED ESTATES, OXENDEN v. CHAPMAN (1904), 74 L. J. Ch. 234.

B. Use of Particular Words.

498. Trusts “capable of taking effect”—Estate tail not revived.]—An Act of Parliament reciting a will by which estates were devised to A. for life, remainder to his first & other sons in tail, remainder to B. in tail, & that B. had suffered a recovery to the use of A. in fee; directed the estates to be sold, & other estates to be purchased & conveyed to such of the uses of the will as, at the time of the sale, should be existing, undetermined & capable of taking effect. The estates were sold, & the proceeds invested in other estates, which were conveyed to such of the uses of the will as were then existing, etc.:—Held: B. did not take an estate tail in the purchased estates.—WORTHAM v. MACKINNON (1831), 4 Sim. 485; 58 E. R. 181.

499. — Time for taking effect.]—(1) A general reference in a gift to the terms of a former disposition does not determine the time when the gift is to take effect.

(2) By a marriage settlement a fund was settled by the husband upon trusts in favour of the husband & wife during their respective lives, & after the decease of the survivor in trust for the children. Another fund was settled by the husband's mother in trust for herself for life, & after her decease upon such of the trusts thereinbefore declared concerning the first fund in favour of the children as should be then subsisting or capable of taking effect:—Held: the trust of the second fund in favour of the children arose at once upon the death of the tenant for life in the lifetime of the husband & wife.—HARE v. HARE (1876), 24 W. R. 575.

501. — Effect of failure of part of original trust.]—(1) Where property is appointed, under a special power, to the uses of a prior settlement or such of them as are “capable of taking effect,” & some of the uses so incorporated fail for remoteness or by reason of the cestuis que trust not being objects of the power, the void trusts may be disregarded as not being “capable of taking effect,” & the power will be otherwise well exercised.

(2) The phrase “capable of taking effect” means what the law allows to take effect, & is not confined to trusts which by reason of the intervening circumstances are still in fact subsisting & capable of coming into existence.—Re FINCH & CHEW'S CONTRACT, [1903] 2 Ch. 486; 72 L. J. Ch. 690; 89 L. T. 162.

502. “Same trusts”—“As near as might be.”]—A. by deed, granted a rentcharge on certain freehold estates to trustees, in trust for C. for life, for her sole & separate use, remainder to her children in fee as she should appoint, & in default of appointment, to them equally, remainder to E., the sister of C. & her children in like manner, remainder to the settlor. The deed also contained a power to C. to appoint all or such part of the rentcharge as she thought fit to her husband, & a proviso that it should be lawful for the settlor to redeem the rentcharge upon the payment of £10,000 to be settled to the same uses. Soon after the settlor made a codicil to his will, whereby he gave £10,000 to G. on the same trusts, “as near as might be,” as those in the deed, for her “sole use & benefit”:—Held: G. took a life interest in the fund, with powers of appointment to her children & husband; but in default of appointment, the children took nothing.—BERCHTOLDT (COUNTESS) v. HERTFORD (MARQUIS) (1844), 7 Beav. 172; 2 L. T. O. S. 325; 8 Jur. 50; 49 E. R. 1029.

503. — Realty on trusts of personalty.]—By the marriage settlement of A. a sum of £8,000 stock was settled upon himself & his intended wife for their joint lives, & the life of the survivor, & then for the benefit of their children; & if no children, in trust for the settlor, his exors., administrators & assigns. After his marriage A. made his will & thereby gave his real estate to P. & his heirs, upon the same trusts, as near as could be, as were declared of the stock by the settlement; & after giving certain pecuniary legacies he bequeathed all the rest of his moneys & property of any kind to P., his exors., administrators & assigns upon trust & for the benefit of the objects of his settlement as he might think best. A died, leaving his widow, but no issue of the marriage. P. declined to take probate of the will:—Held: whether the course taken by P. had or had not the effect of depriving him of the discretionary power given to him by the will, he could not, in the events that had happened, exercise that power so as to affect the rights of the parties interested under the will & settlement; & the effect of these instruments was to give a life interest to the widow in the real & residuary personal estate, impeachable of waste as to the

504. ———.]—Personal estate was given upon a contingency, & the "income" was to accumulate in the meanwhile as long as lawful. There was a proviso, that subject thereto, the "income" was to be paid to the person "entitled in immediate expectancy." The rents of the real estate were then given upon the same trusts as had been declared concerning the "residuary personal estate," & upon the personal estate becoming vested, to convey the real estate to the same person:—Held: all the trusts of the personal estate were applicable to the real estate, & the person entitled in immediate expectancy to the income of the personal estate was also entitled to the rents of the real estate.—WESTCAR v. WESTCAR (1856), 21 Beav. 328; 25 L. J. Ch. 866; 52 E. R. 880.

In 1819 certain freeholds were settled "upon such & the same trusts, & for such & the same ends, intents, & purposes, & subject to such & the same powers, provisos, & declarations as in the indenture of Mar. 7, 1818, are expressed, declared, & contained of & concerning the premises therein mentioned & described, or as near thereto as the difference of the respective estates of A. M., M. J., & A. J.," the trustees, " & their respective heirs, exors., & administrators, therein respectively would admit, to the intent that the rents, issues, & profits of the hereditaments & premises might be had, received, & taken, & the hereditaments & premises held, sold, conveyed & assigned, & the produce thereof paid & applied unto such person or persons, & in such manner, & at such time & times, in every respect as in the indenture of Mar. 7, 1818, is expressed & declared of & concerning the premises therein particularly mentioned & described" :—Held: the want of proper words of inheritance was not fatal, but A. & B. took equitable estates in fee simple, & not for life only, in one-third share of the freeholds.—*PUGH v. 507. ———.]—A. on the marriage of his daughter I. covenanted to pay to the trustees of the settlement then made, as a provision for his daughter on her marriage, £2,000. The trusts were to pay the income to I. for life, & after her death to her husband for life, & after the decease of the survivor to the children, & if there should be no child then to such person as she should appoint, & in default of appointment then to her next of kin; & in the same settlement he covenanted that his exors. should pay the further sum of £2,000 to the trustees, to be held upon the same trusts within six months after his decease. On the marriage of his daughter E. he covenanted to pay to the trustees of the settlement then made £2,000 within one month after the marriage. The trusts of this sum were to pay the income to G., the husband of E., for his life, & after his death to E. for her life, & after the death of the survivor to the children, & if there should be no child then to such person as E. should appoint, & in default of appointment to her next of kin. By his will testator directed "that the covenants on his part contained in the settlements made on the marriage of his daughters, for the payment of moneys & annuities for the benefit of themselves & their respective children & grandchildren as therein stated, should be performed"; & proceeded as follows:—"In addition to the property settled by my daughter I.'s marriage settlement, I give the further sum of £8,000 to the trustees, etc., to be held, etc., upon the same trusts in all respects, for the benefit of my daughter I. & her children, as thereby declared as to the property thereby settled; & in addition to the property settled by my daughter E.'s marriage settlement, I give the further sum of £8,000 to the trustees of such settlement, to be held upon the same trusts in all respects, for the benefit of my daughter E. & her children & grandchildren, as thereby declared as to the property thereby settled :—Held: the words "to be held, etc., upon the same trusts in all respect for the benefit of my daughter & her children & grandchildren, as thereby declared as to the property thereby settled," were to be construed as words of reference, incorporating the trusts of the settlements in the will.—Re PALMER (1858), 3 H. & N. 26; 30 L. T. O. S. 309; 157 E. R. 374.

508. Upon similar trusts.—By a settlement made on the marriage of J. & E. certain amounts of stock were invested in the names of trustees upon trust, in the events which happened, as E. should by deed or will appoint, & the trustees, out of other stocks therein mentioned, were empowered to raise £20,000 & invest the same in the purchase of lands with power to resell the same, & it was declared that it was the intention of the parties thereto that the same should be considered as personal estate. An estate called S. was accordingly bought by the trustees, who held the same in fee simple upon the trusts of the settlement.

E. survived her husband J., & by her will, dated in 1836, reciting the above settlement, gave the first-mentioned stock to which she was thereunder entitled, & all the residue of her estate upon trust as to a moiety for B. for life, with remainder, if the trustees should think fit, in trust for B.'s husband for life; & as to the other moiety thereof, on similar trusts, in favour of H. & her husband; & in certain events, which came to pass "upon the same trusts in favour of B. & her issue," as were thereinbefore declared concerning the other moiety. H. predeceased B., who was married to P.; & after the death of B. the trustees declared that B.'s husband should have the income of both moieties for life:—Held: the trustees were right in their determination.—ASHBURNHAM v. ASHBURNHAM (1849), 14 L. T. O. S. 367; 13 Jur. 1111.

509. Upon the trusts & for the purposes mentioned.—Testator gave all his real estate to trustees upon trust for his wife for life, & after her decease upon trust to sell & divide the proceeds as in the will mentioned. He also gave the residue of his personal estate to his widow absolutely. By a codicil to his will, after reciting that he had sold part of his real estate, he directed his trustees to sell the residue, & hold the proceeds upon trust for his wife for life, & after her decease, upon the trusts & for the purposes in his will expressed & declared, as concerning "all his real & personal estate":—Held: the proceeds of the sale of the remaining real estate must be held upon the trusts declared by the will concerning the real estate.—BAKER v. RICHARDS (1859), 27 Beav. 320; 34 L. T. O. S. 36; 5 Jur. N. S. 697; 54 E. R. 125.

510. "Same or like trusts."—By the marriage settlement of B. & A. a sum of £7,500 4 per cent. Bank Annuities was settled upon trust for B. for his life, then for A. for her life, & after the death of the survivor of B. & A. for the children of B. by A. equally; the shares of sons to vest at twenty-one, or dying under that age leaving issue then living. The settlement contained the usual maintenance & advancement clauses; & a covenant to settle after-acquired property of A. on her for life, & after her death "for all & every the issue of the then intended marriage upon the same or the like trusts, & subjects to the usual powers & provisos as were therein-before expressed & declared of & concerning the sum of £7,500 4 per cent. Bank Annuities." A. died, leaving two sons, the only children of the marriage, both of whom had attained twenty-one, married, & had issue, each three children, all infants. On a bill filed to obtain a declaration as to the construction of the covenant to settle the after-acquired property:—Held: the word "issue" in the covenant must be restricted to "children" & the two sons, having survived their mother, & attained twenty-one, were entitled to her after-acquired property absolutely between them.—MARSHALL v. BAKER (1862), 31 Beav. 608; 7 L. T. 303; 9 Jur. N. S. 396; 11 W. R. 78; 54 E. R. 1275.

511. ——Testator by his will gave his residuary estate to trustees upon trust to divide it equally between his children, & by a codicil directed them to hold the sum of £2,000, part of the share of his daughter E., in trust for her for life, & after her death for her children, with an ultimate trust for the survivors or survivor of testator's children, & the issue of such of them as should be then dead leaving issue; & testator directed his trustees to hold the sum of £2,000, part of the share of his daughter C., in trust for her for life, & after her death "upon such & the like trusts as are hereinbefore declared of the sum of £2,000 secured for the benefit of my daughter E., as fully & effectually as if such trusts were here fully repeated"; & testator directed his trustees to hold the sum of £2,000, part of the share of his daughter L., "upon such & the like trusts as are hereinbefore declared of the two several sums of £2,000 & £2,000 secured for the separate use & benefit of my daughters E. & C., as fully & effectually as if such trusts were here fully repeated." E. died, leaving issue, & C. without having had any issue:—Held: the £2,000

forming part of the share of C. did not pass after her death upon the same trusts as E.'s £2,000, i.e. to the issue of E., but upon trusts corresponding to those, but having C.'s name substituted for E.'s, so that, in the events which had happened, it passed to the survivors of testator's children, & the issue of such of them as were dead leaving issue.—Re SMITH, BASHFORD v. CHAPLIN (1881), 45 L. T. 246.

512. ——Under a settlement the ultimate trust, after certain prior trusts which failed & determined, was for the settlor, his exors., administrators, & assigns for his & their absolute benefit. By his will the settlor bequeathed a moiety of his residuary estate upon such & the same or like trusts as were declared by the settlement:—Held: the ultimate trust for the settlor to be read into his will was inoperative.—Re POWELL, BODVEL-ROBERTS v. POOLE, [1918] 1 Ch. 407; 87 L. J. Ch. 237; 118 L. T. 567; 62 Sol. Jo. 330.

513. "In like manner."—Testatrix directed trustees to make an investment, & out of the dividends to pay annuities of £100 each to his two nieces & his nephew for life, & the capital to their children respectively, & to apply £100 a year in the maintenance of the children of D., a deceased nephew, until twenty-one, when he gave them the capital fund producing this annuity. He bequeathed his residue to his two nieces & nephew & the children of D. "in equal shares, in like manner as was therein-before mentioned with respect to the annual sums of £100 bequeathed to them respectively":—Held: the children of D. took one-fourth only of the residue.—EAMES v. ANSTEE (1863), 33 Beav. 264; 55 E. R. 369.

514. ——By a settlement, trustees were to raise £2,000 for A. for life, with remainder to her children, with powers for maintenance, advancement "or otherwise," & in default of children the fund was given to C. A like sum was given to B. for life, with remainder to her children, with the like provision for their maintenance "or otherwise," as before expressed, in respect to the £2,000 given to A. & her children, "or otherwise in like manner, to all intents & purposes, as if such trusts & provisions were there fully repeated":—Held: this included the gift over to C., & on the death of B. without children C. was entitled to the second sum of £2,000.—Re SHIRLEY'S TRUSTS (1863), 32 Beav. 394; 55 E. R. 154.

515. "At same times & in same manner."—Where there is a bequest to A. for life, & then to the surviving children of A. to be paid to them on attaining twenty-one, & a bequest to B. for life, & then to the children of B. "at the same times, & in the same manner" the surviving children only of B. take under the second bequest.—SWIFT v. SWIFT (1863), 1 New Rep. 353; 32 L. J. Ch. 479; 11 W. R. 334.

516. "In same manner."—Testator gave to his sons H. & J. £16,000 upon special trust & confidence to invest & to pay the income of £8,000, part thereof, to his daughter A. for life for her separate use, & after her death to divide the £8,000 amongst her children at twenty-one years of age. He then directed that H. & J. should pay the income of the remaining £8,000 to his daughter S. for life in the same manner in every respect & subject to the same control as he had directed as to his daughter A., it being his intention that his daughters' fortunes should not be subject to the debts of their husbands. He then gave to H. & J. a sum of £6,000, to invest & pay the income to his son S., & to divide the principal amongst his children. The sums were charged on real estate. There was power to apply the income for the maintenance & education of the daughters' & sons' children. The daughter S. died, leaving four children who had attained the age of twenty-one. The fund representing to £8,000 had been paid into ct.:—Held: by implication the four children were entitled to the fund.—SWEETING v. PRIDEAUX (1876), 2 Ch. D. 413; 45 L. J. Ch. 378; 34 L. 517. On such trust as shall correspond with trusts hereinbefore declared.]—Testatrix, having by her will directed her trustees to stand possessed of a fifth of her residuary estate upon trust for a woman for life, & after her death upon trust for her children, directed them to stand possessed of three other fifth parts upon such trusts for three other women respectively as should correspond with the trusts thereinbefore declared concerning the fifth part or share of the first-mentioned woman:—Held: the three women took only life interests, with remainder to their respective children, in the same manner as the first-mentioned woman & her children took.—SMITH v. GREENHILL (1860), 14 W. R. 912.

518. "On like trusts."]—Settlement contained a covenant that "any real or personal property, estate, or effects whatsoever" accruing to the wife or to the husband in her right at any time after the settlement should be settled "upon & for the like trusts, intents, & purposes as were thereinbefore declared of & concerning the said principal sum of money." The wife did become entitled to real estate during the coverture:—Held: the expression "like trusts" was equivalent to "corresponding trusts," the intention of the parties having been that, in the events which had happened, personal estate should go to the wife's next of kin, real estate to her heir-at-law.—BRIGG v. BRIDGE (1885), 51 L. J. Ch. 464; 52 L. T. 753; 33 W. R. 451.

SUB-SECT. 3.—EXERCISE OF POWERS.

Sec. generally, POWERS, Vol. XXXVII., pp. 401–403, Nos. 134–145.

519. Power of sale—Trust created upon powers "ulterior to limitations" in settlement—Conveyance by tenant for life.]—By an indenture of settlement certain estates were settled upon A. for life, with remainder to his son for life, with remainders over. A power was also given to the trustees to sell the estate during the lives of A. & his son. By a subsequent deed A. conveyed his life estate to his son, & after his death to remain & continue to the several uses & estates, & upon the powers, provisions, declarations, & agreements, expressed & declared of & concerning the hereditaments by the previous indenture ulterior to the limitations therein for the respective lives of A. & his son:—Held: it was not intended, under this clause, to limit a new life estate to the son, without the subsequent powers, during his life, but the estate was still subject to those powers which, in the first deed, were to be found subsequent & in addition to the limitations to the son for life; & the trustees consequently retained the immediate power of sale.—MORGAN v. RUTSON (1848), 10 Sim. 234; 17 L. J. Ch. 419; 11 L. T. O. S. 238; 12 Jur. 813; 60 E. R. 863.

520. —Whether power to give receipts included.]—Testatrix, by her will, declared that every person thereby made tenant for life should have such & the like powers of leasing, selling & exchanging any part of the devised estate as were by her father's will given to the tenants for life & in tail mentioned in his will, or to the trustees thereof. It appeared that the father's will did not give a tenant for life or in tail any power of leasing, selling or exchanging, but gave trustees full power to sell & exchange the hereditaments therein comprised, & to give receipts for the purchase-money:—Held: tenant for life in possession of the estate devised by testatrix had the same powers of selling & exchanging that estate as were by the father's will given to the trustees, but such powers did not extend to giving receipts.—COX v. COX (1855), 1 K. & J. 251; 60 E. R. 451.

521. Power to charge—Whether subject to restrictions applicable to original power.]—A., tenant for life in possession, joined with B., the next heir, in the settlement of certain estates. The settlement contained, among other things, a power for B. in case of the death of his first wife & his marrying again, to charge the settled estates with portions for the younger children of his second marriage, the amounts being regulated with reference to the number of children that might be born of the first marriage. The deed contained a proviso that if the brothers of B. should respectively come into possession of the settled estates, "either before or after their marriage with any woman or women," they might charge all or any part of the estates with "the like sum or sums of money for the portion or portions of their child or children, other than an eldest or only son, as B. is entitled to do before or after his marriage with any woman or women after the decease of his first taken wife by virtue of the provision hereinbefore contained:—Held: this was an absolute power, which, with reference to a younger brother of B. succeeding to the settled estates, was not subject to the restrictions & contingencies which applied to B. himself in making a charge for the children of his second marriage.—HARRINGTON (EARL) v. HARRINGTON (DOWAGER COUNTESS) (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 295, H. L.

522. Who may exercise powers—Trusts created by tenant for life—On powers of original settlement.]—The trustees of a settlement had vested in them a power of leasing during the minority of the beneficial owners, a power of sale & exchange at the request of the tenants for life, & a power to cut timber, but they had no legal estate, except to preserve contingent remainders. The first tenant for life devised his own estates to other trustees in fee, to the same uses & subject to like powers as the settled estates stood limited:—Held: the powers over the devised estates were exercisable by the trustees of the settlement, & not by the trustees of the will.—TAYLOR v. MILES (1800), 28 Beav. 411; 3 L. T. 115; 6 Jur. N. S. 1063; 54 E. R. 424.

SUB-SECT. 4.—MULTIPLICATION OF CHARGES.

523. Presumption against multiplication.]—A trust created by reference to other trusts ought not, generally speaking, to be so read as to create a duplication of charges.—HINDLE v. TAYLOR (1855), 5 De G. M. & G. 577; 25 L. J. Ch. 78; 26 L. T. O. S. 81; 1 Jur. N. S. 1029; 4 W. R. 62; 43 E. R. 994, L. C.

524. —.]—In cases where trusts of a fund are declared by way of reference to the trusts of a prior fund, such limitations ought not to be so construed as to multiply the charges which had been made on such prior fund.

Where, therefore, A. by his will bequeathed to trustees a considerable sum of money in trust for R. during his life, after his decease in trust to raise portions of £5,000 each for the younger children of R. as therein named, with gifts over, subject to these charges, & he also bequeathed one-fifth of his residuary personal estate upon the trusts before declared concerning the capital sum of which the dividends were given to R. for life, the residuary personal estate being of very considerable amount:—Held: the children of R. were not entitled to double portions of £5,000 each.—BOYD v. BOYD (1863), 2 New Rep. 486; 9 L. T. 166.

525. —.]—Trusts of residue created by reference to other trusts are not to be read as creating a duplication of charges on the estate in the absence of testator's clear intention to that effect.

Where testator gave to his widow the interest of £20,000 during widowhood, & on remarriage the interest of £10,000 for her life, the interest on the balance of the £20,000 to be in that case for the benefit of their children; " & as to all his residuary estate " gave it upon the same trusts as were declared in regard to the £20,000 & the widow remarried:—Held: the residuary clause did not operate to give to her either the income for life of a moiety of the residuary estate or of an additional £10,000.—TREW v. PERPETUAL TRUSTEE CO., [1895] A. C. 264; 64 L. J. P. C. 49; 72 L. T. 241; 43 W. R. 636; 11 T. L. R. 259; 11 R. 423, P. C.

526. —.]—A marriage settlement declared trusts of the wife's fund in favour of the children of the marriage, with a hotchpot clause. The ultimate trust was in favour of the wife. The settlement also declared trusts of policy moneys on the husband's life by reference to the trusts of the wife's fund except that the ultimate trust was in favour of the husband. The wife's fund was appointed unequally; the policy moneys went in default of appointment. On a question whether the hotchpot clause operated on both funds:—Held: the two funds were distinct for the purposes of hotchpot. Such clauses are only read as one with the view of preventing duplication of charges, & with no other object.—Re BRISTOL (MARQUIS), (GREY (EARL) v. GREY, [1897] 1 Ch. 946; 66 L. J. Ch. 446; 70 L. with trust limitations in the nature of cross-remainders between such children as to both original & accruing shares, & failing all such issue then upon the trusts thereafter declared; & M. empowered each of his children to appoint in favour of his or her wife or husband a yearly rentcharge not exceeding one-third of the income of the hereditaments to which he or she might be entitled for life; & he devised & bequeathed his residuary estate upon the like trusts, & with the like powers, in favour of all his children, & should correspond with those thereinbefore declared concerning the estates specifically devised:—Held: the rule against duplication of charges did not apply, & M.'s children were empowered to appoint to their wives or husbands annuities charged on their shares of the residuary estate, not exceeding one-third of the income of those shares, in addition to the rentcharges on the properties specifically devised.—*COOPER v. 528. —.]—W., by his will in 1880, bequeathed a legacy of £10,000 upon trust for his daughter C., who afterwards was married to G., for her life, with remainder in trust for such of her children or remoter issue & in such manner as she should by deed or will appoint & in default of appointment, in trust for her children as therein mentioned & in default of children & in the events which happened of testator's son B. dying in the lifetime of the daughter without leaving issue, in trust for testator's next of kin at her death. The will then conferred a testamentary power upon the daughter to appoint a life interest in the settled legacy to any husband of hers, such life interest to take effect in precedence of the trusts thereinbefore declared concerning the legacy after the decease of the daughter. The residue was given, as to one moiety thereof, " upon the same trusts as are hereinbefore declared of the legacy of £10,000 hereinbefore bequeathed by me for the benefit of my daughter C. & her issue." The other moiety was settled upon the testator's son B. for life with remainder for his children, with an ultimate remainder, in default of children, " upon the same trusts, both as to the capital & the income thereof, as are hereinbefore declared of the legacy of £10,000, hereinbefore bequeathed by me for the benefit of my daughter C. & her issue or as near thereto as the circumstances of the case will admit."

Testator's son, B., died in 1894, without having had issue; & C. died in 1923, without having had issue, & having made certain testamentary dispositions. Thereupon questions arose: (a) whether upon the true construction of testator's will his daughter C. had power to appoint a life interest in favour of her husband, G., in the residuary estate of the testator, & (b) whether, if she had that power, she had effectually exercised it. As regards (b), it is sufficient to state that the ct. decided that question in the affirmative:—Held: upon the true construction of testator's will, notwithstanding that the bequest of the residue contained no reference in terms to any powers applicable to the settled legacy, inasmuch as the power extended to an appointment of the whole income of the legacy & was not limited to an appointment of a definite sum, the effect of the referential words was to make the power of appointment in favour of a husband applicable to the residue as well as to the settled legacy; & such construction of the will did not offend the rule against a multiplication of charges; & deft., G., was entitled to a life interest in the residuary estate of testator as well as in the settled legacy of £10,000.—Re ARNELL, Re EDWARDS, PRICKETT v. PRICKETT, [1924] 1 Ch. 473; 93 L. J. Ch. 276; 130 L. T. 700; 68 Sol. Jo. 367.

529. Express provision against multiplication.]—By the will of B., personal estate of very great value was given to trustees upon trust to purchase land to be settled to such of the uses, & upon & for such of the trusts, & subject to such of the powers & provisions in & by a certain indenture of settlement limited & declared of & concerning the family estates thereby settled as at the time of testator's decease should be subsisting or capable of taking effect, but not so as to multiply any charges or powers of charging. At the time of testator's death the family estates stood limited to H. for life, remainder to C. for life, remainder to his first & other sons successively in tail.

Both H. & C. had powers of charging the estates with jointures for their widows & portions for their younger children. H. had charged a jointure for his widow which never took effect. C. had charged a jointure of £1,000 a year for his widow, & £10,000 for the portion of each of his younger children. H. died in 1891, & in 1892 C. & his eldest son executed a disentailing deed of (inter alia), the personal estate directed to be laid out in the purchase of lands to be settled, whereby the disentailed property was conveyed to such uses as they should appoint. This was a summons by C. & his eldest son, asking that the personal estate might be paid to them:—Held: the lands to be purchased with testator's personal estate would be subject only to the powers of charging existing & exercisable at the date of his death, not to the charges which had then not been created in exercise of those powers, & therefore, upon C., & his eldest son releasing their powers of charging, which still subsisted, the personal estate might be transferred & paid to them for their own use.—Re BERNERS, BERNERS v. CALVERT (1892), 67 L. T. 819; 41 W. R. 188; 37 Sol. Jo. 80; 3 R. 153.

SECT. 6.—EXECUTORY TRUSTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

530. Distinguished from executed trust.]—A. devised £10,000 to trustees in trust to be laid out in lands, & to be settled on B. for life, without waste, remainder to trustees & their heirs for the life of B. to support contingent remainders, with a power to B. to make a jointure, remainder to the heirs of the body of B. remainders over, & by the same will devises lands to B. to the same uses, & dies, leaving C. exor.; B. sues C., the exor., for the deeds relating to the lands that are in his hands, & to have the money laid out in lands & settled. Decreed to have an estate tail in the lands devised, & consequently to be entitled to the deeds relating thereto, though as to the lands to be purchased, that being executory, & in the power of the ct. B. was to be but tenant for life, with remainder to his first, etc., son.

LORD KING, C., declared the ct. had a power over the money directed by the will to be invested in land; that the diversity was, where the will passes a legal estate & where it is only executory & the party must come to this ct. in order to have the benefit of the will: that in the latter case the intention should take place & not the rules of law.—*PAPILLON v. 531. —]—A. devises lands to his sister B. & C. & their heirs & assigns, upon trust, that until his granddaughter D. should marry or die, to receive the profits, & thereout to pay her £100 a year for her maintenance, the residue to pay debts & legacies.

After payment thereof, in trust for the said D. & upon further trust, that if she lived to marry a protestant of the Church of England, & at the time of such marriage be of the age of twenty-one or upwards, or if under that age, such marriage be with the consent of the said B. then to convey, with all convenient speed, after such marriage, to the use of the said D. for life, sans waste, voluntary waste in houses excepted; remainder to her husband for life; remainder to the issue of her body, with remainders over; & upon further trust, that if the said D. die unmarried, then to the use of B. for life; remainder to the son of his other granddaughter E. in tail; remainder to deft. C.; remainder to his first & other sons; remainder to A.'s right heirs; & upon further trust, that if D. marry not according to the will, then upon such marriage to convey to trustees, as to one moiety to the use of D. for life, then to trustees to preserve contingent remainders: remainder to her first & every other son, being a protestant, with remainders over; & as to the other moiety, to the son of his daughter E. in like manner. A. dies, D. attains her full age; & upon a treaty of marriage with F. applies to B. & C. for a conveyance to herself for life; remainder to her intended husband for life; remainder to the issue of her body; B. executes such conveyance, but C. refuses; D. suffers a recovery of the whole to the use of herself in fee, & then marries F. who made a considerable settlement upon her; she covenants to settle her estate upon husband & wife; remainder to first, etc., sons in tail, remainder to survivor of husband & wife in fee. They bring a bill to compel C. to convey, etc., decreed, not an estate tail to D., but an estate for life sans waste, ut supra, as being the intent of A. upon the will with remainders over in strict settlement.

I think in cases of trusts executed or immediate devises the construction of the cts. of law & equity ought to be the same; for there testator does not suppose any other conveyance will be

*b. Definition.]—*In the proper sense an executory trust is a trust in which something more is to be done.—

BOSWELL, v. DILLON (1844), 6 I. Eq. L. 389.—IR.

*c. Difficulty of construction.]—*There is no difference between executory trusts, whether created by marriage articles, by a voluntary settlement, or by a will; in the latter cases there is more difficulty in arriving at the

made; but in executory trusts he leaves somewhat to be done; the trusts to be executed in a more careful & more accurate manner (LORD TALBOT, C.).—GLENORCHY (LORD) v. BOSVILLE (1733), Cas. temp. Talb. 3; 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 743; 25 E. R. 628, L. C.

532. —[.]—There is a difference between a trust which by the words of a will is executed, & a trust which is only executory; as a devise to A. & his heirs, upon trust to convey to B. & the heirs of his body, is a trust executory, & this ct. will make heirs of the body words of purchase; but a devise to A. & his heirs in trust for B. & the heirs of his body is a trust executed, & B. will have an estate tail; & this ct. has greater right to interfere in one case than the other. As all trusts in notion of law were executory before the Statute of Uses, which has executed many of them, which are thereby become legal estates, & wherewith this ct. does not interfere, therefore in order to bring a trust within the jurisdiction of this ct. it must be executory; but where a trust is executed testator has left nothing for a ct. of equity to do.—(LORD HARDWICKE).—BAGSHAW v. 533. —[.]—Devise to trustees to raise by mtgc., or lease, so much money as would pay testator's debts, & afterwards to permit A. to receive the rents & profits for his life, & after his decease, to permit his eldest son, & the issue male of such eldest son, to receive, etc., & for want of issue of A. to B., in like manner; & for want of issue of both, or if their issue should die without issue, then over.—Held: a trust estate, & A. took an estate tail.

The distinction between trusts executed & executory seems to be ill expressed. . . . In all cases of the latter description something is left to the judgment of the trustees, & consequently of the ct. (LORD NORTHINGTON, C.).

Words declaring a trust must be expounded in this ct. as they would be at law (LORD NORTHINGTON, C.).—STANLEY v. LENNARD (1758), 1 Eden, 87; Amb. 355; 28 E. R. 617.

534. —[.]—It is said that this is an executory trust, & that it is a general rule in the case of an executory trust, that where an estate for life is given, together with a limitation to the heirs of the body, this ct. will take the words to be words of purchase, & direct a conveyance of the estate accordingly. The words executory trust seem to me to have no fixed signification. LORD KING, in the case of Papillon v. Voice, No. 530, ante, describes an executory trust to be, where the party must come to this ct. to have the benefit of the will. But that is the case of every trust; & I am very clear that this ct. cannot make a different construction on the limitation of a trust than cts. of law could make on a limitation in a will, for in both cases the intention shall take place. & it would be most dangerous to say, that this ct., & a ct. of law, could be warranted in raising different interests from the same words. Yet I am of opinion that the determinations on those cases, which are called cases of executory trusts are sound determinations (LORD NORTHINGTON, C.).—AUSTEN v. Whether a trust executed or executory; & if the latter, whether an estate tail in R. W. G. Qu.: the point too doubtful to compel a purchaser to take the title. No difference between marriage articles & executory trusts in wills except that the former afford prima facie evidence of intent, which does not belong to the latter.

One is a good deal confused by the inaccuracy of the expressions trust executory & executed. The latter, no doubt, in one sense of the word, is a trust executory; that is, if A. B. is a trustee for C. D., or for C. D. & others, that, in this sense, is executory, that C. D., or C. D. & the other persons, may call upon A. B. to make a conveyance & execute the trust (LORD ELDON, C.).—JERVOISE v. NORTHUMBERLAND (DUKE) (1820), 1 Jac. & W. 559; 37 E. R. 481, L. C.

I do not doubt that every trust directed to be performed is executory in a certain sense, because the estate is in the trustees, & they are to convey it to the uses, but beyond that, I submit this as a point not at all in doubt, that this is not an executory trust in the sense in which we employ that term in equity (LORD ST. 542. Gift over on failure of issue.—[Testator devised his real & personal estate to trustees, & gave life estates therein to several persons, namely A., B., etc.; & after their death he directed the trustees to pay the income to M. & N., during their respective lives, share & share alike; & in case either of them should, after the deaths of A., B., etc., depart this life without leaving issue male of his body, in trust to pay the whole income to the survivor for life; & he directed that if M. should, after the deaths of A., B., etc., die before N. leaving issue male, then the trustees should convey, a moiety of the real estate, to the use of the first & other sons of M. in tail male, with remainder to N. for life, with remainder to his first & other sons in tail, & in default to testator's right heirs, & lay out a moiety of the personal estate in land, & convey same to trustees to the like uses. Testator made a similar disposition mutatis mutandis of the other moiety in case of the death of N., after the death of A., B. leaving issue male, & he provided that in case M. & N. should die without leaving issue male, or if such issue male should die without leaving any issue male, the trustees should convey the property to such person as should, at the death of the survivor of M. & N., be the right heir of testator. It will be seen that no provision was made for the event, which happened, of M. dying without issue before the death of A., B. N. survived M. & A., B., etc., & M. died without issue:—Held: the trusts on which the question arose were not executory so as to alter the construction as arising on an executed trust.—FRANKS v. 544. Gift of sum to be settled.—[Testatrix by her will gave £500 to each of her two nieces to be settled as she should thereafter describe, & directed that the provision therein made for her nieces should not be subject to the control of any husbands they might marry, but should remain vested in her exors. in trust until a proper settlement was made. By a codicil she directed that if either of her nieces should die without leaving issue, the legacy given to her should devolve to the other niece & her children, with a gift over if both should die without issue:—Held: this was an executory trust.—HOLLOWAY v. 545. — On marriage.]—M., by his will, left shares of his property to his daughters "to be settled on themselves at their marriage." 546. Direction to purchase realty.—Trust to divide after life interest.]—Testator empowered his trustees to purchase freeholds "to the amount of £1,500 of his personal estate, for the use of A. during life, & then divided among his issue, if any":—Held: this was executory.—HADWEN v. HADWEN (1857), 23 Beav. 551; 53 E. R. 217.

547. Provision for settlement.—Direction for shifting clause.]—Testator devised real estate to trustees, upon trust to convey & settle same to the use of A. for life; remainder to the use of the children of A. in strict settlement; remainder to the use of B. for life; with remainders over. Testator directed that the settlement should contain a name & arms clause; & in case of refusal, the estate of the person refusing was to cease, & was to go over to the person next entitled in remainder under the limitations, as if the person so refusing, being tenant for life, were dead, or tenant in tail, were dead without issue, but without prejudice nevertheless to prior contingent estates. The settlement was also to contain a shifting clause, directing, in the events which happened, namely, that if A. should succeed to certain other estates, he should resettlement them; & in default, that the settled estates should go to such uses, etc., as if the limitations in A.'s favour had not been inserted. A. had no children, & made default in resettling the other estate:—Held: the trust was executory.—D'EYN-COURT v. GREGORY (1864), 34 Beav. 36; 3 New Rep. 628; 10 L. T. 317; 10 Jur. N. 548. "Release & convey"—Reference to distinct trust of realty.]—A settlement, on marriage, of real estate, upon trust for the intended wife for life, remainder to the husband for life, & after the death of the survivor, "in trust for & to be released & conveyed unto" the children, as the parents or the survivor should appoint; in default, "in trust for & to be released & conveyed unto" the children as tenants in common in tail; & in default of issue, if the wife should survive the husband, "in trust for & to be released & conveyed unto" the wife, "her heirs & assigns for ever." By the same deed, personal property was assigned to the same trustees, upon trust to pay the income & principal "to such person & persons, for such uses, ends, intents, & purposes, & in such manner & form, & subject to the same powers, provisoes, contingencies, declarations, & agreements as were thereinbefore expressed concerning the payment by the trustees of the rents & profits of the said real estate thereby conveyed, & concerning their release & conveyance of the same, or as near thereto as circumstances & the nature of the case would admit":—Held: this trust of the personality was not rendered executory by reference to the direction to release & convey the real estate, such direction being merely superadded to a distinct declaration of trust of such real estate.—DONCASTER v. DONCASTER (1856), 3 K. & J. 26; 2 Jur. N. S. 1066; 60 E. R. 1007.

549. "So far as rules of law or equity will permit"—Settlement of personality to devolve as realty.]—A bequest or settlement of chattels upon the same limitations as real estate, whether immediate or by way of trust executed, vests them absolutely in the first tenant in tail at birth, & this whether the limitations of the chattels be expressed in extenso or created by reference to the limitations of the realty; & such reference may be effectually made either by declaring that the chattels are to go upon the limitations of the realty or by saying that they are to be treated as heirlooms.

The addition of the words "as far as the rules of law or equity will permit" & the circumstance that the legal interest is left in exors., will not prevail to alter the general rule or make the trusts executory.—SCARSDALE (LORD) v. CURZON (1860), 1 John. & H. 40; 29 L. J. Ch. 249; 3 L. T. 29; 6 Jur. N. S. 209; 70 E. R. 653.

550. ———.]—By his will testator bequeathed to trustees certain chattels upon trust "to permit the same to go & be held," so far as the rules of law & equity would admit, with the B. estate, devised by the will of his mother, as heirlooms, for the person, or persons, who, under the trusts of the same will concerning that estate, should for the time being be entitled thereto, & so that none of the articles should, for the purpose of transmission, vest absolutely in any person who might become tenant in tail male by purchase of the B. estate & should not attain twenty-one.

By a second gift testator bequeathed to the same trustees certain other chattels commonly used with mansion house at B. "upon such trusts, & subject to such powers as, having regard to the nature thereof, & so far as the rules of law & equity will permit, will best correspond with the uses, trusts, & powers" declared & contained of the B. estate, yet so that none of the same chattels should, for the purpose of transmission, vest absolutely in any tenant in tail by purchase of the same estate who should not attain twenty-one.

Under the will of testator's mother the B. estate was settled, in the events which had happened, upon testator for life, with remainder to his son P., born in the lifetime of testator's mother, for his life, with remainder to the use of the first & every other son of P., of whom there were none, with with remainder to his fourth son & his issue male, in strict settlement; & he devised his freehold estates in Cardiganshire to his fourth son & his issue male, with remainder to his fifth son & his issue male, in strict settlement. By a shifting clause it was provided that if his fourth son, or any issue male of his fourth son, should become actually entitled to the possession of his Worcestershire estates, & if his fifth son or any of his issue male should be then living, the limitations of his Cardiganshire estates in favour of his fourth son, or his issue male, should absolutely cease. He bequeathed his leasehold estates in Cardiganshire to trustees upon such trusts as, regard being had to the difference in the tenure of the premises respectively, would best or most nearly correspond with the uses declared of the Cardiganshire freeholds. The third son died a bachelor in the lifetime of the fourth son, who thereupon entered into possession of the Worcestershire estates:—Held: the fifth son was entitled to the rents & profits of the Cardiganshire leaseholds, because they were given upon an executory trust; & assuming the shifting clause, if applied verbatim to the leaseholds, to be bad for remoteness, it ought to be so modified as to render it free from that objection.—*MILES v. A. In General.

559. Whether trust valid—Covenant to surrender copyholds—& to stand possessed for trustees until surrender—Covenant not enforceable.—Upon a voluntary covenant to surrender copyholds, & in the meanwhile to stand possessed of them for trustees for the volunteers, though the covenant to surrender per se cannot be enforced, yet a valid trust is constituted for the volunteers.—STERLE v. WALLER (1860), 28 Beav. 466; 3 L. T. 74; 6 Jur. N. S. 1004; 54 E. R. 445.

560. — No cestui que trust to enforce.—Testator bequeathed £12,000 to trustees upon trust to invest the whole or part in the purchase of an advowson; & until his son should be presented to a benefice producing a net £1,000 per annum or die, the trustees were to present some fit person to the benefice, the advowson whereof they had purchased, & subject as aforesaid, were to hold the advowson in trust for the son, his heirs & assigns; & in the meantime, & until such investment, the trustees were to lay out the £12,000 upon certain securities, & during twenty-one years from testator's death, to accumulate the income, & the income of the £12,000 & the accumulations was, after the twenty-one years, in case the advowson had not been purchased, to belong to the son, his exors. or administrators; & if the son died or was presented to a benefice of £1,000 a year before a contract for the purchase of the advowson had been entered into, or if part of the £12,000 or the accumulations remained after completing such contract, the same was to be paid to the son, his exors. or administrators. The £12,000 having been set apart & invested & accumulated, but no advowson having been bought, the son, thirteen years after testator's death, claimed the entire fund:—Held: although there was no person who could enforce the trust, yet, as the trustees were willing to carry it out, & could present any fit person they chose to the benefice when they had bought the advowson, the son was not the exclusive object of the trust, & was not entitled to a transfer of the fund.—GOTT v. NAIRNE (1876), 3 Ch. D. 278; 35 L. T. 209.

561. — — ——Then it is said, that there is no cestui que trust who can enforce the trust & that the ct. will not recognise a trust unless it is capable of being enforced by some one. I do not assent to that view. There is not the least doubt that a man may if he pleases, give a legacy to trustees, upon trust to apply it in erecting a monument to himself, either in a church or in a churchyard, or even in unconsecrated ground, & I am not aware that such a trust is in any way invalid, although it is difficult to say who would be the cestui que trust of the monument (NORTH, J.).—Re DEAN, *COOPER-DEAN v. The tenant for life is not entitled to the interest of the residue till one year from testator's death. The general rule fixing the end of the first year as the period at which the enjoyment of the tenant for life is to commence is not to be departed from unless it appears that testator's intention is incompatible with it.—*TAYLOR v. 571. ————]—Testator directed his residuary personal estate to be invested in land from time to time & at all convenient opportunities, & in the meantime to be accumulated:—Held: the tenant for life of the land was entitled to the interest of the uninvested personalty, as from a year from testator's death.

In the same case, testator gave £100 a year to his wife if she recovered her mental faculties, otherwise £200 a year, & to be paid out of his govt. stock; & he directed, as soon as conveniently might be after her death, the investment of the stock out of which the annuity was payable, in land to be conveyed in strict settlement. The wife did not recover:—Held: the extra £200 a year became part of the residue to be invested, & did not belong to the tenant for life.—TUCKER v. BOSWELL (1843), 5 Beav. 607; 40 E. R. 713.

572. ————]—Testator directed his residuary estate to be laid out in the purchase of land as soon as a convenient purchase could be found in the county of Y. which, upon a fair letting, would produce a yearly rent equal to 3½ per cent. upon the amount of the purchase-money, & in the meantime, the interest of his residuary estate to be accumulated. forming part thereof & to arise thereby, to pay his debts, etc., & to invest the residue of the moneys to arise from his general personal estate which should remain after answering the purposes aforesaid, in the usual securities, & from time to time, to alter, at their or his discretion, as well the same stocks, funds & securities, as also such of the stocks, funds or securities being part of his personal estate, which they or he should not think proper to sell & convert into money; & to stand possessed of all the trust moneys, stocks, funds & securities which should be so purchased as aforesaid, & which should remain unconverted into money as aforesaid, in trust to pay the interest, dividends & annual produce thereof, as & when the same should be received, to pltf.

The residue of testator's estate, after payment of his debts, etc., consisted, in part, of sums of long annuities & bank & East India stock, which still remained unsold:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the income accrued on those sums, from testator's death.—*WREY v. Testator possessed long annuities & leaseholds:—Held: (1) they ought to be converted into 3 per cents., & the widow was merely entitled to the dividends thereon; (2) a tenant for life of a residue was entitled during the first year to the dividends on so much 3 per cents. as would have been produced by the conversion of the property at the end of that year.—*MORGAN v. By his will he bequeathed all the residue of his real & personal estate to trustees, to get in, etc., with all convenient speed, & invest the moneys, & pay the interest or dividends to the widow for life, remainder to his children. A subsequent proviso in the will empowered the trustees to postpone any sale, etc., at their direction, & directed the rents & produce of any unsold part to go as the interest of the sales moneys would have gone if such part had been sold. The books were made up half yearly. The trustees did not get in the share in the partnership:—Held: the widow was entitled to 5 per cent. interest on the amount at which testator's stock-in-trade had stood in the books of the concern on the periodical stock taking next preceding his decease, from the day of his death up to the day of the periodical stock taking next succeeding his death, the widow was entitled to all the profits accruing on testator's share from such next succeeding stock taking up to the determination of the partnership, over & above interest.—*JOHNSTON v. 585. ———.]—Testator, possessed of shares in several ships, bequeathed his personal estate to trustees, upon trust for sale & conversion, & to pay the income arising therefrom to his wife for life. The will contained a power for the trustees to postpone such sale & conversion "for so long as they may think fit," & a direction that the income arising from his unconverted personal estate should be paid & applied in the same manner as the income of the moneys produced by such conversion would be payable or applicable. The ships were not sold until two years after testator's death, & in the interval made several voyages, from which large profits resulted:—Held: such profits must be treated as income & not capital, & were, therefore, payable to the tenant for life.—LEAN v. LEAN (1875), 32 L. T. 305; 23 W. R. 484.

586. ———.]—Testator devised & bequeathed all his real & personal estate not by his will otherwise disposed of to trustees upon trust to sell & convert the same, with power to postpone conversion, as long as the trustees thought proper & to retain any investments subsisting at his death, whether of the kind thereafter authorised or not, & out of the proceeds to pay debts & legacies, & at the discretion of the trustees to invest the residue & to stand possessed of the residuary trust moneys & the investments for the time being representing the same, thereafter called "the residuary trust funds," in trust to pay the income thereof to his wife during her life.

At the time of his death testator was possessed of preference & ordinary shares in a coalmining co. The ordinary shares, although not of a wasting character, were not authorised by the investment clause in the will. The trustees therefore sold some of them, & proposed to sell more on a favourable opportunity. They declined to pay to the widow in the meantime the full dividends on the ordinary shares thus retained:—Held: in the absence of any express or implied gift of the income pending conversion, the widow was entitled only to interest at 3 per cent. on the value of the ordinary shares at testator's death, & the rest of those dividends must be invested. This rule was well settled, & applied to unauthorised securities whether they were of a wasting character or not.—Re CHAYTOR, CHAYTOR v. HORN, [1905] 1 Ch. 233; 74 L. J. Ch. 106; 92 L. 587. ———.]—This was an adjourned summons to determine how the proceeds of a policy of insurance for £1,050, taken out on Mar. 25, 1844, should be dealt with. Testator, who was entitled to the policy, died on July 24, 1876, & after his death £140 was expended out of his estate in premiums. Testator's will was dated Apr. 3, 1876, & under it there were two tenants for life, & there were two remaindermen. There was a trust for sale & conversion, but the trustees had power to postpone conversion. The policy fell in on Feb. 13, 1891. It was argued on behalf of the tenants for life that after repaying the premiums the sum that would produce the amount received at 4 per cent. compound interest, calculated from one year from testator's death, was capital, & that the surplus was income, & belonged to the tenant for life.—*Re NASH, SWEET v. One of the partners died, & by his will bequeathed all of his property upon trust after conversion & investment for his widow for life with remainder over. The contracts were not completed until six years after testator's death, when his share of the partnership assets was paid to the trustees:—Held: his widow was entitled to interest at 4 per cent. from his death on the value of his share in the partnership assets.—JACKSON v. estate consisted of £12,000, invested in a partnership. Under a stipulation in the deed of partnership the surviving partner gave a warrant of attorney to the exors. of testator, securing payment of the £12,000 by instalments of £1,500 a year, with interest at 5 per cent. on the unpaid balances:—Held: the rule laid down in Howe v. Lord Dartmouth, 7 Ves. 137, as applied to this case, required the trustees not to convert the property, but to set a value upon it, & to give the tenant for life 4 per cent. on the value, & to invest the residue of the surplus income, paying the income of these investments to the tenant for life, & appropriating the corpus to the remainderman.—MEYER v. There was no trust for conversion & no investment clause. Part of the estate consisted of stocks in a gas co. The question was raised whether the gas stock should be sold, & the proceeds invested in New Consols; & whether testator's widow was entitled to retain the whole of the income of testator's estate which she had actually received & any accruing income of the gas stock:—Held: the tenant for life under a will could not take in specie the income of property which was of a perishable or wasting nature; in order to give the wife the income of the property as it stood, you must find something equivalent to a specific gift; there being no specific gift here, the rule in *Meyer v. Certain creditors who had notice of the deed, & after such notice, made use of a mtge. security, which had been previously given them by debtor in respect of a debt due at the time of the execution of the deed, were not permitted to take advantage of the deed, after having claimed in opposition to it by asserting their title as mtgees. in respect of a debt prior to the execution of the trust deed.—*PERRETT v. By the terms of the deed, the trustee was directed to pay to some of the creditors their debts, & to others their debts with interest:—Held: the latter creditors had a priority over the former in regard to interest, although the former might be entitled to interest as against the surplus of the estate.—*JENKINS v. 619. Trust to raise fund to satisfy mortgages—
Voluntary settlement mortgagees cestuis que trust.]

—By a voluntary settlement certain freehold estates were settled, subject to the mtges. subsisting thereon, to the use of the settlor for life, with remainder to the use of trustees for five hundred years, & subject thereto in strict settlement; & the trusts of the term were declared to be that the trustees should during the period of twenty-one years from the death of the settlor receive out of the rents of the estate the annual sum of £1,000 & accumulate it at compound interest, & should at the expiration of that period, or from time to time during that period as they might think fit, apply the accumulated fund in satisfaction of the mtges. then charged on the estate, & should pay the surplus of the rents to the person entitled to the immediate reversion of the estate. Seven years after the death of the settlor the first tenant in tail in possession barred the entail & acquired the fee simple subject to the mtges.; & he then claimed the right to stop the accumulation & to receive the accumulated fund & the whole future rents of the estate:—Held: the mtgees. were cestui que trust under the deed equally with the owner of the estate, & he could not stop the accumulations or receive the accumulated fund without their consent.—*Re FITZGERALD'S SETTLEMENT, FITZGERALD v. 620. Exercise of jurisdiction—Distinguished from enforcement of other trusts.]—The distinction between the exercise of the jurisdiction of the ct. in cases of trusts for the benefit of particular persons & the cases for trusts for creditors is, that in the latter cases the ct. will examine into the circumstances under which the deed was executed, & carry on its investigation into what may have subsequently occurred.—SMITH v. HURST (1852), 10 Hare, 30 ; 22 L. J. Ch. 289 ; 20 L. T. O. S. 303 ; 17 Jur. 30 ; 68 E. R. 826.

621. Parties to action for enforcement—One or more creditors on behalf of all—Deed executed by all creditors—Creditors numerous.]—A bill to carry the trusts of a creditor's deed into execution may be filed on behalf of all the creditors by one of them only, where they all executed the deed but were very numerous.—WELD v. BONHAM (1824), 2 Sim. & St. 91; 2 L. J. O. S. Ch. 193; 57 E. R. 280.

622. ——— Must have common interest.]— Bill to enforce the trusts of a creditor's deed containing an ultimate trust for debtors, must, in order to avoid the necessity of making debtors parties, contain a distinct allegation, as to the amount of fund to be distributed, & that there will be no surplus. If it pray for the administration of the whole estate without making debtors parties it will be demurrable.

A Bill by a creditor on behalf of himself & all others, parties to a trust deed, must show that they have all a common interest; therefore it cannot be brought to enforce an equity for payment of a larger amount of debt than that for which pltf. has signed, or to rescind a sale, however inequitable, which has been sanctioned by a great body of the creditors.—BEDFORD v. GATES (1840), 4 Y. & C. Ex. 21; 4 Jur. 1201; 160 E. R. 903.

623. — []—Where property was conveyed to four trustees for such of the creditors of a firm as should execute the deed, & twenty-six creditors, including the four trustees, executed the deed, a suit instituted seventeen years afterwards, by some of the creditors, on behalf of themselves & the others, was sustained against the trustees, they objecting that it was defective for want of the other creditors as parties.

In a suit by some of many creditors, on behalf of themselves & the others, for an account of property which had been vested in defts., the trustees, for the benefit of such creditors, & one of the trustees died after answer, the other trustees are not necessary parties to the bill of revivor, or revivor & supplement, against the representatives of deceased trustee.—*BATEMAN v. 624. — Scheduled creditors — Who have executed deed.]—A debtor conveyed certain of his estates to trustees, in trust to raise a fund for payment of his creditors named in a schedule, & raise an annual sum for his own benefit. Several of the creditors executed the conveyance; but the trustees did not sell the estates, the creditors having received sums in or towards satisfaction of their debts out of other estates conveyed by debtor upon the same trusts. A judgment creditor, whose name was not mentioned in the schedule, filed his bill against the trustees of the first-mentioned estates, & debtor stating as above, & that the trustees had entered into the receipt of the rents of those estates, the value of which greatly exceeded the scheduled debts, & praying that his debt might be raised & paid out of such parts of those estates as should not be sold for payment of the scheduled debts, & that an account might be taken of the receipts & payments of the trustees, & for a receiver & an injunction to restrain the trustees from paying any part of the rents or produce of the estates to debtor. The trustees demurred, because the scheduled creditors who had executed the conveyance were not parties to the bill. Demurrer allowed.—COCKER v. EGMONT (LORD) (1833), 6 Sim. 311; 58 E. R. 610.

634. Form of decree.]—(1) Where a trust is created by deed for the payment of debts; if a bill is filed by one of the creditors to enforce the payment of his debt; that purpose can only be effected by the general execution of the trust. The decree ought to direct such execution & an inquiry as to all the debts owing & payable under the trust, & that they should be paid according to their priorities.

(2) A decree for payment of the debt of one creditor, under a deed of trust, which provides for the payment of other creditors is erroneous. So if the bill, stating A. to have been the survivor of the trustees named in the deed, makes the heir of A. a party to the suit, as such supposed survivor & that allegation proves to be false, the decree made upon such state of the pleadings is erroneous.

(3) A debt by simple contract does not carry interest, because provision for its discharge is made by a deed of trust; such a deed per se does not import contract or trust for the payment of interest, especially where the creditors have not signed the deed, & no agreement is made to charge the land & discharge the person.—*HAMILTON v. 640. ——Expressed or implied.—STANDING v. BOWLING, No. 862, post.

641. ——*By a settlement dated Dec. 14, 1852, S. appointed lands after her death to the use of trustees, their heirs & assigns, upon trust that the trustees should secure the rents, & after payment of outgoings apply the residue to the maintenance of A. during her minority & after her attainment of the age of twenty-one to permit her to use & occupy the premises & secure the rents thereof during her life for her separate use & after the death of A. to the use of the children of A. for such interest or shares as she should by deed appoint, & in default of appointment to the use of the children of A. as tenants in tail in equal shares with cross-remainders between them, & in default of such issue to the use of certain other persons. By deed poll dated Dec. 3, 1896, A. appointed that the trustees of the settlement should from & after her death stand possessed "of the trust funds & property" in trust for her four sons "in equal shares," without proper words of limitation. The settlement consisted of lands & money, then invested in stocks, upon trust for purchase of land. A question having arisen as to whether the appointment passed the fee simple or only the life interest to the four sons:—Held: words of limitation were not absolutely indispensable in grants of an equitable fee simple, because the estate granted depends upon the intention as expressed in the whole deed, & in this case the fee simple in the realty passed because it was unlikely that the appointer intended to grant the absolute interests in the stocks & only the life interest in the realty.—Re NUTT'S SETTLEMENT, *McLAUGHLIN v. as a perpetual inheritance for the heirs of such property:—Held: as there was no restriction against alienation & no clear expression of intention to create a fidei commissum, no fidei commissum had been created.—SCHOEMAN v. REGISTRAR OF DEEDS, [1915] T. P. D. 11.—S. AF.

642. By same rules as legal estate.]—Trusts & legal estates are to be governed by the same rules, is a maxim which has obtained universally; it is so in the rules of descent, as in Gavelkind & Borough English lands, there is a possessio fratris of a trust, as well as of a legal estate; the like rules in limitations, & also of barring entails of trusts, as of legal estates. . . . There is no exception out of this general rule, nor indeed is there any reason there should; & it would be impossible to fix the boundaries, & show how far, & no further, it ought to go (JEKYLL, M.R.).—BANKS v. 666. Notices to trustees—Unnecessary to validity of assignment.—A voluntary assignment by deed of the assignor's interest in a sum of stock standing in the names of trustees, upon trust for him, is a complete transfer of such interest as between the donee & the representatives of the donor, although no notice of the deed was given to the trustees, in the donor's lifetime; because no further act on the part of the donor was requisite to complete the gift.

In such a case the donee could compel the trustees to transfer the stock to him, without making the donor or his representatives parties to the suit.

If, however, the trustees, before notice of the deed, transferred the stock to another person, the donee would have no remedy against them.—DONALDSON v. DONALDSON (1854), Kay, 711; 23 L. J. Ch. 788; 23 L. T. O. S. 306; 1 Jur. N. S. 10; 2 W. R. 691; 69 E. R. 303.

SECT. 12.—ENFORCEMENT OF TRUSTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

670. Necessity for beneficial interest.—When a trust is declared of land for the person entitled thereto, no party can avail himself of this trust without establishing alunde that he is entitled thereto.—WALTERS v. WEBB (1869), L. R. 9 Eq. 83; 39 L. J. Ch. 414; 21 L. T. 657; 18 W. R. 86; on appeal (1870), 5 Ch. App. 531, L. C. & L. J.

677. Trusts for sale of estate—Trustees not found—Substituted service on defendant's solicitor.]—On a bill to enforce the performance of trusts for the sale of estates, part of which had been sold, against the trustees who could not be found, substituted service was ordered on deft.'s solr., who had acted on his behalf in the business of the preparation of the trust deed, & of all the sale which had taken place under it.—*HORNBY v. 678. Order for execution & accounts—Notwithstanding pendency of action—In which additional relief sought.]—The ct., upon the hearing of a claim, made an order for taking accounts & executing a trust; & held that the pendency of a suit by bill, in which the same accounts & directions would be necessary, & which sought additional relief in respect of alleged breaches of trust, was not a ground for staying the order upon the claim.—SCOTT v. HASTINGS (LORD) (1851), 9 Hare, 35; 20 L. J. Ch. 530; 17 L. T. O. S. 220; 15 Jur. 572; 68 E. R. 404.

679. Trust of personal chattel.]—(1) Cts. of equity will not lend their assistance to enforce the specific performance of ordinary contracts for the sale & purchase of chattels, unless there be something very special in the nature of the contract. On the other hand, if a trust be created, the circumstance that the subject-matter is a personal chattel will not prevent this ct. from enforcing the due execution of that trust.

(2) Trusts may be constituted not merely by direct declaration of trust, but also by the constructive operation of the consequences flowing from the acts of parties.—POOLEY v. BUDD (1851), 14 Beav. 34; 51 E. R. 200.

682. Enforcement against foreign government.]

—By a contract dated in Mar. 1862, between the Peruvian Govt. & a Peruvian co., the co. were to have, for eight years from the date of the contract, the exclusive privilege of consigning guano to Great Britain & Ireland, & the net proceeds were to be held in London by the consignees, T., B., & co., at the disposal of the Peruvian Govt., after setting apart preferentially the sums required for payments in respect of the Peruvian debt.

The Peruvian Loan, 1862, was raised in London by the issue of bonds upon the express hypothecation, in addition to the guarantee of the Peruvian Govt., of the guano to be imported into the Colonies & Belgium, as well as the guano to be consigned by the Consignment co. to Great Britain & Ireland. 8 per cent. on the sums subscribed was to be applied by T., B., & co. out of the proceeds of guano towards the redemption of the bonds by purchases at the market price whenever the bonds were at or below par, & by drawings whenever the bonds were above par.

In 1865 the Peruvian Loan, 1865, was contracted by the issue of bonds at 83½, since which time T., B., & co., as general financial agents of the Peruvian Govt., had, instead of redeeming bonds of 1862 by purchases at the market price, cancelled such bonds, which had been received in exchange for bonds of 1865, issued at 83½, such price being higher than the quoted price of bonds of 1862 at the time.

In a suit by a bondholder on behalf of himself & the other bondholders against T., B., & co., the co. & the Peruvian Govt. to have all the guano in Great Britain & Ireland & the colonies consigned to & coming to the hands of T., B., & co., pursuant to the contract between the Peruvian Govt. & the co., applied in the redemption of the loan of 1862, according to the terms of the bonds:—Held: the doctrines of the ct. as to trusts were not applicable either to the foregoing contract or to the contract between the Peruvian Govt. & the bondholders, both of which were Peruvian contracts, & to be construed according to the law of Peru, & assuming that the doctrines as to trusts did apply, the ct. could have no jurisdiction to enforce them against the property of a foreign Govt. in the hands of its agent in this country.—*SMITH v. E. afterwards appointed her interest in the bond to certain persons, in order to indemnify them in case they should not be able to recover the whole of a sum appropriated by her husband, who was their solr., & for no other consideration appearing upon the deed:—Held: this was an executed trust, to which, though without consideration, the ct. would give effect.

A declaration of trust is considered in a ct. of equity as equivalent to the transfer of a legal interest in a ct. of law; & if the transaction by which the trust is created is complete, it will not be disturbed for want of consideration (LORD LANGDALE).—*COLLINSON v. 708. Whether trust created—Renewal by person partly interested—Trust only when special duty exists.]—There is no authority for the general proposition that if a person only partly interested in an old lease obtains from the lessor a renewal, he must be held a constructive trustee of the new lease, whatever may be the nature of his interest or the circumstances under which he obtained the new lease. A person renewing is only held to be a constructive trustee of the new lease if, in respect of the old lease, he occupied some special position by virtue of which he owed a duty towards the other persons interested: as, for example, in the case of a renewal by a tenant for life of settled leaseholds, or by a partner of a partnership lease, or by a mtgee. of a mortgaged lease. In all such cases the new lease is treated as engrafted on or as forming part of the original lease.

A lessor granted a lease for seven years of a house in which the lessee carried on a profitable business. On the expiration of the term, the lessor refused to renew, but allowed the lessee to remain as tenant from year to year at an increased rent. During that tenancy the lessee died intestate, leaving a widow & three children, one being an infant. The widow took out administration to her husband's estate, & she & the two adult children, one of whom was a son, continued to carry on the business under the existing yearly tenancy. The widow & son each applied to the lessor for a new lease for the benefit of the estate, which he refused to grant, but, having determined the yearly tenancy by notice, he granted to the son "personally" a new lease for three years at a still further increased rent.

In an action which had in the meantime been instituted by the three children, including the infant, against the administratrix for administration of intestate's estate, the administratrix applied to have the new lease treated as having been taken by the son for the benefit of the estate & for an account of the rents & profits received by him:—Held: the evidence took the case out of Ex p. Grace, No. 710, post, in that it showed that the right or hope of renewal had been determined by the lessor himself before the son intervened, so that the new lease could not be treated as an accretion to the estate of deceased, & also that the son had in no way abused his position nor stood in any fiduciary relation towards nor owed any duty to the other persons interested in the estate; & he was therefore entitled to retain the lease for his own benefit.—Re BISS, BISS v. BISS, [1903]

The same rule holds though the lease at the time of the purchase was vested in a trustee upon trusts under which he could not have granted a renewal of the underlease & though the tenant for life outlived by twenty-five years the time at which the underlease would have expired by effluxion of time.—*GIDDINGS v. Thereupon W. obtained a renewal, without prejudice to the question in dispute, & subsequently, to avoid litigation, purchased the reversion in fee. He subsequently paid off the charges, & mortgaged the premises in fee. By his will, reciting that the charges were

737. — Assignee of first life tenancy—Entitled in ultimate remainder—Reversion acquired on failure to renew lease.]—A leasehold for lives was devised by testator who died in 1820 to trustees, on trust for a tenant for life & other persons in remainder, the ultimate remainder in fee being given to the tenant for life. The first trust was to renew the lease from time to time, paying the necessary fines & expenses out of the rents, or raising them by mtge. In 1825 the trustees obtained a renewed lease for three lives, one of which was that of the tenant for life. In 1855 & 1859 respectively the other two lives dropped. In Oct. 1870, the tenant for life contracted to sell all his interest in the property to B., & a conveyance was executed in Mar. 1879. In Dec. 1876, the Ecclesiastical Comrs., in whom the reversion subject to the lease was then vested, & who would not renew the lease, contracted to sell the reversion to B., & in Aug. 1879, they executed a conveyance to him, the conveyance being expressly made subject to "such trusts, equities, estates, & interests" as then affected the leasehold interest. In June, 1878, the School Board for London, under their statutory powers, took part of the property, & in Jan. 1880, they paid the purchase-money & compensation money into ct. The legal estate in the lease was outstanding in the representatives of the last surviving trustee of the will:—Held: irrespectively of the form of the conveyance of the reversion to B., it was, according to the ordinary doctrine of a ct. of equity, impossible for him to purchase the reversion otherwise than as a trustee for the persons interested in the lease under the trusts of the will, & subject to his right to be recouped the purchase-money, he was only entitled to an order for payment on the interest on the fund in ct. during the life of the tenant for life under the will.—Re RANELAGH'S (LORD) WILL (1884), 20 Ch. On a summons taken out in these circumstances to ascertain whether the purchaser was a trustee for the remaindermen:—Held: there being no case in which the doctrine of Keech v. though the ejectment proceeding has been perfected, & the eviction actually had, yet the new interest is a graft upon the old, & as such, subject to the annuity.—JONES v. KEARNEY (1842), 1 Dr. & War. 131.—IR.

m. — Renewal to widow of tenant.]—The widow & administratrix of a tenant from year to year of a holding in Ulster continued in possession for two years after his death, & the tenancy having been then determined by notice to quit, offered no resistance to an ejectment brought by the landlord, who took formal possession, but left her in undisturbed occupation at the same rent.—Held: that, though there was no fraud in the transaction, the new tenancy was a graft on the old for the benefit of the next-of-kin of the intestate; even though there were a custom on the estate that a holding should not be divided amongst the next-of-kin of an intestate, but he given to the widow, if a desirable tenant.—KELLY v. 739. — In possession of mortgaged premises—Purchase under power of sale in mortgage.]—A. by will gave N. House & M. House to his daughter S., the wife of O., for life, with remainder to their children as tenants in common, & gave B. House, W. House, & Y. House to the children of J. equally. At the death of A. the children were infants, & N. House, M. House, & B. House were comprised in a single mtge. to X. to secure £1,350, while W. House & Y. House were subject to several mtges. to other persons. S. & O. & J. determined that, to give effect to the will the mtge. debt of £1,350 should be apportioned between N. House & M. House on the one hand & B. House on the other. O. & J. communicated with X., the mtgee., & it was arranged that N. House & M. House should be purchased by O. & B. House, W. House, & Y. House by J. for amounts equal to the sums due on the mtges., there being no valuation or bargaining, or evidence of the previous intention of the mtgees. to sell, although the power to sell had become exercisable. O. at once began to look out for sub-purchasers of N. House & M. House, & in Mar. 1880, a sub-purchaser of N. House having been found to buy it, O. raised the balance of the purchase-money payable by him on a mtge. of M. House. On completion the properties were conveyed to O. & J. respectively in the manner & with the recitals usual in the case of mtgees. selling under their powers of sale, & O. conveyed N. House to the sub-purchaser & mortgaged M. House for the balance. The value of the two houses was at least £1,580, whereas O. paid only about £1,246 for them. S. died in 1882:—Held: O. was a trustee of N. House & M. House, subject to the life interest of S., for the children of O.—GRIFFITH v. OWEN, [1907] 1 Ch. 195; 76 L. J. Ch. 92; 96 L. T. 5; 23 T. 740. By trustee—Lease not renewable by custom or contract.]—The doctrine that wherever the reversion or a lease which forms part of a trust estate is purchased by the trustee of the lease the purchase is for the benefit of the trust estate applies only to leaseholds which are renewable by custom or contract. Therefore if a trustee of a lease which is not thus renewable buys the reversion in the lease, he may, in the absence of fraud, hold it for his own benefit.—BEVAN v. WEBB, [1905] 1 Ch. 620; 74 L. 741. By encroachment on Crown lands—Grant of land by Crown.]—A., having made an encroachment on the lands of the Crown in the Forest of Dean, died seised of it, leaving a will by which he devised it to his widow for life, with remainder to ptfs. The widow entered into possession, & afterwards, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 42, authorising the making grants from the Crown for nominal considerations to the holders of the encroachments, she procured a conveyance from the Crown to herself in fee, & died, having devised the property to debts.:—Held: on the construction of the Act, it contained nothing to take the case out of the general rule, according to which, the grant having been obtained by the widow by virtue of a possession referable to her husband's will, must be treated in equity as made for the benefit of his devisees, &, on the death of the widow, the ptfs. were entitled to the land.

742. Augmentation of trust fund—Investment of dividends.]—B., a married woman, being possessed of money invested in the funds which she had saved out of her separate estate, transferred same into the names of C. & D., & by a deed declared the trusts to be for herself for life for her separate use, & after her decease for her husband for life, & after the decease of the survivor of them, for their two sons equally to be divided between them, to & for their own absolute use & benefit, & to be paid to them on their respectively attaining the age of twenty-five. It was also provided that if either of the two sons should die before attaining twenty-five, his share should become the property of the survivor, unless he should leave a wife or child; but in case both should die before attaining twenty-five, without leaving a wife or child then the fund was to be paid to B.'s sister. B. afterwards invested various other sums of money in the names of the same trustees, partly arising from the dividends of the original fund, & partly from the savings of her separate estate. The husband died in 1852; one of the sons in 1854, having appointed his brother his exor.; the other son in 1856, having appointed ptfs. his exors. Neither of them were ever married. B. after the death of her husband & sons, claimed the fund, alleging that she thought, when the deed was executed, & at the time when she made the additions to the original fund, that if her sons died in her lifetime without leaving issue, she would be entitled to it absolutely:—Held: the accumulations & also the additional moneys added to the fund were subject to the trusts of the settlement.—MUGGERIDGE v. STANTON (1859), 1 De G. F. & J. 107; 1 L. T. 144; 8 W. R. 69; 45 E. R. 300, L. C. & L. J.

The bankers invested the sum as directed, & paid the dividends of the aggregate fund to the husband during his life. No notice was given to the trustees of the fresh investment:—Held: there was no resulting trust of the sum of £2,000 for the husband, but it became subject to the trusts of the settlement as an augmentation of the trust fund.

(2) A fund was vested in trustees on the usual trusts of a marriage settlement. The husband added a further sum of £2,000 as an augmentation of the trust fund. 745. Additions by trustee to settled share—On erroneous construction of will.—Where the trustees of a will had voluntarily added certain sums to the settled share of a beneficiary under an erroneous impression as to the true construction of the will, & the will was subsequently construed by the ct. adversely to their impression :—Held : there was nothing on the evidence to show that the trustees held the contributed fund on the trusts of the will as construed by the ct., but only that they held the money for the benefit of the beneficiary under the will.—*Re WALTERS, NEISON v. 747. Gift of ground rents to "present mortgagees"—Leasehold premises mortgaged to trustees—Trustees hold on trusts of settlement.—B., by will dated Mar. 24, 1884, devised his freehold ground rent arising out of the house & premises, No. 7, W. terrace, formerly held by H., & all his interest in the premises, "to the present mtgees. thereof." At the date of the will, & of B.'s death, there was no mtgo. of the freehold ground rent in existence, but the leasehold premises out of which the rent arose were mortgaged by demise to the trustees of a certain settlement to secure moneys advanced by them out of the trust funds. These trustees & the beneficiaries under the settlement were alike strangers to B. :—Held : the ground rent passed under the devise to the trustees of the settlement, but they took upon the trusts of the settlement, & not beneficially.—Re PAYNE'S SETTLEMENT, KIRBLE v. PAYNE (1886), 54 L. T. 840.

748. Legacy to be appropriated out of estate—Appreciation of estate pending conversion—Trustee not liable for apportionment of increased value.—Testator by his will gave his real & residuary personal estate upon trust for sale & conversion, & as to the sum of £20,000, part of the trust moneys, upon trust for his son C. for life, with remainder to C.'s children, giving the residue of the trust moneys between his other two sons, & giving his trustees a discretionary power to postpone the sale & conversion of the estate so long as seemed to them expedient. The trustee, who was one of the residuary legatees, neither paid nor appropriated funds to meet the legacy of £20,000, but retained the trust estate in its original state of investment, meanwhile paying C. interest at 4 per cent. upon the amount of the legacy. The investments of the estate having risen considerably in value, C. & his children, more than ten years after the death of testator, claimed to participate in the increase of value, on the ground that the trustee, being a residuary legatee, could not retain profits caused by his own default :—Held : the residuary legatees must be treated as owners of the estate, subject to a charge thereon of the legacy, & C. & his children were only entitled to the amount of their legacy with interest at 4 per cent. from the end of the year after the death of testator.—*Re CAMPBELL, CAMPBELL v. 749. Acquisition of adjoining property—Purchase by tenant for life—Exercise of adjoining owner's right of pre-emption.—The tenant for life of settled property, having a statutory right of pre-emption as adjoining owner, purchased on his own account from turnpike trustees the site of a disused tollhouse, the conveyance being made to himself in fee. He made lasting improvements thereon, & died having devised the site to defts. :—Held : defts. were trustees of the site for the remaindermen entitled to the settled property, but the remaindermen could only enforce this equity on the terms of recouping the estate of the tenant for life not only the amount of the purchase-money but also the value of the lasting improvements.—ROWLEY v. GINNEVER, [1897] 2 Ch. 503; 66 L. J. Ch. 669; 77 L. T. 302.

750. Advantage obtained by tenant for life—Surrender of mineral rights by Crown.—A tenant for life, impeachable for waste, under a settlement which included real estate & unopened mines severed from the surface, which was not included in the settlement, granted a take note or licence for three years to search for & work gold or other ores in the mines subject to the rights of the Crown, if any. The tenant for life subsequently acquired a lease from the Crown for twenty-one years of the gold & silver ores in the mines together with a release of the Crown's statutory right of pre-emption over the base ores. He then granted further take note & leases of the mines for short terms, all of which expired during his life, & received rents & premiums. None of the take notes or leases were valid under Settled Land Acts, under which alone he had power to deal with the mines. On the expiration of the Crown lease he obtained a renewal for a further period of twenty-one years, & granted valid separate sub-leases of the gold & silver ores & of the base minerals for the residue of the Crown term less one day. On the death of the tenant for life in 1916 the tenant in tail in remainder, who had barred the entail, brought an action against the exors. of the tenant for life claiming the amount of the premiums & three-fourths of the rents received by him, & a declaration that pltf. was entitled to the subsisting Crown lease subject to & with benefit of the sub-leases :—Held : the tenant for life had used his position to obtain the Crown lease, & so far as the release of the right of pre-emption over the base ores was concerned that lease extended to something which was included in the settlement. He must therefore be taken to have acquired the lease as trustee for the beneficiaries, & pltf. was entitled to the unexpired portion of the lease subject to & with benefit of the sub-leases.—LLOYD-JONES v. CLARK-LLOYD, [1919] 1 Ch. 424; 88 L. J. Ch. 278; 120 L. T. 578; 35 T. L. R. 273; 63 Sol. Jo. 317, C. A.

(2) An agent employed to purchase cannot buy his own goods for his principal, neither can an agent, employed to sell, purchase for himself his principal's goods. Principals may either repudiate such transactions altogether or adopt & take the benefit of them.

Trustee—Purchase of land from profits of trust estate.]—A trustee purchases lands out of the profits received out of the trust estate, & takes the conveyance in his own name; though possible, if he be unable to make other satisfaction for the profits so misapplied, those lands may be sequestered; yet they cannot be decreed to be a trust for the cestui que trust, no more than if A. borrow money of B. & therewith purchases lands; these purchased lands are no trust for B., for it is not a trust in writing; & resulting trust it cannot be, because that would be to contradict the deed by parol proof, directly against Stat. Frauds; but if the purchase had been recited to have been made with the profits of the trust estate, this appearing in writing might ground a resulting trust.—KIRK v. WEBB (1698), Prec. Upon the bill of G. & P. this agreement was enforced against W. to the extent of £900, the alleged amount of G.'s debt, but no further; the actual debt having proved to exceed that amount; & not prevented from having effect, either by the circumstance that P.'s property fell short of the estimated amount, or of P.'s being at the time indebted to other persons besides G. & W., which formed no part of the consideration for the agreement, although noticed in W.'s undertaking as having been represented otherwise. 769. — Assignment of share of debt—Compromise between assignor & debtor.]—A. sued B., a debtor of his, intestate, upon a bond debt, & obtained a decree against him for the amount. B. appealed from this decree to the Sudder Ct. By a deed of arrangement entered into by A. & C. after the commencement of the suit, C. became entitled to a six ana share of the debt. Pending the appeal to the Sudder Ct., A. entered into a compromise with B., postponing the payment of the amount recovered by the decree, for three years, & foregoing altogether interest upon the principal. This was done without the privy or consent of C. B. failed to pay the amount within the stipulated time, & proceedings were taken by A. against him, but he had not realised the amount of the decree. In a suit by C. against A. to make him chargeable for the six ana share in the decree, the Sudder Ct. held that A. was chargeable to C. for such share, with interest.

Upon appeal, such decree reversed; the Judicial Committee holding, that A. must be treated as a trustee for C., & that in the absence of fraud upon the cestui que trust in executing the compromise, or that it was not beneficial for all parties, he was responsible only to C. for such amount of the debt as had been recovered, or without his wilful default might have been recovered.—*DOORGA PERSAD ROY CHOWDRY v. A. verbally agreed with B. to sell him certain shares in the co., & received the purchase-money for them, but the deed of transfer was not executed until after an order had been made for the winding up of the co. The official assignee refused to acknowledge the purchaser as proprietor of the shares:—Held: the agreement was conditional, on the approval of the purchaser by the directors, & the vendor could not enforce specific performance of it. Semle, in the absence of special stipulations, the payment of the purchase-money did raise a constructive trust, so as to entitle the vendor to indemnity from the purchaser against liabilities incurred in respect of the shares.—*BIRMINGHAM v. Purchaser let into possession—Purchase-money unpaid.—A contract for the sale of an estate was made in Mar. 1811, the agreement being that the purchase-money should be paid on May 13, following; & the purchaser was let into possession immediately on the execution of the contract. The purchase-money was not paid; but the purchaser, & persons claiming under him, continued in possession. In 1844 the assignees of the vendor filed their bill, claiming a lien on the estate for the purchase-money & interest from the day fixed for the completion of the contract:—Held: under a contract for the sale of land, the equitable title of the vendor, & those representing him, to recover from the vendee, & the obligation of the vendee to pay, the purchase-money, in the sense in which it is described as a trust, is not an express trust within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25; & therefore, the right of the vendor, as such cestui que trust, to a lien or charge upon the land for the amount of the purchase-money is not kept on foot, under the provision contained in that sect.—*TOFT v. c. Money for specific purpose placed in bank by agent.—Where money is given to an agent for a specific purpose & by him placed to the credit of a bank account against which he draws a cheque which he forwards to the designated beneficiary & the money is lying to the credit of the account when the cheque is presented, the transaction has passed beyond the stage of agency & is impressed with a trust in favour of the payee of the cheque & the cheque is irrevocable.—*MERCHANTS BANK OF CANADA v. 773. Executor suing on promissory note—Legatee convicted of felony—Trust for Crown.—Wills Act, 1844 (c. 26), s. 3, empowering testator to bequeath all personal estate which, if not bequeathed, would devolve upon his exor., does not enable testator to bequeath a promissory note made to him, so as to pass the right to sue in respect of it. Such right is in the exor. Where the legatee of such promissory note is convicted of felony, the forfeiture caused by such conviction does not divest the exor. of his right to sue; though he is a trustee for the Crown in respect of the proceeds of the suit.—BISHOP v. CURTIS (1852), 18 Q. B. 878; 21 L. J. Q. B. 391; 19 L. T. O. S. 217; 17 Jur. 23; 118 E. R. 332.

774. Money raised by statutory mortgage—Where in excess of statutory requirements.—A corp'n. entitled to an old canal commenced improvements in it, & borrowed large sums of money for that purpose, which they secured by mtges., comprising the canal & other property. They afterwards obtained an Act, which authorised them to complete the works, & empowered them to raise money for that purpose by mtge. of the canal & its tolls, without limit as to amount, & directed them to apply such money in completing the works, but did not, in the opinion of the ct., authorise them to apply any part of it in paying off existing mtges. The corp'n. raised money under this power, & applied part of it in paying off some of the old mtges:—Held: the money borrowed from the statutory mtgees., beyond what was wanted for purposes authorised by the Act, ought to have been repaid to them, & such moneys were to be treated as moneys held by the corp'n. in trust for the statutory mtgees., & not as borrowed moneys.—TREVILLIAN v. EXETER CORPN. (1854), 5 De G. M. & G. 828; 34 E. Rep. 896; 24 L. J. Ch. 157; 24 L. T. O. S. 149; 18 J. P. 806; 18 Jur. 1019; 3 W. R. 45; 43 E. R. 1091, L. J.J.

775. Property intended for inclusion in trust for named cestui que trust—Conveyance by settlor to third person.—R. P., being seised in tail of the estate R., executed in 1826 a settlement, by which on the marriage of his eldest son D., it was settled, subject to an annuity to himself, on D. for life, then to the first son of D. by that marriage, " & of the heirs male of such son lawfully issuing," & for want of such issue to the second, third, & fourth, etc., sons in the same manner, & for want of such issue to the right heirs of D. In 1827 R. P. entered into an agreement with D. by which, for valuable considerations therein mentioned, he covenanted to convey to D., subject to a life estate in himself, to the same uses as those of the R. estate, another estate called C., if, as he expected, he should become possessed of it through the death, without issue & intestate, of a lunatic brother. A commission was taken out against this brother, who was found to have been lunatic from 1823. In 1829, the lunatic died, & R. P. took possession of the estate C. In 1830, R. P. executed a deed, adviser.—Appl't. having acted for a long time as counsel & legal adviser of C., had in that employment acquired an intimate knowledge of C.'s property & liabilities, & had acted for him in compromising securities. After the relation of counsel & client had ceased, & without notice to C., appl't. bought those securities at a price less than their nominal amount, whilst a compromise was pending & feasible:—Held: the purchase was a trust for C., & appl't.

by which, subject to an annuity to himself, he conveyed the estate C. to H., his second son. D.'s wife died in 1829, & in 1833 D. married again, & covenanted to settle on this marriage the estate C. to the same uses as those declared of the estate R. in the first settlement. D., his second wife, & the children of both marriages, filed a bill against R. P. & H., to set aside the deed of 1830, as fraudulent, & to have a conveyance of the estate C. executed according to the deed of 1827; & in 1840, this House on appeal made an order to that effect. In the meantime G., a natural son of the lunatic, had raised a claim, as devisee of the estate C., under a will alleged to have been made by the lunatic before 1823. R. F. died, & G. & H. entered into an arrangement by which, in consideration of G. releasing his claims under the alleged will, H. agreed to convey to G. part of the estate C., of a certain value, & to assure to him the other part to supply any possible deficiency in that supposed value. D., his wife, & all his children, filed a supplemental bill against H. & G., to have a conveyance to the estate C. executed in conformity with the order of this House:—Held: H. was in the situation of a trustee of D. of the estate C., & must execute a conveyance of it, & that he was not relieved from that liability by any purchase of the alleged rights of G.—PERSSE v. PERSEE (1856), 5 H. L. Cas. 682; 27 L. T. O. S. 224; 2 Jur. N. S. 551; 4 W. R. 629; 10 E. R. 1069, H. L.

776. Recognition of trust by will—By surviving trustee.]—By a will, dated in 1761, a trust was created in favour of a certain class of testator's relations, nearly all of whom were paid their proportions. The surviving exor. & trustee of testator had the remainder of the funds standing in his name at his death, & by his will he recognised the existence of the trust & directed that it should devolve upon his nephew. Administration de bonis non was granted in 1822 to the surviving exor.'s estate, & subsequently to another person in 1826, when the remaining trust fund was mixed up with such administrator's personal estate & applied in the purchase of real estate. A bill was filed by a person claiming part of the legacy under the original testator's will, charging a breach of trust by the surviving exor., & that his real & personal estate were liable to make good the amount:—Held: upon demurrer to the bill, the real estate could not be charged with the legacy; there was an implied trust created by the will.—HENDERSON v. ATKINS (1859), 28 L. J. (Ch. 913; 33 L. T. O. S. 159; 7 W. R. 387.

777. Direction by testator to purchase stock—To increase pecuniary legacy.—Death before purchase completed.]—A direction by a testator to purchase Consols, obviously with a view of increasing a pecuniary legacy to his grandson, to whom he had bequeathed all the money & stock in the funds "which he might be possessed of, or entitled to, at the time of his decease," which direction was transmitted by the testator's country bankers on the same day they received it by letter to their brokers in London, will not constitute the person into whose name the stock is transferred a trustee for the specific legatee in case the testator should die before the purchase of the stock be completed.—THOMAS v. THOMAS (1859), 27 Beav. 537; 29 L. J. Ch. 281; 1 L. T. 208; 5 Jur. N. S. 1237; 8 W. R. 71; 54 E. R. 212.

778. Money paid for transmission to another.]—It was argued that the relation of trustee & cestui que trust was created by the mtgce. to S., but the trusteeship was only a constructive one. When a man paid another £100 to be given to A. the person who received the money became a constructive trustee for A., but was in no other sense a trustee (ROMILLY, M.R.).—ADSETTS v. HIVES (1863), 33 Beav. 52; 2 New Rep. 474; 9 L. T. 110; 27 J. P. 691; 9 Jur. N. S. 1063; 11 W. R. 1092; 55 E. R. 286.

779. Bank holding fund—For payments agreed between other parties.]—L. entered into a contract, dated Nov. 30, 1870, with the French Minister of War, represented by J., his delegate at London, to supply 20,000,000 of ball-cartridges of a certain quality, the whole to be supplied by Jan. 10, 1871. Time was to be considered of the essence of the contract. L. desired some arrangements to be made as to payment. M. & co., who acted in London as financial agents for the French Govt., wrote to L. a letter dated Dec. 1, 1870, in these terms:—"We are instructed by J. to advise you that a special credit for the sum of £40,000 has been opened with us in your favour, & that it will be paid to you rateably as the goods are delivered, upon receipt of certificate of reception issued by the French Ambassador or by J." The goods were not delivered according to the contract:—Held: this letter did not constitute Messrs. M. & co. trustees for L. as to the sum named, nor constitute an equitable assignment as of a fund in their hands, & consequently this was not a matter for the exercise of the jurisdiction of the Ct. of Ch.—MORGAN v. LARIVIERE (1875), L. R. 7 H. L. 423; 44 L. J. Ch. 457; 32 L. T. 41; 23 W. R. 537, H. L.; reversg. S. C. sub nom. LARIVIERE v. MORGAN (1872), 7 Ch. App. 550, L. C.

780. Mortgagee of life interest—Not trustee for persons in remainder.]—A mtgce. of an equitable life interest in leaseholds was put in receipt of the rents during the mtgor.'s lifetime, by order of the ct. in an administration suit. The mtgor. disappeared, & was absent more than seven years. The mtgce. remaining in possession. The ct. having held that the mtgor. must be presumed to be dead, & that on the facts her death must be taken to have happened shortly after her disappearance:—Held: the mtgce. occupied no fiduciary position towards the persons entitled in remainder.—HICKMAN v. UPSALL (1876), 4 Ch. D. 144; 46 L. J. Ch. 245; 35 L. T. 919; 25 W. R. 175, C. A. Annotation:—Mentd. Re Corbishley's Trusts (1880), 49 L. J. Ch. 266.

1. Subscriptions to testimonial to Member of Parliament.]—A number of persons, principally in the county for which B. was Member of Parliament, subscribed to present him with a testimonial. The amount subscribed was presented to treasurers, who were the present depts., to be retained by them until a meeting should be held at which a public presentation of the testimonial was to be made to B. Before the meeting took place political differences arose between the subscribers & B. in consequence of which depts. refused to give B. the money subscribed.—Held: there was no formation it was agreed that the sum of £15,000 should be paid in cash by the vendors to two trustees, who should hold the same in trust to secure the payment, & if necessary thereout pay a minimum dividend of 10 per cent. per annum on the preferred shares of the co., for a term of three years, payable quarterly, & subject thereto for the vendors. The guarantee was announced in a prospectus, & the agreement confirmed by the arts. of assocn. of the co., which was registered shortly afterwards.

The trustees paid the sums necessary to make up the guaranteed dividend for every quarter during the three years, except the last, to the directors, who distributed them to the shareholders. The trustees had also paid some surplus moneys to the vendors, retaining sufficient to meet the accruing dividends. Shortly after the last quarter's payment became due the co. was ordered to be wound up, & the official liquidator claimed the fund then remaining in the hands of the trustees:—Held: the agreement created a trust for the individual shareholders.—Re GELLY DEG COLLIERY CO. (1878), 38 L. T. 440.

782. —[By an agreement for the sale of a colliery to a trustee for a co. in formation, the vendor agreed to pay to the co. during two years from the date of its incorporation such a sum as, together with the net profits of the co., should be equal to interest at five per cent. per annum on the paid-up capital of the co. This agreement was stated & adopted in the arts. of assocn. of the co. One of the arts. provided that no dividend should be payable except out of the profits arising from the business of the co. Each half-year the vendor had to make a payment under this agreement to the directors for distribution among the shareholders, the profits not amounting to five per cent. After the expiration of the second year, but before the deficiency of dividend for the fourth half-year had been paid, the co. went into voluntary liquidation, & the vendor afterwards paid to the individual shareholders the amount necessary to make their fourth half-year's dividend equal to five per cent.—Held: the agreement created a trust for the individual shareholders, & the liquidator could not claim the amount so paid by the vendor as part of the assets of the co.—*Re SOUTH ILANHAIRAN COLLIERY CO., Ex p. 784. Money received in satisfaction of debt—Cheque retained & cashed.]—Deft., an officer of the British Army, when on service in India gave to pltf., who were a firm of money-lenders there, a promissory note for 1,500 rupees & interest, to secure repayment of a sum advanced by them to him. The father of deft., in response to an application by pltf., made them an offer of a less sum "in full settlement" of their claim against deft. Pltf. declined that sum, & again asked for what amount deft.'s father would "settle" his son's debt. The father replied offering 650 rupees, & enclosing a draft for that amount. Pltf. cashed the draft & retained the proceeds. Pltf. then brought an action against deft. on the promissory note, claiming the amount thereof, & interest, less the amount of the draft.

Assuming, however, that the promissory note did not cease to be a negotiable instrument, then, in the alternative, I say that when the cheque sent by T. (the father) to pltf. on the terms I have mentioned was retained & cashed by pltf., the result was that a trust was created under which any further money recovered by pltf. from deft. as maker of the promissory note would be held by them in trust for T. A. When Presumption Arises.

(a) In General.

785. No resulting trust where trusts subsisting.]—Where articles of agreement under seal are entered into between husband, wife, & a trustee, reciting that the husband, who was entitled to a share of residue under a will, as a condition of a mutual separation which had been agreed on, had agreed to assign his interest under the will to the trustee upon trust to pay the interest thereof to the wife & then as to the principal for the three children of the marriage, & the wife covenants not to molest the husband, & are followed by a separation & nine months afterwards by reconciliation & return to cohabitation:—Held: upon the true construction of the articles, the trusts thereby declared in favour of the wife & children were subsisting notwithstanding the reconciliation, & there was no resulting trust for the settlor, the husband, of the property comprised therein.—Re SPARK'S TRUSTS, SPARK v. SIMPSON (1758), 7 Bro. Parl. Cas. 306; 3 E. R. 199, II. L.

787. Insurance of cestui que vie—By devise of leaseholds for lives—Resulting trust of insurance moneys.]—A., being the assignee of leaseholds, which were held for three lives, by will devised the same in trust for his son B. for life, & after his death for the benefit of his children with remainders over. He directed that B. should, when & so often as a life or lives should die, renew the same at his own expense; & in default the property was to be held in trust for C. After A.'s death, one of the cestuis que vie died, but no renewal was made. B. died without issue, & C. became tenant for life. After B.'s death, C., in order to protect himself against loss, assured the younger of the two lives for sums amounting to £4,000 in the joint names of himself & the two exors. of A.'s will. C. paid the premiums during his life & died leaving the two exors. surviving him. After his death the premiums were paid out of the rents of the estate by a receiver. On the death of the surviving cestui que vie, the moneys arising from the policies were paid into ct. The representative of C. petitioned to have the fund transferred to her, she offering to allow to the estate the amount of the premiums paid by the receiver; or in the alternative prayed to be recouped the premiums which had been paid by C.:—Held: C., having been one only of three persons to whom the moneys were made payable, & in the events which had happened not being the survivor, his representative had no right to the fund; & the same was subject to a resulting trust in favour of the persons interested in the estate.—BROWNE v. BROWNE (1880), 2 Giff. 304; 3 L. T. 119; 6 Jur. N. S. 1143; 8 W. R. 726; 66 E. R. 127.

789. Distinction between settlements & wills.—Though there may not be any different rule of construction applicable to wills & settlements, yet the different character of the instrument is a circumstance to be weighed in determining the effect of the disposition it contains: shares under a settlement being held not to be vested might create a resulting trust for the settlor whilst in a will the residuary legatee might take.—*FARRER v. 790. Resulting trust for legatee—Absolute gift to legatee—Mode of enjoyment restricted for legatee's benefit.]—If testator leaves a legacy absolutely as regards his estate, but restricts the mode of the legatee's enjoyment of it, to secure certain objects for the benefit of the legatee; upon failure of such objects, the absolute gift prevails: but, if there be no such absolute gift as between the legatee & the estate, & particular modes of enjoyment are prescribed, & those modes of enjoyment fail, the legacy forms part of testator's estate, as not having

800. Resulting trust for grantor—Discontinuance of interests granted—Life estate subject to condition subsequent. — By a marriage settlement, dated in 1875, personal property of the wife was settled upon trust for the wife for life, & after her death upon trust to pay the income to the husband "so long as he shall remain unmarried, & from & after the death of the survivor," to hold the capital in trust for the children of the marriage, as the husband & wife or the survivor should appoint, & in default for sons at twenty-one & daughters at that age or marriage. There was a power of advancement exercisable with the consent of the husband & wife or the survivor during their lives. The ultimate trust in default of issue was for the wife if she survived, & if the husband survived for the appointee of the wife by will, & in default for her next of kin, as if she had died without having been married. The settlement also comprised a policy on the life of the husband which was settled upon like trusts, except that if the wife survived & married again the policy moneys were to be held upon the same trusts as if she were then dead. Then there was a covenant in the common form for the settlement of other & after-acquired property of the wife. There were six children of the marriage. The wife died in 1886, & the husband took out administration to her estate. In Jan. 1889, he married again. The question was, who since the husband's second marriage was entitled to the income of the property of the wife which was included in the settlement: —Held: upon the marriage again of the surviving husband, there was a resulting trust of the income during the rest of his life, to the legal personal representative of the wife; & the husband as administrator of his wife was entitled to the undisposed of income. —*Re WYATT, GOWAN v. There were no words of limitation in the trust for W. There was a power of sale in the settlement, but no trust to invest the proceeds in land. A. died in 1849, having made his will in 1843, which recited the settlement & confirmed it, except as to the stock which had been sold. W. attained twenty-one, & died in 1872.—Held: W. took a life estate only in the freeholds under the settlement, & there was a resulting trust for the settlor.—MIDDLETON v. BARKER (1873), 29 L. Testator's brother died without issue before the expiration of the twenty-one years' term. At the expiration of the term, two of testator's sisters, annuitants, were still living. His nephews, W. & H., were living, each having one son only, & several daughters.

There not having been born a second son of W., the son of H. claimed the estates as tenant in tail in possession indefeasibly, or as tenant in tail in possession, subject to defeasance in the event of a second son of W. being born:—Held: during the suspense period, until it should be ascertained whether or not there would be a second son of W., the rents of the real estate & the proceeds of the personal estate, after the expiration of the twenty-one years' term, were undisposed of, & belonged to the heir-at-law & next of kin respectively.—*WADE-GEY v. 825. — Failure of life estate.—Property agreed to be settled consisted of leaseholds in possession, & of money to be received on the husband's death, which was to be invested in the usual securities, & the trustees were to stand possessed of the leaseholds in trust for the husband for life, & after his death, of one moiety of the leaseholds, stocks, funds & securities for the wife for life; in case she survived her husband, & of the other moiety of the leaseholds, stocks, funds & securities, after the husband's death, & of the whole of the stocks, funds & securities, after the wife's death, in trust for the children. The wife died in the husband's lifetime:—Held: there was a resulting trust as to the leaseholds, for the husband, the settlor.—WILSON v. PAUL (1836), 7 Sim. 620; 58 E. R. 975.

826. — Defective exercise of power—No trusts in default.—Renewal of a college lease by tenant for life, with a power of appointment, in her own name, & at her expense, has not the effect of an appointment in her own favour. By the death of her appointee, therefore, in her life, a resulting trust by lapse for the representative of the author of the power.—BROOKMAN v. HALES (1813), 2 Ves. & B. 45; 35 E. R. 235.

827. — Interposition of vested interest.—Trustees of a settlement were to stand possessed of the trust fund, consisting of twelve-fifteenths of a larger fund, in trust as to one share for the settlor's daughter A. for her life, & then for her children, who were to take vested interests, if sons, at twenty-one, & if daughters, at twenty-one of marriage; & if A. should have no children who should live to attain a vested interest in the fund, then to stand possessed of the share so given to A. & her children, in trust as to one moiety for the settlor's daughter B. & her children, & as to the other moiety for his daughter C. & for children under the same limitations & restrictions to which the gift to A. & her children had been subjected. Then followed similar dispositions of the remainder of the trust fund in favour of B., & her children & C., & her children, with limitations over of each share, in the event of either B. or C. dying without leaving children who should attain a vested interest, to the other two daughters & their children, in moieties as before. But in case there should not be any child or children of A., B. & C. who should live to gain a vested & transmissible interest in the said twelve-fifteenths parts of any part thereof under & by virtue of the settlement, then the trustees were to pay, assign & transfer the whole of the twelve-fifteenths parts unto the next of kin of the settlor. The settlor died, having by his will made A., B. & C. his residuary legatees. After his death C. died without issue. Then B. died without issue, leaving A. surviving her, who had two children, one of whom, a daughter, was married:—Held: A. having a child who had lived to gain a vested & transmissible interest in the fund was not entitled to any portion of it under the limitation to the "next of kin" of settlor; consequently, so much of the funds as did not pass under the limitations other than that to the next of kin resulted to the settlor & passed under his will to his residuary legatees.—*WESTWOOD v. 831. —.]—By a marriage settlement, a sum of £1,500 belonging to the husband was settled in trust to pay the interest to the husband during his life, & after his death to the wife, & after the death of the survivor the fund was to be held in trust for the children of the marriage & if there should be no children, absolutely for the survivor of husband & wife; & certain foreign securities to which the wife was entitled were held upon trust to pay the income to the husband, for the joint lives of himself & his wife; then as the wife, notwithstanding coverture, should appoint by will, & in default of such appointment in trust for the persons who would have been entitled to the same if the wife had died intestate & unmarried.

In Feb. 1863, the husband made his will, & left all his property to his wife absolutely; & in Apr. 1872, the wife made her will, leaving all her property to her husband for life, & after his death to her sisters equally.

The husband & wife started in Apr. 1874, from Liverpool for Madeira & had never since been heard of.

Pltf. claimed, as exor. of the husband to be entitled to both funds, on the ground that the marriage settlement was a reduction into possession:—Held: each fund must go by way of resulting trust to the representatives of the settlor.—*WOLLASTON v. 832. —.]—The effect of a testamentary appointment, either of real or personal estate, to a trustee upon trust for A., who dies in the lifetime of the appointor, is that the appointed property does not revert to the donor of the power, nor to those who would have taken under a gift over, if any, in default of appointment, but remains part of the general estate of the appointor. Where, therefore, testatrix having a general testamentary power of appointment over real estate, subject to a gift over in default of appointment, devised the property to trustees upon trust for A., who died in her lifetime:—Held: the property remained vested in the trustees as part of the general estate of testatrix, subject to a resulting trust for her heir-at-law, if any.—*Re VAN HAGAN, SPERLING v. The settlement then declared that the trustees should hold "all the trust estate hereby constituted" until the marriage upon trust for the persons to whom same respectively then belonged; & after the marriage to pay the income to C.'s fund to him during the joint lives of C. & M.; & as to the £1,670 Consols & M.'s fund to pay the income to M. during the same joint lives; & after the death of either C. or M. to pay the income of "all the trust estate hereby constituted" to the survivor for life; & after the survivor's death upon trust as to corpus for the children of the marriage. In default of there being a child of the marriage, C.'s fund was to belong to him, & the £1,670 Consols & M.'s fund, if M. died in the lifetime of C., were to be held in trust for such persons as she should appoint, & in default of appointment to the persons who, if she had died intestate & unmarried, would have been entitled to pay her personalty under the Statutes of Distribution; but there was no declaration of trust as to these two funds in case of C. dying in the lifetime of M. & there being no child of the marriage. B., in the lifetime of C. & M., made a will whereby he declared that his trustees should stand possessed of one-fourth of his residuary estate, "hereinafter referred to as M.'s share," upon trust to transfer same to the trustees of her settlement, to be held by them upon the trusts by that settlement declared concerning "the fortune brought in settlement by or on behalf of M." C. died in the lifetime of M., & there was no child of their marriage. be transferred into the joint names of herself & deft., who was her godson. She did so with the express intention that deft., in the event of his surviving her, should have the Consols for his own benefit, but that she should have the dividends during her life; & she had previously been warned that if she made the transfer she could not revoke it. The first notice deft. had of the transaction was a letter from pltf.'s solrs. about the end of 1882 claiming to have the fund retransferred to pltf.:—Held: pltf. could not claim a retransfer on equitable grounds, the evidence clearly showing that she did not, when she made the transfer, intend to make the deft. a mere trustee for her except as to the dividends.

The rule is well settled that where there is a transfer by a person into his own name jointly with that of a person who is not his child, or his adopted child, then there is prima facie a resulting trust for the transferor. But that is a presumption capable of being rebutted by showing that at the time the transferor intended a benefit to the transferee (COTTON, L.J.).

883. ——— To qualify for office of bailiff.—A., the owner of estates in the Bedford Level, wishing to give his son a qualification as bailiff, for which, according to the Bedford Level Act, it is necessary to "have" 400 acres in the Level, wrote to the registrar of the Level stating his wish, & asking him to find a qualification. The registrar thereupon, without any further instructions, selected out of A.'s land the smallest lot that exceed 400 acres, & sent to him a deed, by which he purported to convey it to the son in fee, in consideration of natural love & affection. This deed was at once executed by A. & registered. The son died soon after without having ever heard of the transaction. It clearly appeared that neither A. nor the registrar intended or considered the transaction to have the effect of making the son beneficial owner, nor intended any fraud or illegality. On a bill being filed by A. to establish his title to the lands:—Held: (1) on the construction of the Bedford Level Act a dry legal estate was a sufficient qualification, & there was nothing illegal in A.'s design, no intention to represent the son as beneficial owner appearing; (2) on the ground of trust, or of mistake or on both grounds, pltf. was entitled to the relief sought.—*CHILDERS v. company.—A father made his eldest son, who was living near him, & was married, a liberal annual allowance. Being desirous of providing his son with some occupation, he took, in the son's name, one hundred shares of £10 each in the A. co., that number of shares being the necessary qualification for a director; also fifty shares of £100 each in the B. co., ten shares "at least" being a director's qualification; & transferred from his own name into that of the son's five hundred shares in the C. co., a director's qualification being "at least" one hundred shares. The son thereupon became a director of these cos., & received the fees as director, but voluntarily transmitted the dividend warrants on the several shares to the father. Afterwards, at the father's suggestion, the certificates of the shares were handed to him for safe custody, & they were retained by him until his death. The three lots of shares were then found in three envelopes, each indorsed by the father with the number of certificates it contained, two of the envelopes bearing the words "belonging to me." The father by his will settled the bulk of his real & personal estate upon his eldest son for life, with remainder to his children:—Held: the shares were taken in the son's name merely for the purpose of qualifying him as a director; that being the purpose, the presumption of advancement which might otherwise have come under consideration was rebutted; & the son held the shares as trustee.—Re GOOCH, *GOOCH v. In the same paper he printed a coupon with a direction that persons wishing to enter the competition must cut out the coupon, fill in the word missing from the paragraph, together with their names & addresses, & send it, with a postal order for 1s. to the office of the paper. It was further stated in the paper that the missing word was in the hands of a chartered accountant, inclosed in a sealed envelope; that his statement with regard to it would appear, with the result of the competition, in a subsequent issue of the paper; & that the whole of the money received in the entrance fees would be divided equally amongst those competitors who filled in the missing word correctly. In an action by the successful competitors against deft. & the unsuccessful competitors, seeking administration of the trusts of the moneys in the hands of deft. for the purposes of the competition, & distribution among the persons entitled thereto:—Held: (1) so far as the money in the hands of deft. was impressed with any trust, it was one which had arisen out of an illegal transaction, & the ct. would not render any assistance in its administration; (2) notwithstanding the illegality of the competition the competitors had a legal right, enforceable by action at law, to the return of their contributions, at all

The trustees were empowered, if they should think proper so to do, during the minority of the infant, in case any sum less than the dividends to which she should be entitled should be advanced for maintenance, to invest the surplus dividends & to transfer the same to the infant on her attaining twenty-one. The trustees invested certain unapplied dividends, & the infant died under twenty-one. Upon claims made by the next of kin of the settlor & his personal representatives, & the personal representatives of the infant:—Held: the personal representatives of the settlor were entitled to the invested accumulations as a resulting trust.—BAKER v. 902. — Agreement for transfer of goods—Resulting trust until execution of hire-purchase agreement.]—Pltf., being desirous of borrowing money, applied to defts. for a loan of £30, on a bill of sale, of his household furniture. It was arranged that in lieu of a bill of sale pltf.'s landlord, to whom rent was owing, should put in a friendly distress, & that the distress should include the tools of pltf.'s trade, that defts. should purchase the goods from the broker, & that pltf. should then enter into an engagement for hire & repurchase from defts. A distress for a quarter's rent, £25, was accordingly put in, & goods, which by agreement of the parties included the tools of pltf.'s trade were seized. The goods were worth £63, but were appraised at £29 5s. Pltf. signed a memorandum requesting the broker to sell the goods to defts. at the condemned price, & they thereupon paid the broker £29 5s., & got a receipt from him. The next day pltf. signed a hiring & purchase agreement for the goods, by which he agreed to pay defts. monthly instalments until the total amount of £50 was paid, & that in case of default in performance of any of the stipulations of the agreement, defts. should be entitled to enter & seize the goods. Pltf. having made default, defts. entered & seized under the bill of sale:—Held: the true conclusion of fact from all the circumstances was that the intention of the parties was that there should be an absolute sale to defts. in form, but the beneficial property should not pass until a hiring & purchase agreement was executed; therefore, though the legal estate passed to defts., it was subject to a resulting trust in favour of pltf. until this agreement was executed, so that defts. had no complete legal & equitable title to the goods independently of the hiring & purchase agreement.—*BECKETT v. He died, & his wife was tried for & convicted of his murder:—Held: the effect of sect. 11 was to create a trust in favour of the wife in respect of the sum insured, but inasmuch as it was against public policy for the wife to benefit by her own criminal act, the trust in her favour failed, & a resulting trust arose in favour of deceased husband's estate, in respect of which his exors. were entitled to recover the sum insured from the insurance co.—*CLEAVER v. The son not a trustee for the father in the settlement; otherwise it would have been, if the entire fee had been conveyed to the son.—BAYLIS v. NEWTON (1687), 2 Vern. 28; 23 E. R. 628, L. C.

By a deed, which contained a recital that A. & B. were desirous of selling part of the settled property, & with a view to facilitate the sale & conveyance thereof to the respective purchasers, had agreed to execute the deed, A. & B., in exercise of the joint power of appointment, appointed part of the settled property to trustees* upon trust for sale; & it was declared that the trustees should stand possessed of the proceeds upon the trusts intended to be declared by a deed of even date. No deed declaring the trusts was ever executed, & there was evidence to show that the deed of appointment was executed with the view of avoiding the trouble & expense of an application to the trustees to exercise the power of sale:—Held: the disposition of the proceeds of sale was a question of intention; & both on the terms of the deed of appointment, independently of the evidence & also having regard to the evidence, the proceeds of sale remained subject to the trusts of the settlement.—*BIDDULPH v. a niece, but no trust was declared as to the surplus :—Held : the surplus did not result to the grantor, but belonged to the son ; & the father having been maintained by the son for fifteen years, a bill filed after the son's death by the father, & revived upon the father's death by his representative, was dismissed with costs as to that part of it which sought an account of interest.

In general, where an estate or fund is given in trust for a particular purpose, the remainder, after that purpose is satisfied will result to the grantor ; but that resulting trust may be rebutted even by parol evidence, & certainly cannot take effect where a contrary intention, to be collected from the whole instrument, is indicated by the grantor (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—COOK v. HUTCHINSON (1836), 1 Keen, 42 ; 48 E. R. 222.

919. — Where trust presumed for persons entitled on intestacy—Acts of executor.]—Testator, having a claim upon the estate of B., by will gave a third part of "the amount of whatever sum or sums of money might arise & be received from his claim in respect of B.'s estate" to his son T. ; another third to trustees in trust for his daughter M., who died in his lifetime, for life, remainder to her husband for life, & in default of issue, which happened, to his son S. absolutely ; the remaining third in trust for his wife R. for life, & after her death in moieties in the same manner as the two former shares were given. He appointed his wife, R., residuary legatee. After the date of the will, & during testator's life, the greater part of the money due in respect of the claim upon B.'s estate was paid to & invested by testator. This fund, slightly varied, was standing in his name at his death. After his death R., who was also extrix., transferred one-third of the fund to S. ; & the remaining two-thirds to the trustees of her husband's will, upon certain trusts, as it was alleged, for the benefit of herself & the husband of M. for their lives, which trusts were never declared. The proceeds of the two-thirds were paid for thirty-two years in moieties to R. & the husband of M., who survived R. Upon the death of the survivor, pltf., representing the estate of R., claimed the fund, on the ground that the bequest to trustees was specific, & was ademed in testator's lifetime, & fell into the residuary estate ; & that after the life-estates of R. & the husband of M. there was a resulting trust in favour of the estate of R. :—Held : the acts of the extrix., the situation of the fund, & the lapse of time, were circumstances that rebutted the presumption of a resulting trust.—CLARK v. 931. Bearer bonds deposited as security—Delivered in exchange for cheque—Cheque dishonoured—Bonds not impressed with trust.]

A firm of bill brokers borrowed money from pltf. banks on the security of certain bearer bonds, the loans were called in by pltf. banks, & in accordance with the practice in such cases, the bill brokers on the morning of the day on which the loans were repayable, gave the banks each a cheque for the amount of the loans respectively, receiving in exchange the bonds which had been deposited as security. These bonds were in the course of the same day transferred by the bill brokers to deft. bank. The cheques which pltf. banks received from the bill brokers having been dishonoured they sued deft. bank for delivery up of the securities or their value, alleging that by the practice or usage of bankers in such cases the securities were impressed with a trust in the banker's favour, & remained constructively in their possession until the cheques were honoured :—Held : it was inconsistent with the nature of negotiable securities that they should be impressed with an implied trust, & they were not impressed with any such trust.

—Pltfs. were two shareholders of fifty shares each, on which deposits of £2 12s. 6d. were paid, in a projected railway co., which failed to pass their bill through Parliament in the session of 1846, & was abandoned. Pltfs. filed this bill in 1853, on behalf of themselves & all other shareholders except defts., who were the provisional committee, for an account. A suit for a similar object, & instituted by other shareholders, was compromised in 1851. The same solrs. acted for pltfs. in the present & in the former suit :—Held : the managing committee of a projected railway are not merely agents of the co., but trustees.—*WILLIAMS v. daughter's infancy she, in her character of extrix., advanced all testator's estate to her second husband upon the security of a mortgage which proved insufficient. She survived her second husband, & died in 1885, having left all her property away from her daughter. The daughter, as sole surviving beneficiary under her father's will, claimed the whole of her mother's estate upon the ground that it represented moneys retained by her mother under an order of the ct. in part satisfaction of the mtge., & in 1903 she commenced an action against her mother's exors. for an account on this footing:—Held: the mother was not an express trustee of these moneys for pltf.

In the first place, it is said that when the duties of an exor. in the strict sense of the word are performed, & the exor. retains moneys on behalf of those claiming the estate, & the argument must also be good as regards an administrator, then he becomes an express trustee for the legatees, or, if it is an administrator, for the next of kin. No authority is cited for that, & in my opinion the proposition is unsound. I see no reason for converting an exor. into a trustee by anything like a performance of his duties qua exor. The argument must go to this length, that once the debts & funeral & testamentary expenses are paid, then the residue is held upon an express trust (KEKEWICH, J.).—Re MACKAY, MACKAY v. 951. — All debts paid.—Testator gave the residue of his estate to his two exors. upon certain trusts. Part of his estate consisted of a bond given by the trustees of a minor who came of age within a year after the death of testator, & the exors. then accepted his bond to them jointly in the place of the bond given by the trustees. Ten years afterwards a part of the money was paid by the obligor to one of the obligees, who embezzled the money so paid, & gave a receipt purporting to be signed by both the obligees, but in fact signed by one only, the signature of the other being a forgery. In a suit by the other exor. & cestui que trust under the will against the obligor:—Held: though the obligor intended to have the receipt of both obligees, the receipt of one was sufficient to discharge the obligor as the obligees were exors. Debtors to the estate of a testator will not, merely on account of the lapse of time, be held to have notice of the fact that all the debts are paid, & that the exors. have become trustees.—CHARLTON v. I pause for a moment to point out the nature & effect of the security created by the bill of sale. . . . It belongs to a class of securities of which perhaps the most familiar example is to be found in the debenture of trading cos. It is a floating security reaching over all the trade assets of the mtgor. for the time being, & intended to fasten upon & bind the assets in existence at the time when the

957. — After taking possession.—The mtgee., by taking possession, changes the relation in which he stands to the estate; he becomes quasi owner. He is in some sort likened to a trustee; not that he can with any correction of speech be called a trustee. . . . In truth, till the debt is paid off, the mtgee. in possession cannot be considered at all as a trustee. Nevertheless, all the authorities place him in the same predicament with a trustee as far as incapacity to charge for trouble is concerned (LORD BROUGHAM, C.).—*LEITH v. 960. — — — — ——[G., stockbroker, who was one of three trustees & acted as broker to the trust, proposed to his co-trustees to sell B. stock belonging to the trust & re-invest in N. E. stock. The three trustees then, on Jan. 27, 1882, executed a transfer of the B. stock for a nominal consideration to two persons who were officers of a bank of which G. was a customer. G. gave the transfer to the bank as security for a loan by them to him, & the transfer was registered. G., in Feb. 1882, paid off the loan, & on Feb. 15, the bank transferred the stock to purchasers from G., & without giving any notice to G.'s co-trustees, allowed him to receive the purchase-money. He invested it in N. E. stock in his own name. In 1883 he sold the N. E. stock & misappropriated the proceeds. Shortly after the sale of the B. stock G. had given an account to his co-trustees showing the sale of B. stock & a re-investment in N. E. stock, & in 1884 he rendered another account in which he represented the N. E. stock as still forming part of the trust funds. In 1885 he absconded. The co-trustees remembered hardly anything about the transaction, but admitted the genuineness of their signatures to the deed of transfer:—Held: the bank had occasioned the loss to the trust estate by allowing the purchase-money to come to the hands of G. who had no authority to receive it, & whom had no sufficient reason for believing to have authority to receive it, & the bank must therefore make it good at the suit of the co-trustees, although the co-trustees had been negligent in not seeing that the N. 969. Consignee—Consignments from abroad to answer annuity—Notice by consignee to annuitant—Payments made in respect of annuity.]—

(1) Where consignments have been made from abroad to answer an annuity which the owner of the property consigned is liable to pay, & the consignee in this country gives notice of the arrangement to the annuitant, & makes payments in pursuance of it, the consignee is not afterwards at liberty to discontinue such payments, so long as he has any proceeds of the consignment in his hands.

The circumstances of such a transaction constitute an implied trust, which the ct. will enforce against the consignee, for the benefit of the annuitant.

(2) As to this being an express trust, by which I understand a trust created, not by facts & circumstances, but by express words, there is no such trust here; the ct. is left to raise it by implication of law from the dealing & conduct of the parties (LORD BROUGHAM, C.).—FITZGERALD v. 970. Person placed in charge of relative—Entitled to annuity—Annuity received by person in charge.]—A. placed his son, who was much addicted to intemperance, under the care of B., a relation by marriage, & at his death, left his son an annuity of £500. The son resided with B. for several years after his father's death, & until a few months before his own death. B. always accompanied him when he went to receive his annuity from his father's exors., & he, as soon as he had received it, handed it over to B. to keep for him; & B., from time to time, gave him small sums, & paid his bills:—Held: B. was accountable, in a ct. of equity, for what he had received from the son.—TERRY v. WACHER (1846), 15 Sim. 447; 00 E. R. 692.

971. Annuitant—Exercise of power of sale.]—Where the sale of property takes place under a power contained in an annuity deed, the annuitant is a trustee for the purpose of the sale, & neither he nor his attorney or agent is qualified to become the purchaser.

An annuitant with a power of sale sold property charged with the annuity, by auction. An objection to the title was afterwards taken, & the contract abandoned. The solr. for the vendor afterwards took an assignment to a trustee, for himself, from the personal representative of the grantor, who did not employ any other solr., at the price which it brought at the auction, but without communicating the circumstances as to the title:—Held: such a purchase could not be sustained.—Re BLOYE'S TRUST (1849), 1 Mac. & G. 488; 2 H. & Tw. 140; 15 L. 972. Church organist & local board—Construction of local Act.]—By a local Act comrs. were appointed as trustees to carry out the purposes of the Act. By sect. 91 it was directed that, after paying the expenses of obtaining the Act, the remainder of the money in the hands of the trustees "shall be applied at the discretion of the trustees" in payment of various things, amongst others, "in paying the salary of the organist of B. church, & in reducing, paying off & discharging the several principal sums of money & interest" borrowed on mtge. by virtue of the Act. By a provisional order of the General Board of Health, confirmed by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 108, the powers & duties of the trustees were vested in the Local Board of Health for B. In an action on the case by the organist of B. church against the Local Board of Health, for a breach of duty in not paying his salary, alleging that they had sufficient funds for the purpose, it appeared at the trial that the Board had funds applicable to the payment of the salary, though the mtge. debt not yet paid exceeded the cash balance in hand:—Held: the Board & the organist stood in the relation of trustee & cestui que trust; & in the absence of a specific appropriation of a part of the fund to the pltf., no action at law lay: the remedy being in equity.—EDWARDS v. LOWNDES (1852), 1 E. & B. 81; 22 L. J. Q. B. 104; 20 L. T. O. S. 154; 17 J. P. 213; 17 Jur. 412; 118 E. R. 367.

973. Builder making estimate for repairs—On behalf of intending purchaser—Negotiations for purchase broken off—Builder purchasing for himself.]—Pltf., who was in treaty for the purchase of a house, drew up a plan of certain alterations which he intended to make if the purchase was carried into effect, & laid it before deft. in order to obtain an estimate from him of the probable cost of making the alterations. Pltf. had employed deft. in a similar manner on former occasions. Dft. went over the house, & gave to pltf. an estimate of the alterations. The agreement with pltf. having gone off, deft., on the same day, & without the knowledge of pltf., bought the house for himself:—Held: there was not created between pltf. & deft. the relation of trustee & cestui que trust, so as to entitle pltf. to the benefit of the purchase.—SHAW v. DAVIS (1860), 3 L. T. 135.

974. Board entitled to levy rate—Deficiency made up from profits of company.]—Where a board are entitled to levy rates & duties, & if their income falls below a specified amount, to have the deficiency made up out of the profits of a co., the board are sufficiently impressed with the character of trustees to enable the co. to maintain a suit for an account against them. Consequently, where such a suit has been instituted, the board will be restrained, until the hearing of the cause, from prosecuting an action at law, commenced by them against the co. for arrears in respect of alleged deficiencies in past years.—*SOUTHAMPTON DOCK CO. v. 975. Agreement to postpone debt.—Receipt of dividend.—Postponed creditor trustee of dividend.]—In order to induce *pltf.*s, bankers, to allow to W., one of their customers, an overdraft not exceeding £800, deft., who was himself a creditor of W. for £1,000 secured by promissory note, signed an agreement by which he undertook that "the amount due to me shall not be recoverable until the amount due to you on the overdraft shall have been paid." *Pltf.*s, thereupon allowed W. the overdraft. W. executed a deed of assignment of all his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, & *pltf.*s. & *deft.*s. both sent in their claims, which were admitted to the full amount. The trustees having announced a first dividend of 3s. 4d. in the pound, *pltf.*s. claimed under the agreement to be paid the amount of dividend otherwise due to deft.:—Held: *pltf.*s. were entitled to the money under the agreement, which had the effect of making deft. a trustee for *pltf.*s. of any money received by him out of W.'s estate, & *pltf.*s. had not lost their rights under the agreement by having come in under the deed of assignment.—BERWICK v. MATTHEWS (1892), 66 L. T. 564; 40 W. R. 527; 36 Sol. Jo. 463, D. C.

976. Surety taking indemnity from principal debtor.]—Testator gave guarantees to a bank to secure the overdraft of two partners, & to secure him against liability on these guarantees, the wife of one of the partners gave him two equitable mtges.

The partnership firm went into liquidation. Testator died & his affairs were administered by the ct., & the estate was found to be insolvent. It was accordingly unable to make good the amount due under the guarantees.

The bank claimed to be entitled to the benefit of the equitable mtges.:—Held: there was no authority either in the cases or in principle that a surety who takes from the principal debtor a bond or indemnity at once becomes a trustee of that for the principal creditor, & the claim of the bank could not be maintained.—*Re WALKER, SHEFFIELD BANKING CO. v. PART II. SECT. 1.
981 I. Whether trustee & beneficiary may be same person.]—A cestui que trust is not disqualified from being appointed a trustee, though it is

983. ———.]—Another position was maintained, in a latitude that would create infinite confusion: that where there is in the same person a legal & equitable interest the former absorbs the latter. I admit, that where he has the same interest in both, he ceases to have the equitable estate, & has the legal estate. . . . But it must be understood always with this restriction: that it holds only where the legal & equitable estates are co-extensive & commensurate (ARDEN, M.R.).—BRYDGES v. BRYDGES, PHILIPS v. BRYDGES (1796), 3 Ves. 120; 30 E. R. 926.

984. ———.]—Where the equitable & legal estates, equal & co-extensive, unite in the same person, the former merges: therefore, where the former descends ex parte paterna, the latter ex parte materna, upon their union the paternal heir has no equity.

In Brydges v. Brydges, Philips v. Brydges, No. 983, ante, I stated as a universal proposition, that wherever the legal & equitable estates uniting in the same person are co-extensive & commensurate, the latter is absorbed in the former (ARDEN, M.R.).—*SELBY v. 985. ———.]—Testator, who died in 1853, devised as his own an estate which had devolved on his late wife in fee as heiress-at-law of her mother. The devise was to trustees in fee, on trust to pay the rents to testator's only son & to his two daughters in equal shares, & to the survivors or survivor of them, with remainder on trust for the children of the son & the daughters respectively in fee, with an ultimate remainder unto & to the use of testator's own right heirs. The son & both the daughters survived testator, but they all died without issue. The son survived the daughters, & died intestate. He was the heir-at-law of his father, & also of his mother. Testator had also devised real estate of his own to the son, who elected to confirm the will:—Held: the equitable estate, which the son took under the will & by virtue of his election, merged in the legal estate which descended to him from his mother, & the descent was regulated by the legal estate, & consequently, on his death intestate & without issue, the property descended to the heir of his maternal grandmother, who was the last purchaser of the legal estate, & not to his own heir.—*Re DOUGLAS, WOOD v. 987. ———.]—Legal & equitable estate not commensurate.]—It has been said, that it is impossible for a man to be a trustee for himself; but that is not the point here, for as the legal estate & use is wholly in C. by virtue of the first part of the devise, the remainder cannot be in him, for that is part of the estate he had before, & unless testator had given C. the remainder of the trust, it would have resulted to his heirs-at-law; he has therefore given him an interest distinct from either the legal estate or the use, which is the remainder of the trust (LORD HARDWICKE).—*ROBINSON v. (2) They ought to have avoided the appointment of Miss Head if possible, not merely because she was a beneficiary, but because she was known to be under the influence of her mother . . . but I cannot hold Miss Head to have been an incompetent trustee when linked with another whose professional position was of itself a security that the trust funds would be properly administered (KEKEWICH, J.).—*HEAD v. 989. ———.]—Effect on conversion.]—Testator by his will appointed his wife & daughter trustees & ex-trices, & gave his real & personal estate to his trustees upon trust to sell the real estate as & when they thought proper, & to pay the net income of his real & personal estate to his wife for her life, & after her death he gave his real & personal estate & the proceeds of sale of such of his real estate as should have been sold to his daughter absolutely. The daughter survived testator, but predeceased the widow, & at her death no part of the real estate had been sold. On the death of the widow:—Held: the will did not create an imperative trust for sale, but gave to the trustees a discretionary power of sale, & inasmuch as they had not exercised that power, the real estate was not converted & passed to the heir-at-law of the daughter.—*Re NEWBOULD, CARTER v. A trust may be constituted in the persons of A., B. & C. in their individual capacities, or of A., B. & C. magistrates & town council of a burgh, & that trust may be in them quasi trustees for the purpose of fulfilling the obligations imposed upon them in executing that trust, & may vest them with the powers of such trustees, & subject them to the duties of such trustees, in their capacity of A., B. & C. magistrates & town council, without making the corp., of which they are the head in another capacity & without making the city, whose affairs they administer as the magistrates of that city, a party to that trust; & consequently without involving the funds of that city, or the funds which those parties administer, not in the capacity of trustees under this particular trust, but in their other capacity of governors, administering the funds as magistrates of that corporate town. The two things may be kept separate; the two capacities may be severed; & they may be trustees, not as representing the town generally, not as dealing with the town's funds generally, but trustees, under that particular limited & restricted trust, with which the town has no concern (LORD BROUGHAM).—BRUNTON v. FORRESTER, EDINBURGH CITY MINISTERS v. EDINBURGH LORD PROVOST (1849), 14 L. 1002. Discretion of court as to appointment.—Proposed trustee distasteful to beneficiary.]—A gentleman having in wilful defiance of an order of the ct. married an infant ward of ct., the usual directions were given for a settlement of her property & a settlement was prepared which provided that the power of testamentary appointment given to her in default of issue should not be exercised in favour of the husband. The wife objected to this exclusion of the husband & to the proposed trustees with whom she was not on friendly terms & she refused to execute the settlement unless it was altered in these particulars. There was no objection to the trustees except her personal dislike to them. On an application in the matter of the infant & under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 43, the judge made an order for the husband & wife to execute the settlement as it stood. The wife appealed:—Held: the wife ought not to be prevented from exercising in favour of her husband the power of testamentary appointment in default of issue & it was desirable not to appoint trustees with whom she was on unpleasant terms & the settlement ought to be modified in these respects.—Re SAMPSON & WALL (INFANTS) (1884), 25 Ch. The husband died leaving his wife & four infant children surviving. SUB-SECT. 2.—NEW TRUSTEES.

A. In General.

1004. Appointment must be completed—Before transfer of trust property.]—(1) In 1830 A. & B. were appointed trustees of a part of a sum vested in other trustees. The deed contained a power for the settlors to appoint new trustees, in case any trustee should wish to be discharged from, or should decline to act in, the trusts. B. did not execute. In 1848 B., alleging he had never acted, disclaimed, & A. retired, & thereupon two new trustees were appointed, & the fund assigned to them by A. only:—Held: whether B. had acted or not, the new trustees had been duly appointed, & the cestuis que trust were not necessary parties to a suit by such new trustees against the persons, who held the fund, to compel payment to the new trustees.

The appointment of new trustees & the conveyance of the trust property to them constitute two distinct & separate matters, & the second, the transfer, can only properly take place where the first or the appointment is complete (ROMILLY, M.R.).

(2) The validity of the appointment is not affected by the circumstance of whether B. really acted or not, but that assuming that he had acted, the validity of it depends upon whether when he executed the disclaimer & made or offered the statutory declaration, these acts were sufficient evidence to prove that he then declined to act any further & I think that they are (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*NOBLE v. & wife, to appoint new trustees in their place. In 1914 O., who was one of the trustees of the settlement, committed serious breaches of trust, & C., the other trustee, being a German subject, became an alien enemy upon the outbreak of war between the United Kingdom & Germany. In Oct. 1914, plffs. executed a deed reciting that O. was unfit to act as trustee, & that C., being an alien enemy, was incapable of so acting, & purporting thereby, in exercise of their powers under the settlement & of all other powers, to appoint defts. as trustees in the place of O. & C.

Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 10 (1), provides that where a trustee (inter alia) is "unfit to act," the persons nominated for the purpose of appointing new trustees by the instrument creating the trust may appoint a trustee in his place:—Held: as the trust instrument gave no power to the "persons nominated" to appoint a new trustee in the event of a trustee becoming unfit to act, the joint appointment of the deed of Oct. 1914, was invalid, & was not saved by Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 10 (1).

(a) In General.

1007. Directions of donor must be obeyed—Concurrence of beneficiary required.]—A trustee of a will who had formally renounced that character by a deed which purported, but ineffectually, to appoint a successor, being applied to eleven years afterwards to join with his original co-trustee in a deed purporting to be an exercise of a discretionary power which could only be exercised by the two trustees of the will for the time being, refused to do so, without an indemnity, but ultimately, on being indemnified, executed the deed:—Held: he could not resume his position as trustee for such a purpose, & even if he could, his execution of the deed under the circumstances stated, could be regarded only as a mere formal act, not as an exercise of that discretion which was essential to a due execution of such a power.

H., one of the original trustees, by a deed of 1831, recites his desire of no longer acting in the trust & an attempt is made to substitute O. in his place; but it is not pretended that O. was duly appointed, the concurrence of the party beneficially interested being wanting (LORD COTTERHAM, C.).—*LANCASHIRE v. 1009. ——(1) Under a power enabling a surviving or continuing trustee to appoint a new trustee in the place of a trustee dying, going to reside abroad, becoming incapable of acting, etc., the surviving trustee, although himself residing abroad, may appoint another trustee in the place of the one deceased.

Although taking up his permanent residence abroad in such a case does not ipso facto deprive a trustee of his office, yet it is such a disqualification as entitles the cestui que trust to have a new trustee appointed in his place.

(2) It is the duty of trustees, having power to appoint new trustees, to make such appointment impartially, as between their cestui que trust, & not without communication with them.—O'REILLY v. ALDERSON (1849), 8 Hare, 101; 68 E. R. 289.

D. died; & A. & B. by one deed, & C. by another, both of which were executed more than two lunar months, but less than two calendar months after D.'s death, nominated a new trustee, but did not convey the legal estate to him. A., B., C., & the new trustee agreed to sell the estates to M., who objected to complete his purchase, (a) because the appointment of the new trustee

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.—B. (a).

1010 i. How made—Donees executing separate instruments.]—A testamentary trust deed conferred power upon the "trustees or survivors to appoint name & assume such other person or persons as they may think proper to act with them, or after them"—Held: two deeds of assumption, the first by one trustee erroneously designating the sole surviving accepting trustee resident in Scotland & the second being a supplementary deed of assumption executed after his death by two others who were said to be resident abroad, were null & ineffectual in respect that it did not appear that had not been made within two lunar months, (b) because it had not been made by one single deed, & (c) because the power of sale was suspended during the vacancy in the trust.

The ct. overruled the objections; but held that the new trustee had not been duly appointed, because no conveyance had been executed to him; notwithstanding which, that A., B. & C. could make a good title & give an effectual discharge for the purchase-money.

The testator has not said anything about the appointment of a new trustee being made by one deed; he merely says, "by any deed or writing," & in my opinion, it would have been good if it had been done by twenty deeds (SHADWELL, V.-C.).—WARBURTON v. SANDYS (1845), 14 Sim. 622; 14 L. J. Ch. 431; 5 L. T. O. S. 262; 9 Jur. 503; 60 E. R. 499.

1011. — Recital of appointment in deed transferring property.—A settlement contained a proviso that in case either of the trustees should die or become unwilling to act in the trusts, it should be lawful for the acting trustees or trustee for the time being, or the exors. or administrators of any surviving trustee, to nominate any fit person to supply the place or places of the trustee or trustees respectively so dying or becoming unwilling to act. On the death of one trustee the survivor executed a deed, reciting that he was desirous of retiring from the trust, & that he had appointed another person to be a trustee in his place, & conveying the trust property to such new trustee:—Held: the surviving trustee had power to nominate a sole trustee to act in his place, & the appointment by recital was good.—MILLER v. PRIDDON (1852), 1 De G. M. & G. 335; 21 L. J. Ch. 421; 18 L. T. O. S. 323; 42 E. R. 581, L. J. J.

1012. — Recital of names of "present trustees" in deed to which donee a party.—A will contained a power for the trustees or trustee thereof to appoint new trustees. The trust property comprised a renewable lease. After the death of testator a renewal of the lease was granted to four persons who had not been appointed trustees of the will, but who in the lease granted to them were described as "the present trustees" of the will. The surviving trustee & exor. of the will was a party to this deed, & the demise was expressed to be made by his direction:—Held: this statement in the renewed lease operated as an appointment of the four lessees to be trustees of the will.—Re FARNELL'S SETTLED ESTATES (1886), 33 Ch. 1013. Death of trustee—Before trust takes effect.—Testator, after appointing three trustees of his will, provided that if they or any of them, or any trustee or trustees to be appointed under that proviso, should die or be desirous to be discharged, or go to reside beyond sea, or neglect or refuse or become incapable to act, before the trusts should be performed, it should be lawful for the surviving, continuing or acting trustees or trustee for the time being or the last acting trustee, to nominate a new trustee or trustees; & that the trust property which should be or have been vested in the trustee or trustees so dying, desiring to be discharged, etc., & should then be subject to the trusts of the will, should be vested in the new trustee or trustees jointly with the surviving or continuing trustee or trustees, or solely, as the case might require. One of the two trustees died in the lifetime of testatrix, the other survived her, & by deed disclaimed the trusts, except the power of nominating other persons to be trustees; & by the same deed, he appointed two persons to be trustees in the place of the trustee who had died before testatrix, & of himself:—Held: (1) the power had been properly executed; (2) this ct. has no power under Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60), to appoint trustees, where there are trustees de facto acting as such.—Re HADLEY, Ex p. HADLEY (1851), 5 De G. & Sm. 67; 21 L. J. Ch. 109; 18 L. T. O. S. 118; 16 Jur. 98; 64 E. R. 1021.

power to appoint new trustees became exercisable in case (inter alia) either of the trustees should "be abroad." There were three trustees & they were also the exors. of the will. P., one of them, after acting with his co-trustees for ten years in 1893 went to reside in Normandy, taking a five years' lease for a house there, & coming occasionally to England, upon the trust business. In 1895 the tenant for life, who was the donee of the power, appointed T. W. her own solr., to be a new trustee in the place of P. Upon a summons taken out by P. & the other two original trustees, asking the opinion of the ct. whether the appointment was valid:—Held: (1) P. was "abroad" within the meaning of the power; (2) as upon the facts, no part of testator's estate remained vested in P. as exor. virtute officii, his position was merely that of a trustee; & (3) although the appointment of the solr. of the tenant for life as trustee of the settlement was not one which the ct. itself would have either made or sanctioned yet as T. W. was in other respects a fit & proper person as none of the beneficiaries objected, & as the tenant for life did not appear to have acted capriciously, the ct. could not treat the appointment as invalid, though it would give P. liberty to apply, so that his right of indemnity as legal personal representative should not be prejudiced in case it should turn out that any liability on his part still existed.

(4) The mere fact that a trustee of a will is also one of the exors. does not prevent his removal from being a trustee if there is no part of testator's personal estate remaining in his hands unadministered.—*Re STAMFORD (EARL), PAYNE v. One of the trustees was adjudicated bkpt. & absconded. The husband, who had survived the wife, purported in 1895, in exercise of the power given to him by the settlement & by the provisions of Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), to appoint a new trustee in the place of the absconding trustee:—Held: the husband, not being a person nominated to make an appointment of a new trustee in the particular event which had happened, was not "the person nominated for the purpose of appointing new trustees of the settlement by the instrument creating the trust," within the meaning of Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 10, & therefore the appointment which he had purported to make was invalid.—Re WHEELER & DE ROCHOW, [1896] 1 Ch. 315; 65 L. A. having disclaimed the trust, & B. having died, C. alone, though not the survivor of A., B. & C., appointed new trustees under the power:—Held: the new trustees were well appointed.

If the three trustees had not been mentioned by name in the introductory part of the clause, it would have been clear to demonstration that the power was annexed to the office of trustee, in which case the disclaimer of one would have vested the office of trustee in the remaining two, & the power would in fact have been exercised by the surviving trustee (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—*CAFE v. Of these one became desirous to retire, & a new third trustee was nominated in his place, & the trust-estate was assigned to the new trustee, in trust for the two continuing trustees & himself; thus making three trustees in place of the original four:—Held: upon the construction of the power, the appointment of the three trustees was

D. died in 1849. P. died in 1855 intestate as to trust estates, leaving T. his heir-at-law. T. died intestate in 1857, leaving S. his heir-at-law. S. died intestate in 1876, leaving three daughters his co-heiresses-at-law. None of the persons named in the deed exercised the power of appointing new trustees, & the last survivor of them died in 1889. By a deed dated June 7, 1890, the three co-heiresses of S. appointed new trustees, who contracted to sell the property under the trust for sale. The co-heiresses did not otherwise act as trustees of the indenture of 1836: On a vendor's summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78):—Held: (1) S. having active duties to perform was not a "bare trustee" within Land Transfer Act, 1875 (c. 87), s. 48; (2) the legal estate developed upon the co-heiresses; they were acting trustees for the time being, & consequently their appointment of new trustees was a valid exercise of the power.

(3) There are conflicting opinions of JESSEL, M.R., & HALL, V.-C., as to the meaning of the term "bare trustee" . . . I think the view of HALL, V.-C., is to be preferred. 1079. Person appointed trustee by will—Appointment revoked by codicil.—Testator by his will appointed S. & C. trustees of certain property therein comprised, which appointment he afterwards revoked by codicil, substituting H. & B. in their room. The will contained the ordinary clauses authorising the appointment by the continuing trustees or trustee of a new trustee or new trustees in the place of any dying or desiring to be discharged. Shortly after the death of testator, C., one of the excluded trustees, paid £75 to H. upon the understanding that H. should retire, & that he, C., should be appointed a new trustee in his place. This arrangement was assumed to be carried into effect by indenture made between H., B., & C., in which the pecuniary consideration was was disclosed:—Held: this attempted execution of the power of appointment was fraudulent & void. The deed was directed to be cancelled, & the sum of £75 to be paid over by H. to the cestui que trust.—SUGDEN v. CROSSLAND (1856), 3 Sm. & G. 192; 25 L. J. Ch. 563; 26 L. T. O. S. 307; 2 Jur. N. Tenant for life.—Testator devised his real estate to trustees in trust for his wife for life, with remainder to F. for life, with remainders over, & with a power of sale, at the discretion of the trustees or trustee for the time being, & with the usual power for the surviving or acting trustee or trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life, to appoint new trustees. The sole acting trustee appointed testator's widow & F. new trustees jointly with himself. F. being sole surviving trustee contracted for the sale of part of the property:—Held: the power to appoint new trustees had been well exercised, there being nothing in the will to prevent the appointment of a tenant for life as trustee.—*FORSTER v. Sect. 2.—Appointment of trustees: Sub-sect. 2, B. (e) & (f).]

1083. Donee of power.]—On a petition for the appointment of a new trustee of a will in substitution for one who had died, the ct., declining to lay down any hard and fast rule that under no circumstances will a cestui que trust & one of the donees of a power to appoint new trustees be appointed as trustee, directed the appointment as trustee of one of several persons beneficially interested in the estate of testator, who had nominated as trustees of his will persons to whom he had given beneficial interests, & on their death or retirement had empowered the persons beneficially entitled for the time being "to appoint one or more persons to supply the vacancy."

I certainly do not desire to say anything which would one way or other affect the question of whether the donee of a power, or as in the case I put some time ago a sole tenant for life, could appoint himself a trustee, & whether that would be a valid appointment. There is no limitation, as I here said, in the language of this power, the words being "one or more persons" without any limitation. There is nothing to show in the terms of testator's will that it is to be some persons other than the donees of the power (CHITTY, J.).—TEMPEST v. CAMOYS (LORD) (1888), 58 L. T. 221; 52 J. The husband & wife, in exercise of the power, purported to appoint the husband & another person to be trustees in the place of retiring trustees. Upon a summons raising the question whether the retiring trustees might transfer the trust property to the persons so appointed:—Held: (1) a power of appointing new trustees being fiduciary, the donee of such a power cannot appoint himself; (2) the terms of the power required that the trustee or trustees to be appointed should be some person or persons "other" than the person or persons making the appointment, therefore, upon both these grounds the appointment was invalid.—*Re SKEATS'S SETTLEMENT, SKEATS v. B. returned to England eight years after testator's death, for his health, & remained in this country six months, & then went back to Australia, without having proved the will or taken any part in the execution of the trusts:—Held: B. had fulfilled the condition by his residence for a substantial period in England; &, in the absence of evidence that he had dissented from or disclaimed the trusteeship before his return, the trusteeship & the estates vested in him on his coming to England.—Re ARBIB & CLASS'S CONTRACT, [1891] 1 Ch. 601; 60 L. Personal representatives of deceased sole trustee—Cannot be required to exercise statutory powers—At request of beneficiaries.]—The exors. of the sole exor. of a deceased sole trustee whose sole exor. had never acted in the trust, were applied to in Apr. 1883, to take steps to enable the tenant for life of a small sum of stock standing in the name of deceased trustee to receive the dividends. In May, 1883, the exors. handed to the solr. of the tenant for life the probate of their testator's will, that he might produce it at the Bank of England, which he did. After some correspondence, in the course of which the exors. asked for evidence of the title of the cestuis que trust, which did not appear to have been produced, the solr. of the tenant for life about the end of May sent a power of attorney to be executed by the exors. to enable her to receive the dividends. The exors. did not execute or return the power. In July the solr. of the tenant for life applied to the exors. to appoint new trustees under Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), to which the exors.

replied, stating their ignorance of the title of the cestuis que trust. Ultimately, in Nov. 1883, the cestuis que trust presented a petition for the appointment of new trustees & a vesting order:—Held: (1) the representative of a deceased trustee is not bound at the request of the cestuis que trust to exercise the power of appointing new trustees given by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41); & the refusal to do so was not a sufficient reason for ordering the exors. to pay the costs of a petition for the appointment of new trustees. 1107. Exercise of statutory power—Overrides provision in instrument for consent of beneficiary.]

—A settlement of real estate of which there were four trustees, provided that if the trustees thereby appointed "or any future trustee or trustees to be appointed in the place of them or any of them as hereinafter mentioned" should die or be desirous of being discharged, etc., it should be lawful for the "surviving or continuing trustee or trustees for the time being," with the consent of the tenant for life, or in tail for the time being entitled in possession, to appoint a new trustee or new trustees in the place of the trustee or trustees so dying, etc. In 1872, four new trustees were appointed under Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60), in the place of two deceased & two retiring trustees. After this a decree was made for carrying the trusts of the settlement into execution. Two of the trustees of 1872 being dead, & another desiring to retire, plff., who was an infant tenant in tail in possession, took out a summons to appoint new trustees. W., the continuing trustee, took out a summons asking that he might be at liberty to appoint new trustees. A reference to chambers being directed, W. proposed new trustees whom the ct. considered to be proper persons, but to whom all the persons beneficially interested objected:—Held: the persons nominated by W. must be appointed, though the tenant in tail in possession did not consent, for as the power in the settlement only applied to filling up vacancies in the number of original trustees, or trustees appointed under the power, it had come to an end when new trustees were appointed by the ct. in 1872, & the fetter imposed by the settlement on the exercise of that power did not apply to the new power given to the continuing trustee by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), which enabled him to fill up vacancies in a body of trustees not coming within the scope of the power in the settlement.—CECIL v. LANGDON (1884), 28 Ch. D. 1; 54 L. J. Ch. 313; 51 L. T. 618; 33 W. R. 1, C. A.

In 1886, a deed was executed by the continuing trustees appointing new trustees under the power "vested in them by statute." This deed contained the usual declaration vesting the estates in the new trustees; but the appointment was not made with the approbation of the ct.:—Held: the deed must be construed as if the special provision contained in the private Act had formed part of Lord Cranworth's Act, 1860 (c. 145); as Lord Cranworth's Act, 1860 (c. 145), had been repealed, the ct. could not add that special provision to the general power of appointment given by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41); & the new trustees were well appointed.—Re LLOYD'S TRUSTEES (1888), 57 L. 1111. Absence abroad for more than twelve months—Settlement executed prior to Act.—A settlement executed in 1878 contained no express power to appoint new trustees, but there was a declaration that the husband & wife during their joint lives, & the survivor of them during his or her life, "shall have power to appoint new trustees or a new trustee for this settlement." There was no express reference to the power of appointing new trustees conferred by Lord Cranworth's Act, 1860 (c. 145), s. 27, which was then in force:—Held: after the commencement of Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), the husband & wife were the proper persons to exercise the power conferred by sect. 31 of that Act, of appointing a new trustee in place of one of the trustees who had remained out of the United Kingdom for more than twelve months, though sect. 27 of Lord Cranworth's Act did not provide for, & the parties when they executed the settlement probably did not contemplate, the occurrence of a vacancy in that event.—Re WALKER & HUGHES' CONTRACT (1883), 24 Ch. The co-trustee had remained out of the United Kingdom for more than twelve months, except for one week when he was in London:—Held: the event upon which the power arose had 1117. — Execution with general grant of probate—Though trustees named in will of sole surviving trustee.—Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 31, does not enable a sole surviving trustee of a will to appoint by his will, in continuation to himself, trustees of the will of original testator.

The sole surviving trustee of a will by his will appointed general exors., & also purported to appoint special exors., for the purpose of executing, in continuation to himself, the trusts of the will of original testator. The general exors. obtained a grant of probate of the will of the trustee to themselves as "general exors.," without any reservation of power to the special exors. to come in & prove, & proceeded by deed to appoint two persons to be trustees of the will of original testator. Subsequently probate of the will of the trustee, limited to the trust estates of original testator, was granted to the persons named as special exors.:—Held: the will of the trustee did not operate as an exercise of the power of appointing new trustees conferred by Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 31, but as the general exors. were, at the time when the deed of appointment was executed, in possession of a general grant of probate, which was the only probate then in existence, they were "personal representatives" of a last surviving trustee within the meaning of the sect., & therefore the deed was a valid appointment of trustees.

There would be manifest inconvenience in vesting the power of appointment in persons about whom there is a doubt whether they will prove or not, & who in the meantime may be inaccessible, & I cannot but think that those who can for the time being produce the only evidence of office & authority were intended by the legislature to be

1118. —Acting executor—Only proving executor.—H., by his will dated in 1875, devised his real estate to trustees to certain uses. The will contained no power of appointing new trustees, but in effect referred to the powers given by Lord Cranworth's Act, 1800 (c. 145). H. died in 1877. The last surviving trustee died in 1888, having by his will appointed three exors. Probate was granted to one only, power to prove being reserved to the other two. In 1894 the proving exor., in exercise of the power given to him by Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), & of every other power enabling him, appointed new trustees of H.'s will. The other two exors. were alive at the date of this appointment, but died without having taken probate:—Held: having regard to the saving clause in Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 71, the appointment was good as having been made by the "acting exor." of the last surviving trustee within Lord Cranworth's Act (c. 145), s. 27.—*Re BOUCHERETT, BARNE v. 1119. Continuing trustees—One trustee abroad for more than twelve months.—Land was conveyed to eleven trustees upon trusts for the benefit of the Wesleyan Methodists. The deed of conveyance contained a power of appointing new trustees if the trustees for the time being should, by death, incapacity, or refusal to act in the trusts, be reduced to five. The power was to be exercised by vote at a general meeting, & the original number of trustees was to be filled up. It was further provided that the power might be exercised even if the number of trustees were not reduced to five. One of the original eleven trustees died, & another had remained more than twelve months out of the United Kingdom. The nine remaining trustees, by deed purporting to be in pursuance of Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 31, appointed a new trustee in the place of the trustee who was abroad:—Held: (1) the appointment was a good one under the Conveyancing Act, s. 31, although the trustee who was abroad did not join with the remaining trustees in making it, it not being shown that he was willing & competent to do so; (2) it was not necessary to fill up the original number of trustees, inasmuch as the appointment was made in an event not contemplated by the deed, which therefore could not be said to show any "contrary intention" so as to exclude the provisions of sect. 31 of the Act.—

s. 28, re-enacted by Trustee Act, 1893, s. 79, is not restricted to cases in which there is some ascertained person who is beneficially entitled in possession. Where there is no such person the donees of the power may act at their own discretion.—EDWARDS v. OWEN (1881), 3 N. Z. L. R. C. A. 225.—N.Z.

Where dissolution took place before the society had handed over some of its property to the person nominated by the instrument of dissolution to realise its assets, the ct., the Crown not claiming the property as bona vacantia, appointed him a trustee in the place of the society, & made an order vesting the property in him on the trusts applicable thereto under the instrument.—Re RUDDINGTON LAND, [1909] 1 Ch. 701; 78 L. The purchaser, who was unable to get himself registered as proprietor of the letters patent, presented a petition asking for an order under Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 35, vesting them in him:—Held: when the co. was dissolved the legal interest in the letters patent, if it vested anywhere, vested in the Crown, & in that case, although the Crown did not act as trustee, it could not be said within Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 35, that the trustee "could not be found"; if the legal interest did not vest in the Crown there was no trustee, & again it could not be said that the trustee "could not be found": because there being no trustee it could not be predicated of him that he "could not be found"; therefore a vesting order could not be made under sect. 35, & a new trustee could not be appointed under Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 25.—Re TAYLOR'S AGREEMENT TRUSTS, [1904] 2 Ch. 737; 73 L. (c) Who will be Appointed.

In General.

1185. Matters for consideration of court—Expressed wishes of creator of trust—Impartiality between beneficiaries—Efficient execution of trust.—The discretion which the ct. exercises in appointing new trustees is not a mere arbitrary discretion, but is to be exercised in accordance with certain principles. Among them are the following:—(a) In selecting a person for the office, the ct. will have regard to the wishes of the author of the trust, expressed in, or plainly deduced from the instrument creating it. (b) The ct. will not appoint a person with a view to the interest of some of the cestuis que trust, in opposition to the interest of others. (c) The ct. will have regard to the question whether the appointment will promote or impede the execution of the trust. Semble, the mere fact of the continuing trustee refusing to act with the proposed new trustee, would not be sufficient to induce the ct. to refrain from appointing him.

It is of the essence of the duty of every trustee to hold an even hand between the parties interested under the trust (TURNER, L.J.).—Re TEMPEST (1866), 1 Ch. App. 485; 35 L. J. Ch. 632; 14 L. T. 688; 12 Jur. N. S. 539; 14 W. R. 850, L. J.J.

He also alleged that the fourth trustee had acted fraudulently. The legal estate in the mtgd. properties was vested in all the four trustees, & the stocks, in which the remainder of the trust funds had been invested, stood in the names of the four trustees. Before issue was joined in the action, defts., in pursuance of an order of the ct., gave notice to call in two of the mtgs., & one of the notices had expired. 1256. ————.]—By a settlement made in 1859 four trustees were appointed, one of whom disclaimed. The existing three trustees desired to retire, & in the events that had happened the power to appoint new trustees contained in the settlement was not exercisable. A petition was accordingly presented for the appointment of three new trustees in place of the three who had acted & now wished to retire. The trustee denied or offered explanations of the various imputations against him, claimed a balance to be due to him, & objected to being removed from the trusteeship:—Held: (1) Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60), s. 32, does not give the ct. jurisdiction under the Act to displace a trustee who is desirous of continuing in the trust; (2) the trustee could not, under the summary jurisdiction of the ct. over solrs., be removed from the trust for acts done by him, not in the character of solr. or in any relation immediately arising out of that character, but in the character of trustee, & the order could not be sustained.

(3) Although it is, I believe, usual, & certainly it has been our practice in lunacy, upon application for the appointment of new trustees by persons having partial interests, to require the other persons interested to be served, the Act does not in terms so require, & it has not been unusual to dispense with service on all parties (TURNER, L.J.).—Re BLANCHARD (1861), 3 De G. 1304. — Cestui que trust abroad.]—The original trustees of a will being dead, a petition was presented for the appointment of new trustees, & for a vesting order. The persons proposed to be appointed were both beneficially interested under the will, but it was found impossible to obtain the services of independent persons. All the beneficiaries, except one who was abroad, were co-petitioners, & were desirous that the persons proposed as trustees should be appointed. The ct. made the order, subject to an undertaking by the new trustees that if either became sole trustee he would use every endeavour to obtain the appointment of a co-trustee; & dispensed with service on the absent beneficiary.—Re LIGHTBODY'S TRUSTS (1884), 52 L. 1305. — — — — —.]—The persons entitled to the residuary estate of testator, presented a petition for appointment of new trustees of his will in the place of the original trustees, one of whom had died, & the other was a lunatic. The petition was served on three of the four persons who were entitled to the proceeds of sale of a real estate devised on trusts for persons who took no interest in the residue, but the fourth was resident in Australia, & was not served:—Held: service on the cestui que trust in Australia might be dispensed with.—Re WILSON (1886), 31 Ch. 1308. Necessity for.]—A suit was instituted against a trustee for an account, the administration of the trusts of the will, & the appointment of new trustees. At the hearing all relief was waived, except the appointment of new trustees, & all parties agreeing that all the persons interested were before the ct., the ct. was willing, upon the production of proper affidavits as to fitness, to appoint new trustees, but required a petition to be presented for that purpose.—*BUCKLEY v. See Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 60.

1314. Liability for costs—Misappropriation of trust fund by bankrupt trustee—Assignees—Only out of general estate.]—On petition to have a new trustee appointed in the place of bkpt., who had misappropriated the trust fund, the ct. will give the assignees their costs only out of the general estate.—Re ATKINSON, Ex p. HEELIS (1843), 7 Jur. 684, Ct. of R.

1315. — Donee of power refusing to exercise it—Subsequently consenting to exercise power—Trustee formerly desirous of retiring willing to continue.—Re HODSON'S SETTLEMENT, No. 1141, ante.

1316. — Incorrect mode of appointment—Applicant liable for all costs.—Pltf. having filed a bill for the appointment of new trustees, in a case in which it might be done by petition, was ordered to pay all the costs.—THOMAS v. WALKER (1854), 18 Beav. 521; 52 E. R. 205.

1317. — Petitioner's costs disallowed—Respondent costs in cause.—BUND v. GREEN, [1875] W. N. 213.

1318. — Appointment for benefit of all parties—Costs paid out of corpus.—The costs . . . must come out of the corpus. When an application by a tenant for life is clearly for his own sole benefit I have been in the habit of making him pay the costs of it. But here the appointment of new trustees of the settlement is for the benefit of all parties interested under it in the fund (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—Re PARBY'S MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT TRUSTS (1857), 20 L. If therefore their refusal renders an application to the ct. necessary, they will be made to pay the costs.

(2) The ct. has no jurisdiction to award costs adversely against third parties cited to appear as resps. upon a petition to appoint new trustees under Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60).—Re PRIMROSE (1857), 23 Beav. 590; 29 L. 1324. — Introduction of irrelevant charges against respondent—Petition to pay costs thus occasioned.—Where a married woman, having by her next friend petitioned for the appointment of new trustees of property to which she was entitled for her separate use, made in the affidavits filed in support statements & charges irrelevant to the subject of the petition, & where the resp., in answering those affidavits, made further charges of a still further irrelevant character. The ct. ordered that all the costs incurred by resp. in answering the irrelevant charges made against him be paid by the next friend; & that all the costs incurred by the irrelevant matter introduced by resp. into the case, other than that rebutting the statements made against him, should be paid by him.—Re WILLS' TRUSTS (1863), 3 New Rep. 107; 9 L. T. 570; 9 Jur. N. S. 1225; 12 W. R. 97.

But I never heard it disputed that, where new trustees were appointed under a power in an instrument, the costs of effecting the change, including the costs of the donee of the power, were paid out of the estate (KAY, J.).—*HARVEY v. SUB-SECT. 3.—EXECUTOR-ADMINISTRATOR.

See, now, Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), ss. 33, 39.

1338. Administrator functus officio.]—An administrator who has paid all expenses & debts & cleared intestate's estate stands in the same position towards the next of kin as that which an exor. who has cleared the estate stands in towards the residuary legatees. He ceases to be an administrator & becomes a trustee, & the ct. can appoint a new trustee to act jointly with him.—RE PONDER, PONDER v. PONDER, [1921] 2 Ch. 59; 90 L. J. Ch. 426; 125 L. T. 568; 65 Sol. Jo. 455.

1339. — Power to appoint trustees.]—Administratrix with the will annexed, having paid all the debts & cleared the estate, executed a deed appointing two trustees of the will in her place & asked the ct. to confirm the appointment:—Held: the new trustees had been properly appointed by the deed.—RE PITT, PITT v. MANN (1928), 44 T. L. R. 371.

1340. Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 33—Effect of on legal personal representative.]—The expression "personal representatives" in above Act, s. 39, does not include trustees in the ordinary sense even when the personal representatives themselves become trustees upon an assent. The introductory words of s. 39 conferring powers on personal representatives "during a minority of any beneficiary or the subsistence of any life interest, or until the period of distribution arrives" are explained by the fact that under the new law of intestate succession the existence of an infant beneficiary or of a beneficiary, such as a widow, entitled to a life interest only may postpone distribution, & that in these cases s. 33 places the personal representatives substantially in the position of trustees.

The provision in s. 39 (1) (ii), conferring on personal representatives "all the powers, discretions & duties conferred or imposed by law on trustees holding land upon an effectual trust for sale" does not operate referentially to make the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (2), applicable to pure personality.

Accordingly, where under the will of a testator unauthorised investments are retained under a power to postpone conversion, the rule laid down in Hove v. Lord Dartmouth (1802), 7 Ves. 137a, still remains applicable in regard to the income payable to a tenant for life.—RE TROLLOPE'S WILL TRUSTS, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. TROLLOPE, [1927]

1342. Necessity for.]—(1) The disclaimer need not be either by matter of record or by deed (HOLROYD, J.).

The ct., upon the petition of the tenant for life under the 1 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 22, refused to appoint a new trustee in his place. 1349. Undertaking to execute trusts—Deed not signed.]—It is said, the trustees are not under covenant; & they are not bound under hand & seal: but they have in equity undertaken to execute the trusts exactly as if they had so executed the instrument; & the general words, "it is declared & agreed," etc., amount to a covenant. The obligation upon them is to permit Lord Montford to receive & enjoy the rents & profits, provided that was consistent with the trust & obligation. imposed upon them, to apply, so much of the rents & profits as should be necessary to the expense of renewal, in order to make his enjoyment consistent with the other objects of the settlement, under which all the subsequent takers are to be considered purchasers: but it does not rest upon reasoning; as upon the answers it is clear, they understood the import; expressly stating, that they put him in possession; & assigning, as their reason, motives of civility & humanity. It is hard, if they are to suffer by that: but the subsequent takers unless deprived by acquiescence of their remedy, are not to suffer by the charity of the trustees. It is clear, therefore, that they did take upon them these trusts (LORD ELDON, C.).—MONTFORD (LORD) v. CADOGAN (LORD) (1816), 2 Mer. 3; 19 Ves. 635; 34 E. R. 651, L. C.

Z. attained twenty-one in the lifetime of testator's widow, & on her decease a deed was executed by the trustees, which recited the will, & that it had become unnecessary for the trustees to act in the trusts thereof, & that, in fact, they never intermeddled therein; & the trustees then released the property to Z. who, by another deed, gave them a general release:—Held: the deed executed by the trustees amounted to an acceptance by them of the trusts of the will, & imposed on them the duty of seeing that the trusts of the £1,100 were duly performed.—*URCH v. 1354. Retaining deed for safe custody.]—As to J., I think there is not enough to charge him as with a breach of trust. Looking at the deed which was in his possession, he could hardly fail to see that he was named a trustee; but, on the other hand, he says he never acted; & it is expressly shown that he received the deed for safe custody only, until someone else could be found to undertake the trust. I think there is not enough to charge him (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—EVANS v. JOHN (1841), 4 Beav. 35; 49 E. R. 250.

1355. Verbal statement.]—(1) By law the estate devised vests in the devisee before assent (PARKIE, B.).

(2) Though it has been held that a disclaimer of an estate in fee need not be by matter of record as was formerly held in Townson v. Tickell, No. 1342, ante, it has never been settled that such disclaimer must be by deed, & in the case mentioned HOLROYD, J., was of opinion that it need not (ROLFE, B.).

(3) Unless there was unequivocal evidence of assent, the subsequent disagreement by deed of disclaimer would avoid the estate quoad hunc. The consequence would be to avoid the will, as to him, ab initio & vest the legal estate in R., so that, as his heirs have disclaimed, it would revert to the heir-at-law of testator (PARKIE, B.).

1356. Acting in trust—Paying debts.]—A. & B. were appointed trustees, & A., B., & C. exors. of a will. A. & C. alone proved. B., in his answer, said he declined to act in the trusts; but it appeared that B. & his partner were indebted to testatrix at her death, that her exor. had lent them part of the assets, & that they had paid some of her debts. The ct., on motion, ordered B. to pay into ct. the balance due from him & his partner, who was not a party to the suit.

He (deft.) is one of the exors., he has never proved, but he has never renounced, & he says he has never acted in the trusts; but the ct. must look at his actions, & see to what character they are attributable. I think he has acted in the character which testatrix had given him (ROMILLY, M.R.).—WHITE v. BARTON (1854), 18 Beav. 192; 52 E. R. 76.

1357. Signing memorandum—Partial acceptance.]—In 1823 E., by his consent, was with X. & Z. named as a trustee of a marriage settlement, which comprised various sums. The deed was executed by the co-trustees of, but not by, E. X. died in 1826 insolvent. In 1829 an account was rendered which showed the sums subject to the trusts of the settlement & that Z. had received a large sum belonging to the trusts. Z. afterwards, as the administrator of his father, became possessed of a large sum of residue, not administered by the extrix., & trust funds, part of this residue, he applied to his own use; but in 1830 he, by request, invested a portion of the residue in the names of himself & E. upon the trusts of the settlement as such trustees thereof, & indorsed a memorandum thereon to the effect that it was so much of the within-mentioned & assigned sums as were subject to the trusts thereof. This memorandum Z. signed previously to 1842. In 1845 E. made inquiries of one of the cestuis que trust relating to the trusts vested in him, & required to be satisfied as to the property comprised in the settlement. He was then informed that he was a trustee thereof, & a receipt of the stock bought in his & Z.'s names was inclosed. This receipt E. retained; & in Mar. 1847, he for the first time saw the settlement, & on that occasion he signed the memorandum indorsed thereon. Z. died in 1852 insolvent. E. received the dividends on the stock, & regularly paid them over to the tenant for life. In 1854 inquiries were made which resulted in this bill being filed, praying that an account might be taken of all sums which had been received by E. either alone or jointly with his co-trustees, or which, without his wilful neglect & default, might have been received; & that E. might be decreed to make good all losses which had been sustained, particularly so much of the property as was subject to the trusts of the settlement.—Held: E.'s liability must be confined to the amount comprised in the memorandum signed by him; & so far as the bill sought to make him liable for more than that amount, it must be dismissed.—MALZY v. EDGE (1856), 2 Jur. N. S. 80; 4 W. R. 213; sub nom. MALZY v. EDGE, 27 L. T. O. S. 12.

1358. Executing trust deed.]—A trustee who has duly executed a trust deed must, in the absence of special circumstances, be bound by that indication of his acceptance of the trust, & will not afterwards be heard to say that he thought he was merely signing as a witness.—JONES v. HIGGINS (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 538; 35 L. J. Ch. 403; 14 L. T. 126; 14 W. R. 448.

1359. Letter confirming verbal arrangement.]—W., having entrusted P., his solr., with a sum of £7,700 for investment on mtge. on his behalf, was informed by P.'s clerk, in conversation, that "P. proposed to invest the money on mtge. of leasehold property at Camden Town at 5 per cent.," & subsequently received a letter from P. stating that "the money was put on 5 per cent. mtge. as arranged by my clerk with you." On P.'s death it was found that no mtge. existed in favour of W., but that P. had advanced £100,000 to a firm of builders on a mtge. of their leasehold property at Camden Town:—Held: P. & those claiming under him were bound by the representation made by him, & were estopped from denying that the £7,700 formed part of the £100,000 so invested.—MIDDLETON v. POLLOCK, Ex p. WETHERALL (1876), 4 Ch. D. 49; 40 L. J. Ch. 39; 35 L. T. 608; 25 W. R. 94.

1362. Disclaimer distinguished from release.]—CREWE v. DICKEN, No. 1398, post.

1363. —.]—(1) The more one examines the distinction between a disclaimer & release, the less one sees the worth of it.

A release is the instrument of a person who thinks that he has something to part with; it is not a mere dissent or refusal to concur. If a person, who is appointed co-trustee by any instrument, executes no other act than a conveyance to his co-trustees, where the meaning & intent of that conveyance is disclaimer, the distinction is not sufficiently broad for the ct. to act upon (LORD ELDON, C.).

(2) It seems to have been taken for law . . . that if an estate is conveyed to two persons in trust, & one will not act as trustee the estate vests in the other (LORD ELDON, C.).—NICOLSON v. WORDSWORTH (1818), 2 Swan. 365; 36 E. R. 655, L. C.

& proceeded to take the necessary steps for administering the trust; thereafter a third trustee intimated that he should act as trustee, but having differed, in limine, with the other trustees as to the conduct of the trust, he afterwards declined to act.—Held: he had timeously & competently so declined to act under the trust.—BANNERMAN v. BANNERMAN (1842), 5 Dunt. (Ct. of Sess.) 229; 15 Sc. Jur. 67.—SCOTT.

1365. — Property partly abroad.—Testator having real & personal property in England & abroad left his residuary estate to trustees upon trust for sale. One of the trustees disclaimed the trusts of the will except as to the property abroad. The remaining trustees sold land of testator in England:—Held: the disclaimer had no effect, & the disclaiming trustee was a necessary party to the conveyance.—Re LORD & FULLERTON'S CONTRACT, [1896] 1 Ch. 228; 65 L. 1366. — Trustees of copyholds.—Right to renounce legal estate.—The cases as to trustees being liable to the trusts of a will, by accepting the trusts as to some of the property, do not seem at all to affect the question of whether they may not renounce the legal estate, taking upon themselves any risk of a breach of trust, more particularly where, as in this case, there was no legal estate primâ facie vested in them, but where they had a mere right to admittance, which, according to a well known & proper practice, they give up in favour of one of their number, for the purposes of the estate, & to effect a saving (per Cur.).—*WELLESLEY (LORD) v. 1367. Right to take opinion of counsel.—As to obligation to execute disclaimer.—Re TRYON, No. 1413, post.

1368. Proof of disclaimer.—Must be clear & distinct.—Where the position in which parties stand to each other is such as to establish primâ facie the relation of trustee & cestui que trust, the ct. will not permit the trusteeship to be disclaimed without clear & distinct evidence.

A. & B. cohabited together. A. having a considerable sum of money of her own placed the same in the hands of B., as she alleged, upon trust to invest it in her behalf. They continued to live together for upwards of ten years, using the interest arising from the money for their common benefit. B. then put an end to the connection between them. A. filed her bill seeking to charge B. as a trustee with the moneys received by him on her account. B. admitted the advance of the money, but denied the trust, alleging that it was a loan to him, & that pltf.'s claim was now barred by Stat. Limitations. The existence of the trust was supported only by the evidence of pltf.:—Held: the position of the parties established the relation of trustee & cestui que trust, which deft. had not disproved, & he was bound to account to pltf. for what he had received in connection with the trust, with interest at 5 per cent.—JAMES v. HOLMES (1862), 31 L. J. Ch. 567; 8 Jur. N. S. 553; 10 W. R. 487; affd., 4 De G. F. & J. 470; 31 L. J. Ch. p. 568; 6 L. T. 589; 10 W. R. 634, L. C.

1369. Time for disclaimer.—Before dealing with estate.—A disclaimer by two out of three joint tenants, surrenderees of certain copyhold lands belonging to a manor, executed before the admittance of the remaining joint tenant, but after the exercise by all the three of various acts of ownership over the estate, is void, & the lord is entitled to a fine as upon the admittance of all.

A disclaimer, to be worth anything, must be an act whereby one entitled to an estate immediately & before dealing with it renounces it; whereby, in effect, he says, "I will not be the owner of this property" (KELLY, C.B.).—BENCE v. GILPIN (1868), L. R. 3 Exch. 76; 37 L. J. Ex. 36; 16 W. R. 705; sub nom. BENCE v. GILPIN, REEVE v. GILPIN, 17 L. T. 655.

Annotation.—Re B. v. Garland (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 269.

1370. — Without delay.—By her will testatrix, who died in 1866, directed her exors. to pay to A. & B. a certain sum of money to be held in trust for pltf., who was at that time an infant. A. & B. gave to the exors. of the will a receipt for the legacy on an Inland Revenue form for presentation to the Inland Revenue authorities. The legacy was paid to A. & B. by a crossed cheque drawn in favour of both of them, but whether payable "to order" or "to bearer" was not in evidence, nor was there any evidence that either of them had indorsed the cheque. In 1870, A., who was the father of pltf., died in insolvent circumstances. In 1881 B. executed a deed poll purporting to disclaim the trusts of the will. In 1892 pltf. for the first time became aware of the legacy, & called upon B. to account for the same. B. alleged that he had never accepted the trusts of the will, & that the receipt given by him was not intended to operate as an acceptance of the trusts, & that he had never received nor in any way dealt with the legacy:—Held: although the rule was that a trustee ought to execute a disclaimer without delay, yet there was no rule that a disclaimer must be executed within any particular time; the evidence showed that B. did not mean to accept the trust, notwithstanding the fact that he signed the legacy duty receipt as well as A.; & although it was not necessary for B. to have done that if he were not a trustee, yet the ct. would be straining matters too far if it were to hold that that act alone constituted B. a trustee.—JAGO v. JAGO (1893), 68 L. T. 654; 9 T. L. R. 351.

1371. Takes effect ab initio.—A power in a will in the following form, viz. "I direct that A., B., & C., the exors. of this my will, or the survivors or survivor of them, or the exors. or administrators of such survivor, shall sell my copyhold messuages:"

—Held: a disclaimer, executed by C. some time after a sale, reciting that he had, from testator's decease, declined to act, & had never acted, in the exorship. or the trusts of the will, was a refusal ab initio, there being nothing to impeach the bona fides of the transaction.—PEPPERCORN v. WAYMAN (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 230; 21 L. J. Ch. 827; 16 Jur. 794; 4 E. R. 1091.

probate until after the death of the acting extrix., nor did he ever disclaim by deed the trust of the real estate; but he purchased a part of the real estate, & took the conveyance from the widow, who was tenant for life, & the heir, to whom the estate must have descended upon the disclaimer of the trust. During the life of the acting extrix., however, he interfered in the disposition of testator's property, as her friend or agent:—Held: he was not, under the circumstances, chargeable as exor. or trustee.

A deed of disclaimer is the best evidence of the renunciation of a trust, but the conduct of the party desirous of renouncing a trust may amount to a disclaimer.

It is most prudent that a deed of disclaimer should be executed by a person named trustee, who refuses to accept the trust, because such deed is clear evidence of the disclaimer, & admits of no ambiguity; but there may be conduct which amounts to a clear disclaimer, & such appears to be the case here (LEACH, M.R.).—*STACEY v. 1415. — Personal representative of surviving trustee.]—An action for breach of trust was brought by a beneficiary under a settlement against, as sole defts., the exors. of one of the two trustees, but not the surviving trustee, of the settlement. The surviving trustee was also dead, & no new trustees of the settlement had been appointed, although the person in whom the power to appoint was vested was prepared to exercise it:—Held: the representatives of the surviving trustee must be added as defts., or new trustees of the settlement must be appointed & added as defts.

It may be that there is no present trustee, as there may be no representative of the last surviving trustee, or if there be one that he has refused to accept the trusts of this settlement; but in the present case there is a person entitled to appoint new trustees of the settlement, & if there be no trustees, such an appointment ought to be made, & there is no reason why the existing trustees, if any, or such new trustees, should not be brought before the ct. trustees was vested in C. & D. during their joint lives. B. survived A. & died in 1905, & the exors. of his will acted as the trustees of the settlement. In 1908 C. & D. in exercise of the power by deed appointed two persons to be new trustees of the settlement & made the usual vesting declaration. The exors. of B. objected that the appointment of new trustees was a nullity because they were, by Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 30, the existing trustees of the settlement, & though willing to retire, they could not be displaced except by the ct. or by a deed to which they were made parties & retired:—Held: although the exors. were trustees of the settlement until the new trustees were appointed, the deed was a valid exercise of the power to appoint new trustees & operated forthwith to oust the exors. for all purposes from the trust.—*Re ROUTLEDGE'S TRUSTS, ROUTLEDGE v. 1420. Right to exercise power of sale.]—The person who is to execute a trust or exercise a power must be a person who is in some way pointed out by the creator of the trust or power as a proper person to execute or exercise it.

A., who died in 1883, devised his residuary estate to B., C., D., & E. (the words " & their heirs " being omitted) upon trust, after B.'s death, for sale as if they were absolute owners. The will gave the trustees powers to postpone the sales, & demise & manage during postponement, & enabled the original number of trustees to be reduced, but not below two, on any appointment of new trustees.

All the trustees, who were also exors. of the will, proved it, & in 1908 D., the surviving trustee, died, having appointed exors. by his will:—Held: D.'s exors. could not make a good title to a freehold house forming part of the residuary estate of A.

Semble: if in the will of A. the devise had been to the four trustees & their heirs, the heir of the surviving trustee could, apart from Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 36, have executed the trust for sale & by virtue of that sect. his legal personal representatives would have been substituted for his heir.—Re CRUNDEN & MEUX'S CONTRACT, [1909] 1 Ch. 690; 78 L. The prohibition against the Public Trustee himself accepting such a trust imposed by sect. 2 (5) of the same Act is personal to the Public Trustee; & there is nothing in the appointment of such a corporate body as custodian trustee which abridges or affects the powers or duties of the Official Trustee of Charity Lands or the Official Trustees of Charitable Funds within the meaning of sect. 2 (5).

P. died in 1859, & the last tenant for life under his will died in 1889. C., who died in 1868, by his will devised & bequeathed all his real & personal estate to trustees upon trust to pay unto his wife, or permit her to receive during her life or widowhood, the annual produce thereof, & after her decease or second marriage, whichever should first happen, upon trust for G., the illegitimate son of C., his heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, according to the respective natures thereof. The will of C. contained a power for his trustees, during the life of his widow & the minority of G., to change the investment of any stocks, shares, & securities in which any of his estate might be invested, & to sell & convey the real or personal estate or any part thereof, & a direction to invest the proceeds of sale. G. died in 1880, intestate & without issue, & C.'s widow died in 1886. Upon the death of the last tenant for life under P.'s will, all the trusts as to the house under both wills having come to an end, the question arose whether the surviving trustee of P.'s will or the surviving trustee of C.'s will was entitled to the house:—Held: as the trustees of C.'s will had no active duties to perform except during the life of C.'s widow & the minority of G., he was a bare trustee only, & had no right to call for a conveyance of the legal estate.

Testator devised & bequeathed the whole of his real & personal estate to trustees upon trust to pay to his wife or permit her to receive during her lifetime the annual produce of the property. Now, undoubtedly, according to the decision in Doe d. Leicester v. Biggs, No. 1584, post, that would not give the legal estate to the trustees, but would vest it in the wife (FRY, L.J.).—*Re LASHMAR, MOODY v. PENFOLD, [1891] 1 Ch. 258; 60 L. J. Ch. 143; 64 L. The position of the vendor is something between what has been called a naked or bare trustee, or a mere trustee (that is, a personal without beneficial interest) & a mtgee. who is not, in equity (any more than a vendor), the owner of the estate (JESSEL, M.R.).—*LYSAGHT v. 1431. — Having active duties to perform.]—A trustee with a beneficial interest in the trust estate is not a "bare trustee" within Land Transfer Act, 1875 (c. 87), s. 48. A vendor of freeholds who let the purchaser into possession before payment of the purchase-money & execution of the conveyance was, by reason of his having a lien on the property for his purchase-money & not being bound to convey until payment, held not to be a "bare trustee" within the Act. Qu.: whether a trustee without a beneficial interest in the trust estate, but having active duties to perform in relation thereto, is a "bare trustee" within the Act.

When a trustee has active duties to perform, & the cestuis que trust are more than one & have not requested, then he is not a bare trustee; but if they are all competent & have requested, then he is, because he has then kept the estate, so to speak, by wrong; that is, upon request he ought to have conveyed, & he is thus a bare trustee (JESSEL, M.R.).—*MORGAN v. 1439. Duty to convey legal estate—On demand of mortgagor.]—The mtgor. has power to convey even if the legal estate is outstanding in a bare trustee. He can compel the trustee to come in & grant the estate, & in that way has the power to convey. He has power to call on the trustee to convey to him, & to convey in manner aforesaid, or he has power in another way; he has power to call upon him to convey if he has the whole beneficial interest (JESSEL, M.R.).—*GENERAL FINANCE MORTGAGE & DISCOUNT CO. v. SECT. 7.—CONSTRUCTIVE TRUSTEES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—HOW CONSTITUTED.

A. In General.

1440. Purchase of land in name of another.]—Where a man buys land in another's name & pays money, it will be in trust for him that pays the money, though no deed declaring the trust.—ANON. (1683), 2 Vent. 361; 86 E. R. 486.

PART II. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.
c. Purchase or sale of land—Sale of wife's property—Retention of proceeds by husband.]—Where a house & land, the separate property of a married woman, were sold, & the proceeds taken & retained by her husband, who had never accounted for them. In an action on a promissory note of the 1441. —[Plff. parish council resolved in June, 1911, to purchase 12 acres of land, partly for allotments & partly for a recreation ground. According to plffs., deft. suggested that a private person could probably effect the purchase on better terms than the council, & that thereupon it was arranged that deft. should attend the sale & purchase the land at a price not exceeding £800. Deft. purchased the land for £400, & it was conveyed to him, but as he refused to convey it to the council, plffs. now claimed a declaration that he held the land as trustee for them:—Held: plffs. were entitled to the declaration asked for, but plffs. must undertake with all convenient speed to get the necessary consent to pay deft. the purchase price & expenses.—LONGFIELD PARISH COUNCIL v. ROBSON (1913), 29 T. L. R. 357.

1442. Purchase of land by executor in own name.—ALLEYN v. ALLEYN (1730), Mos. 262; 25 E. R. 385.

1443. Money obtained by fraud—Sale by tenant for life—Consent to bar of entail obtained by fraud.—A., tenant for life, with remainder to B. in tail, by fraud gets B.'s authority to levy a fine. He sells the land & invests the purchase-money in the funds, where it is clearly identified.

The ct. held clearly, that as testator had obtained their signatures to the fine fraudulently, he should be considered as a trustee to the amount.—NEWCOMB v. BURDON (1793), 2 Anst. 343; 145 E. R. 897.

1444. — Appointment by tenant for life.—J. being entitled to the dividends of £4,300 for life, with a power to appoint by any deed or writing the principal after his death, & in default of appointment, to his next of kin, & being in prison for debt & in great distress, is prevailed upon by H. to enter into an agreement for sale of the principal after his death, in consideration of £1,000 & other sums therein stated to have been previously lent & advanced to him by H.

By a subsequent deed, in consideration of £1,854 therein stated to be due from J. to H., & of £1,000 paid by L. & others, J. by the direction of H. appointed that the principal should on his death be transferred to L. & others, with a proviso that they should assign the same to H. on payment of £1,000 & interest, & all further advances.

The £1,854 or any part of it had not in fact been advanced by H.:—Held: the appointment was well executed. H. was a trustee for the personal representatives of J. for the excess beyond the money received by J.—MELLER v. MINET (1830), Tam. 481; 48 E. R. 191.

1445. Appointment by bankrupt—Appointee trustee for creditors.—A bkpt. having a power of appointment over money, to be executed only by will, made his will, disposing of the property, & then became bkpt.; & afterwards obtained his certificate, & died without revoking his will:—Held: the appointee by the will was a trustee for the creditors of the bkpt., who became such after he had obtained his certificate.

Where there is a general power of appointment by will & an appointment is made the appointee is a trustee for creditors (LEACH, V.-C.).—JENNEY v. ANDREWS (1822), 6 Madd. 264; 50 E. R. 1091.

1446. Trafficking with another's money.—So it is also where one not expressly a trustee has bought or trafficked with another's money. The law raises a trust by implication, clothing him, though a stranger, with the fiduciary character, for the purpose of making him accountable (LORD BROUGHAM, C.).—*DOCKER v. 1447. Agreement to carry on trust.—W. being indebted to C., agreed by deed to convey his estate to C., upon trust to sell the same, & to pay off certain debts of W. due to other persons, & then the debt due from W. to C., & to pay over the surplus, if any, to W. No conveyance was executed. C. being afterwards in possession of the estate under a fi. fa. issued on a judgment upon a warrant of attorney given by W., agreed with W.'s agent to purchase the estate. W. ratified the contract, but subsequently impeached it as one made by a trustee for his own benefit & against the interest of the cestui que trust:—Held: C. was not a trustee for W., but was a creditor holding a security for his debt.—WATERS v. GROOM (1844), 11 Cl. & Fin. 684; 8 E. R. 1262, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. CHAMBERS v. WATERS (1833), Coop. temp. Brough. 91, L. C.

1448. Dealing with property of testator—Surviving partners.—The surviving partners of testator dealing with the property of testator, with the knowledge that it belongs to his estate, are bound to inquire into the trusts on which it is held, & are liable as if they had actual notice of those trusts.—TRAVIS v. MILNE, MILNE v.

wife, 26 years after:—Held: the husband remained a trustee for his wife of the proceeds, & the wife's claim constituted separate estate.—BRUGGS v. WILLSON (1897), 24 A. R. 521.—CAN.

f. — Sale by person entitled to moiety of land.—B. & D., father & son, were jointly entitled to a moiety of certain property, B.'s brother E. & K., E.'s son, being jointly entitled to the other moiety. B. & D. were transported for life. Thirty years afterwards (B. having meantime died), D. returned from transportation, & asserted his right to a moiety against a person deriving his title from E. & K., who had taken possession of the whole:—Held: E. & K. had taken possession subject to a constructive trust in favour of B. & D., & accordingly D. was entitled to assert this right, & no limitation could affect it.—DURGA PRASAD v. ASA RAM (1879), 1 L. R. 2 All. 361.—IND.

g. ——Where lands are deemed to be sold in a mtgo. suit, the infant heir-at-law of mtgor. is not a trustee within 11 Geo. 4, & 1 Will. 4, c. 60.—GODDARD v. MACAULAY (1844), 6 I. Eq. R. 221.—IR.

h. ——Plff.'s judgment debtor, before judgment, entered into an agreement to purchase lands & was put in possession. He paid one-half the purchase-money & then left the province, placing deft. in possession as his agent before doing so. Deft. paid the balance of the purchase-money & took a deed in his own name:

Held: the judgment debtor had an interest in the land to the extent of the amount paid by him, & deft. must be declared to hold this in trust for the judgment creditor.—RAISTON v. GOODWIN (1888), 21 N. S. R. (9 R. & G.) 177.—CAN.

k. — Holding purchased under Land Purchase Acts by limited owner—Sale by Irish Land Commission to recover arrears of annuity—Collusion between owner of holding & purchaser at sale—Purchaser declared a trustee for persons entitled in remainder.—HATSEY v. GUIRY, [1918] 1 I. R. 135.—IR.

l. ——Certain vendors were willing to sell part of an estate to plffs., but were not willing to sell another part to defts. unless plffs. bought their portion. Deft. for his own convenience & advantage, requested plff. not to buy, but to allow 1452. Sale of pledged shares.—Pledgor trustee for purchaser.]—A debtor resident in India pledged shares, held by him in a joint stock banking co. in England, with a creditor in England, with an authority by letter to sell, which was communicated to & recognised by the banking co. The creditor, in exercise of the authority, sold the shares to a purchaser. Upon the petition of the purchaser:—Held: the shares were "stock," & debtor in India, being constructively a trustee, was a trustee for the purchaser within the Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60).—Re ANGELO, Ex p. FRITH (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 278; 18 L. T. O. S. 316; 16 Jur. 831; 64 E. R. 1116.

1453. Insurance policy taken out in name of insurance company.—Company trustees for assured.]

—M., having obtained from the W. Insurance co. one loan on the security of a policy effected with them on his own life, & a charge on certain funds in which he had an interest contingent on his surviving S., applied to the W. co. for a further advance, proposed to be secured by a further charge on the premises comprised in the first transaction, & also, further, by an insurance to be effected by M. on his own life against the life of S. for the amount of the new advance; no distringas to be placed on the trust fund. The directors of the W. co., by resolution, communicated to M., "entertained" the proposal, with the alteration that there was to be a distringas for both loans, & the new policy was to be for £500 more than the amount of the proposed fresh advance. The deed for securing the fresh advance was accordingly prepared, both the draft & the engrossment, on the footing that the new policy was to be taken out in M.'s name, & assigning & dealing with it accordingly. M. appeared before the medical officers of the K. co., with whom this counter insurance was effected, & the distringas was placed upon the stock for the amount of both loans; but it was found impossible to serve the trustee of the fund with notice of the transaction, or ascertain from her whether M.'s title was clear, & the loan was never actually advanced, M. dying very unexpectedly in the lifetime of the tenant for life. It then turned out that the secretary of the W. co., who had undertaken to complete the policy with the K. co., had taken it out, not in M.'s name, but in the name of the trustees of the W. co., who accordingly received the whole amount:—Held: the W. co. were trustees of the amount so received for the benefit of M.'s estate.—MARTIN v. WEST OF ENGLAND LIFE & FIRE INSURANCE CO. (1858), 4 Jur. N. S. 158; 6 W. R. 377.

1454. Person having obligation with respect to property.—Acquisition of greater interest.—By neglect of duty.]—An obligation to do an act with respect to property creates a trust; & if the party who is subject to the obligation acquires or retains by means of his neglect of duty, a greater interest than he would otherwise have had, he becomes a trustee of such excess for the benefit of those who would have been entitled to it if the obligation had been duly fulfilled.—FLEEMING v. HOWDEN (1868), L. R. 1 Sc. & Div. 372, H. L.

1455. Notice to vendor of assignment by purchaser.]—F. entered into a contract with P. to sell him some leasehold property. P. paid part of the purchase-money, & obtained from F. a lease of the premises for a short term of years, in favour of a nominee of P. P. had dealings with bankers, to whom he became much indebted. Being called on to give the bankers some security, he handed to them the title deeds of a freehold estate, which he charged with the debt, & at the same time he deposited with them his contract for the purchase of the leasehold property. He accompanied this deposit with a written memorandum, in which he agreed to make to the bankers "a valid assignment of my contract with F. for the purchase of" the leasehold premises, "by way of mtge. for further securing," etc. The bankers, by their solr., some time afterwards gave to F. notice, in the above words, of this agreement, & the solr.'s letter called it "a charge by P. on his purchase." F. acknowledged the receipt of this notice. He heard nothing more of the matter. P. did not complete his purchase at the stipulated time, but did so afterwards, & then F. according to the terms of the original contract, executed to him a conveyance of the leasehold premises, without any notice being taken in the conveyance of the claims of the bankers:—Held: the rule of equity that a vendor of an estate is, after the making of the contract of sale, a trustee for the purchaser, did not apply to this case, & F. was in no way liable to the bankers.—SHAW v. FOSTER (1872), L. R. 5 H. L. 321; 42 L. J. Ch. 49; 27 L. T. 281; 20 W. R. 907, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. McCREIGHT v. FOSTER (1870), 5 Ch. App. 604, L. C.

him to buy the whole in his own name, on behalf of himself & the pltf's. Pltf's agreed to this & refrained from buying, & defd. bought the land with his own money, but afterwards refused to convey any part of it to the pltf's. —Held: the action was barred by Stat. Frauds, the alleged agreement not being in writing, & the facts alleged were insufficient to support a constructive trust, as they showed nothing more than the alleged unenforceable agreement.—HENDERSON v. MCKENZIE, 1 J. R. N. S. 47.—N.Z.

1. —Agent purchasing for self with principal's money.]—Where an agent is authorised to purchase land for

m. Persons who obtain certificate of transfer without any right.]—Persons who obtain a certificate of title to land, without any right, under the Act or otherwise, are trustees for the persons entitled, & can be compelled to transfer 1456. Money in hands of receiver.]—Money not accounted for & due from a receiver under the ct. is, by his recognisance, made a debt of record, although the balance due has not been ascertained. The receiver is a trustee of such money for the persons entitled thereto, & cannot, as against them, avail himself of Stat. Limitations, although his final accounts have been passed & the recognisances vacated.—SEAGRAM v. TUCK (1881), 18 Ch. D. 296; 50 L. J. Ch. 572; 44 L. T. 800; 29 W. R. 784.

1457. Damages recovered by committee of freemen.]—Under local Acts of 1774 & 1870, the soil of the Town Moor a common within the city of Newcastle-on-Tyne, was vested in the corpn., & the herbage rights in the freemen & widows of freemen, each being entitled to depasture two milch cows thereon. A certain portion of the moor was set aside for the holding of fairs & horse-races, & the corpn. & committee of stewards representing the freemen were, by the Act of 1870, empowered jointly to make agreements for the appropriation of parts of the moor for agricultural shows, reviews & other public purposes. In 1882, the races hitherto held on the moor were removed elsewhere, & the corpn. & the committee of freemen jointly gave a licence for the holding of a temperance festival on the race ground, which had since been held annually. Owing to great damage having been caused, in 1918, to the herbage by the use of heavy traction engines to bring roundabouts, etc., to the festival, the committee of freemen refused to concur in granting a licence to defts. to attend with their roundabouts, but such licence was granted by the corpn. alone, & the festival was held as usual. On the committee suing defts. for an injunction & damages:—Held: (1) the temperance festival was not a "fair" within the meaning of the local Acts; (2) the corpn. was not entitled to grant a licence to defts. without the concurrence of plffs.; (3) defts. were trespassers & plffs. were entitled to an injunction against them & damages; (4) plffs. would hold the damages recovered as trustees, & defts. were not concerned with the application thereof.—WALKER v. MURPHY, [1915] 1 Ch. 71; 83 L. J. Ch. 917; 112 L. T. 189; 79 J. P. 137; 59 Sol. Jo. 88; 13 L. G. R. 109, C. A.

1464. — Heir constructive trustee.]—Where lands are devised to trustees in fee upon trusts, or with powers requiring the exercise of judgment & discretion, & they disclaim, the heir-at-law cannot exercise such powers or trusts, although he may hold the estate subject to the trusts of the will.

Testator devised real estate to trustees, & directed that they should & might grant leases thereof, for the term of twenty-one years. The

of a missing person's estate may, in the absence of an indication of its being adverse, be considered to be that of a trustee until the expiry of the term fixed for his return.—NARAIN SAHAI v. POSOO (1867), 2 Agra 78.—IND

1465. — Settlor constructive trustee.—By a voluntary settlement of 1866, real estate was granted unto & to the use of a trustee upon certain trusts; the settlement contained the usual covenant for further assurance, but no power of revocation by the settlor. In 1867, the trustee executed a deed of disclaimer, & the settlor also purported to put an end to the settlement:—Held: the settlement was not thereby rendered inoperative, but the trust was imposed on the settlor, in whom, by operation of law the estate had reverted after the creation of the trust.

Under these circumstances, I think that the trust was really created, & that the fact that the trustee subsequently disclaimed did not destroy the trust, but that upon the revesting the settlor himself held in trust (BYRNE, J.).—MALLOTT v. 1492. ———.]—A trust fund was held by trustees under a will in trust for two persons in equal shares for their respective lives &, after the death of each, in trust as to his share for his children. The fund was entrusted by the trustees to a solr. employed by them as solr. to the trust, & was by him invested, together with other moneys belonging to different trusts, on an equitable mtge. by deposit of title deeds, in his own name. The mtge. being paid off in Jan. 1879, the solr. received the money so invested from the mtgor., & distributed one moiety of it, the tenant for life having died, among his children, who by his death had become absolutely entitled to the same. He did not account for the other moiety to the trustees, but retained the same in his own hands.

On Feb. 21, 1891, an action was brought by the surviving trustee under the will against the personal representative of the solr., who had died in Nov. 1879, claiming an account of the money so retained by him:—Held: he must be considered as having been in the position of an express trustee of such money, & therefore the lapse of time did not act as a bar to the action.

The wife repeatedly demanded the money from her husband until his death in 1894, but did not obtain it. In 1895 she brought an action against her husband's exors. for the amount:—Held: the husband knew or was affected with notice that the legacy was his wife's separate property, and had, by taking possession of it, made himself a trustee for her; as he had retained the money & not accounted for it, his exors. could not under Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 8, claim the benefit of Stat. of Limitations, & his estate was liable to refund the amount.—*WASELL v. The co. instructed deft. to buy the lands, & from time to time in 1883 on his request remitted him moneys for that purpose. Defendant purchased the lands & paid for them out of these moneys, & conveyed the lands to the co. In 1901 the co., having then for the first time discovered that deft. had charged the co. more than he had paid for the lands, brought an action to recover from deft. the balance of the moneys remitted to him & not accounted for:—Held: The moneys having been remitted by the co. to deft. as their agent for investment in a specified manner, deft. was an express trustee for the co. of those moneys, & Stat. his death, subject to a restraint upon anticipation, with an ultimate trust in default of children, as happened, for testator absolutely. The trustee of the mtge. debt was neither a party to, nor informed of, the settlement. In 1887 the mtge. money was paid to testator who never accounted for it to the settlement trustees. He died in 1916, & the trustees & widow now claimed the mtge. moneys:—Held: testator was a constructive trustee who had constituted himself such by receiving trust property with the knowledge that it was trust property & the persons representing his estate were not entitled to avail themselves, by analogy, of Stat. 1497. —.—]—When it is said that a person who fraudulently receives or possesses himself of trust property is converted by the ct. into a trustee, the expression is used for the purpose of describing the nature & extent of the remedy against him. But as the remedy is given on the ground of fraud, it is governed by the principle, that the right of the party defrauded is not affected by lapse of time, nor, generally speaking, by anything done or omitted to be done, so long as he remains, without any fault of his own, in ignorance of the fraud that has been committed.—*ROLFE v. Transfer into joint names.—With surviving executrix.]—A person who is requested, & agrees to permit a transfer of trust stock, from the name of the surviving extrix., under a will, into their joint names, & at the same time obtains a copy of the will, is thereby constituted a trustee of the stock, & is not merely an agent for the extrix. So, where the co-transferee acts with the privity of all parties, in the execution of the trusts of the will, though no declaration of trust has been executed, he is a trustee, & not removable at the pleasure of the persons interested in the trust property.—*COCKS v. 1499. Money borrowed by husband of cestui que trust.—A marriage settlement gave the trustees power to invest the trust funds, with the consent of the husband & wife, in real or personal security. The income was payable to the wife for life for her separate use, & after her death to her husband.

In 1852 the trustees, at the written request of the wife, advanced trust funds to the husband on the security of his bond for double the amount advanced, the condition of the bond being that if he repaid the sum advanced six months after the date of the advance with interest at 4 per cent. then the obligation should be void.

The husband & wife lived together in amity until the death of the latter in 1876. The husband died in 1896 without ever having paid any interest on the bond to the trustees or given them any acknowledgment of the debt:—Held: the husband had borrowed the money with the knowledge that it was trust money, & the rules binding trustees with reference to pleading Stat. Limitations as a defence applied.—Re DIXON, HEYNES v. DIXON, [1900] 2 Ch. 561; 69 L. J. Ch. 609; 83 L. T. 129; 48 W. R. 665; 44 Sol. Jo. 515, C. A.

1506. ————]—In order that a solr. of a trustee may be debarred from accepting payments out of the estate in respect of costs properly incurred notice must be brought home to him that at the time when he accepted them the trustee had been guilty of a breach of trust such as would preclude him from resorting to the trust estate for payment of costs. A trustee allowed his solrs. to retain costs, out of the trust estate. At the time the solrs. had notice that the trustee had committed a breach of trust in secretly buying for himself part of the trust estate. In an administration action the trustee made default in payment into ct. of the balance found to have come to his hands:—Held: the solrs. could not be compelled to pay in the sums received by them out of the estate.

Solrs. cannot be made liable as constructive trustees unless they are brought within the doctrine of the ct. with reference to other strangers, who are not themselves trustees, but are liable in certain cases to be made to account as if they were trustees (STIRLING, J.).—*Re BLUNDELL, BLUNDELL v. More than twelve months after the payment of the bill some of the beneficiaries as plffs. took out an originating summons against the administratrix as deft. The summons was intitled in the matter of the estate of testatrix & also in the matter of the solr. & it was served on him, but he was not named as deft. The summons asked for a reference of the bill to taxation & that in taxing the costs the master might certify what amount was properly chargeable against the capital of the trust estate & what amount was properly payable by deft. personally as tenant for life; & that, if it should appear that the bill was overpaid the solr. might be ordered to repay the amount certified to be overpaid to deft. It was suggested that the bill contained items which were not properly chargeable against the capital of the trust estate & that the solr. knew that he was being paid out of the capital of the trust estate & had notice of the breach of trust at the time when he received payment:—Held: even if the solr. had been made deft. to the summons the relief asked against him could not have been obtained.—*Re JACKSON, Re COTTRELL, BOUGHTON-LEIGH v. No trustee was appointed. Debtor's solr. registered the resolution, & he, by means of money supplied to him by debtor paid creditors the first instalment. A sum sufficient to provide for the payment of the second instalment was placed in the solr.'s hands, partly by debtor, but mainly by one of the sureties. Debtor gave the surety a bill of sale as security for the amount which he advanced. The solr. sent a circular to creditors, stating that he should be prepared on a specified day to pay them the second instalment at his office. He after this paid some of creditors, but most of them were left unpaid. One of the latter applied to the ct. for an order that the solr. should pay him. The solr. claimed a lien on the moneys in his hands for costs due to him by debtor, who had absconded:—Held: the solr. had constituted himself a trustee of the money for creditors, & the ct. had jurisdiction to order him to pay appct. his proportion of the second instalment, which he was accordingly ordered to pay, with appct.'s costs.—*Re CLARK, Ex p. 1518. ——— Conveyance to mortgagee.]—A. covenanted to convey property immediately after his marriage upon certain trusts for the benefit of the children of the marriage, & in the meantime, & until such conveyance, to stand possessed of the property upon the same trusts. No conveyance was ever executed, & A. mortgaged the property to B., C., & D., successively, suppressing all notice of the trusts contained in the deed of covenant. The legal estate of the mtged. property became vested by successive transfers in D.:—Held: D. who had obtained the legal estate without notice of the trust in favour of the children of the marriage, was entitled to hold the legal estate as against those cestuis que trust, until the whole of his debt was satisfied.—BATES v. 1519. ——— Conveyance of stock.]—The trustee of a sum of stock for T., was ordered, in a suit instituted by his cestui que trust, to transfer it into ct. The trustee had previously sold out the fund & appropriated it to his own use, & in order to supply its place, he transferred into ct. a fund of which he was possessed as trustee for B. B. afterwards filed a bill against the trustee for the purpose of securing this trust fund, & presented a petition in both suits, praying that he might be allowed to follow the fund in ct., & that it might be transferred to the credit of the second suit:—Held: the legal title to the fund being in the Accountant-General in trust for T. in the first suit, & T. having no notice of the fraud, he was a purchaser of it for valuable consideration, & was entitled to retain it against B.—THORNDIKE v. 1520. ——— Transfer not registered until after notice.]—A sole trustee of shares executed a transfer & delivered it with the certificate of the shares to a mtgee. who had no notice of the trust. The mtgee. did not register his transfer until after notice of the trust:—Held: the transfer could not be impeached.—DODDS v. HILLS (1865), 2 Hem. & M. 424; 12 L. T. 139; 71 P. R. 528.

1521. ——— Assignment of bond.]—On the occasion of the sale of a freehold estate it was agreed that the purchase-money should be paid in railway bonds, & the purchaser deposited with & assigned to A., who alleged himself to be the solr. of the vendor, one of such bonds in part payment of the purchase-money. The contract turned out to be a fraud on the purchaser & went off, & on the purchaser applying to A. for the return of the deposited bond, he was informed that A. had placed it in the hands of B., to secure a debt due from himself to B. B. had no notice of the terms upon which A. held the bond. In a suit by the purchaser against B. to restrain him from dealing with the bond:—Held: the deposit & assignment of the bond by the purchaser to A. for the purpose above-mentioned did not make A. in the events which happened, a constructive trustee for pltf., & as B. was a bonâ fide purchaser of the bond for value without notice, he could not be restrained from dealing with it.—ASHWIN v. 1523. ——— Property obtained by fraud.]—Two trustees, one of whom was a solr., advanced money on mtge. The mtgor., with the concurrence of the solr. trustee, sold part of the mtged. property without disclosing the mtge. Regular conveyances in fee to the purchasers were executed by the mtgor., containing a recital that he was seised or otherwise well & sufficiently entitled in fee simple. The solr. trustee received the purchase-money, & retained it. Eleven years afterwards both trustees executed a reconveyance of the property so sold, the other trustee believing, on the representation of the solr. trustee, that the property was then about to be sold by the mtgor. Soon afterwards the solr. trustee absconded, & the other trustee then filed a bill against the mtgor. & the purchasers, praying for foreclosure against them:—Held: though the purchasers were purchasers for valuable consideration without notice, they could not avail themselves of any legal estate acquired by means of the reconveyance, which having been obtained by fraud, must be cancelled.—*HEATH v. 1524. — Conveyance to trustee.—C., trustee with plff. of a will, & also trustee with deft. of a settlement, having misappropriated a portion of the settlement fund, applied an equal portion of the will fund in the purchase of stock, which he transferred into the names of himself & deft. Plff. & deft. were both innocent of C.'s fraud, & deft. & the cestuis que trust under the settlement had no notice that the stock was purchased with part of the will fund. C. died insolvent. In an action by plff. to compel deft. to transfer the stock to him:—Held: deft. having by accepting the transfer of the stock given up his right to sue C. for his debt to the trust, was entitled to be treated as a purchaser for value without notice, & consequently to retain the stock as part of the settlement fund.

If deft. held it simply as a transferee without any consideration, of course he would stand in no better position than the transferor; that is to say, as the fund in the hands of C. would have been subject to the trusts of the will, anyone who took it from him simply as a volunteer could not say that he had any better title, & would still be bound by the trusts of the will (COTTON, L.J.).—*TAYLOR v. 1525 — — — J.—In 1882 T., a solr., advanced money of his own upon the security of leaseholds mortgaged to him by sub-demise. In 1889, being then one of the two trustees of the B. settlement, he received a sum of money belonging to the settlement, & without the knowledge of his co-trustee, fraudulently applied it to his own use. By entries in his books, under the heading of the trust, he purported to appropriate his own mtge. debt to answer the sum of which he had defrauded the trust estate, but he never communicated the purported appropriation either to his co-trustee or to his cestuis que trust, all of whom were sui juris.

In 1896 the appropriation became known to one of the cestuis que trust, who was a solr. & acted as such for the others, but although they had all become absolutely entitled in possession to the trust funds they never called upon the trustees to transfer them & no inquiry was made respecting the mtge.

In 1889 T. was also a trustee of the T. settlement. In 1895, T. having then become sole trustee of that settlement, N. was appointed co-trustee, & at N.'s request, on T.'s representation that the trust funds included the above-mentioned mtge. debt & securities, the representation being supported by his production to N. of the deeds, T. executed a legal transfer thereof into the joint names of himself & N., N. being then totally ignorant of the existence of the B. settlement & of T.'s secret appropriation thereto. The deed of transfer had been prepared by T. as solr. to the T. trust, & the mtge. & other title-deeds remained in his custody as such solr.

In 1897 T., without N.'s knowledge, deposited the deeds with his bankers as security for a debt due from him to them, at the same time executing to them a deed poll by which he charged the debt upon all his estate & interest in the property comprised in the deeds, & undertook to execute, on request, a legal mtge.; & he thereby declared that during the continuance of the security he would hold all his interest thereby charged in trust for the bank as mtgees.; & he appointed three officers of the bank his attorneys for him & on his behalf, & as his act & deed, to execute any such legal mtge. as aforesaid. At that time the bank had no notice of either of the two settlements.

In Mar. 1898, T. absconded, & in Apr. 1898, notice was given to the bank of the T. settlement, but they had no notice of the B. settlement. Notwithstanding the notice, the bank purported to execute to themselves by their three officers as T.'s attorneys under the deed poll a legal mtge. of the leaseholds comprised in the deposited deeds.

In actions to ascertain the priorities of the B. settlement, the T. settlement, & the bank to the benefit of the mtge. debt & securities:—Held: (1) there was a good appropriation in 1889 in favour of the B. settlement, though not communicated by T. either to his co-trustee or to his cestuis que trust; (2) assuming there was a good appropriation in favour of the B. settlement, N., as trustee of the T. settlement, & having no notice of the appropriation, could not be deprived of the advantage acquired by him as against the B. settlement by the possession of the legal estate in one moiety of the mtge. debt & securities & of the better right to the legal estate in the other moiety which had become vested in the bank through T.'s mtge. to them operating as a severance of the joint tenancy between himself & N.; & N. must be treated as an innocent purchaser for value without notice, on the ground that by accepting the transfer of the mtge. debt & securities he gave up his right to sue T. for the debt due to the T. settlement.—*TAYLOR v. 1527. — Sale of mortgaged property.—Two trustees, one of whom was an unmarried woman, sold freehold hereditaments & next day took a mtge. of the same property to themselves. The mtge. contained a recital that the mtge. money belonged to the two trustees on a joint account. Subsequently the woman trustee married, & later on, together with her co-trustee, transferred the mtge. by a deed in which her husband did not join & which was not acknowledged by her.

On a subsequent sale of the property a purchaser made a requisition that this woman's husband should join in the conveyance, & that the deed should be separately acknowledged by her:—Held: it not appearing on the title that the transferors of the mtge. were trustees, the purchaser took from them as beneficial owners.—Re WEST & HARDY'S CONTRACT, [1904] 1 Ch. 145; 73 L. 1528. — Purchase from beneficiary trustee.—If the trustees under a will convey the property to the beneficiary, who is also a trustee, on terms which imply that the trust is at an end, a bond fide purchaser getting the legal estate from the beneficiary is unaffected by prior equities of which he had no notice.—PEARCE v. BULTEEL, [1916] 2 Ch. 544; 85 L. J. Ch. 677; 115 L. T. 291; 32 T. L. R. 723; [1916] H. B. R. 147.

iii. Acquisition of Equitable Estate.

See, generally, EQUITY, Vol. XX., pp. 305-310, Nos. 586-614.

1529. General rule.—Person taking equitable interest takes subject to trust.—A trustee of funds, invested on a mtge. in his name, deposited the deeds, without notice of the trust to secure advance to himself:—Held: cestuis que trust were entitled to priority over the equitable mtgee. & to delivery up of the deeds.—*NEWTON v. 1530. Effect of subsequent acquisition of legal estate.—After notice of trust.—A. in whom a lease was vested, deposited it with his bankers by way of equitable mtge. The bankers afterwards received notice, as the fact was, that A. was a mere trustee for the leasehold but they subsequently obtained from him a formal mtge. of the legal estate:—Held: the cestuis que trust had priority over the bankers.—*BAILLIE v. D. By Intermeddling with Trust.

(a) In General.

1533. General rule.—In a case in which the will gave no specific directions as to the payment of debts, the exor., who was also the ultimate residuary legatee, having taken on himself, after the trustees named in the will had renounced, to administer the estate, did not ascertain & secure the residue at the end of the year, but worked part of the property, a coal mine, to a profit for several years, when it ceased to be of any value. On a bill, at the suit of the person having the charge on the residue, praying that the will might be established & accounts taken:—Held: the exor. was not, after assuming to act as a trustee, entitled to postpone the sale of the property to the prejudice of the person having the charge on the residue; having postponed it, he was chargeable with the value of the mine at the end of a year from testator's death, with interest thereon, & that value must be calculated as constituted of the aggregate of the annual profits derived from the mine in all the subsequent years, till it became unproductive, such annual profits to be treated as deferred payments.—WIGHTWICK v. LORD (1857), 6 H. L. Cas. 217; 26 L. J. Ch. 825; 29 L. T. O. S. 303; 3 Jur. N. S. 699; 5 W. R. 713; 10 E. R. 1278, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. LORD v. WIGHTWICK (1854), 4 De G. M. & G. 803, L. 1534. ——If one, not being a trustee & not having authority from a trustee, takes upon himself to intermeddle with trust matters or to do acts characteristic of the office of trustee, he may thereby make himself what is called in law a trustee of his own wrong, i.e. a trustee de son tort, or, as it is also termed, a constructive trustee (*A. 1537. Permitting breach of trust.—Proposed trustee in possession of trust funds.—Where a retiring trustee, in the expectation that a new trustee would be duly appointed, but such appointment was never made, executed a transfer of the trust funds into the name of the new trustee, who allowed a breach of trust to be committed:—Held: (1) the retiring trustee was liable for the breach of trust; (2) the proposed trustee was liable as trustee de son tort in respect of trust funds which actually came into his hands.—PEARCE v. PEARCE (1850), 22 Beav. 248; 25 L. J. Ch. 893; 28 L. T. O. S. 34; 2 Jur. N. S. 843; 52 E. R. 1103.

1538. Participating in fraudulent conduct of trustee.—(1) Those who create a trust clothe the trustee with a legal power & control over the trust property, imposing upon him a corresponding responsibility, which responsibility may be extended in equity to others who are not properly

(2) But strangers are not to be made constructive trustees merely because they act as the agents of trustees in transactions within their legal powers, even transactions of which a ct. of equity may disapprove, unless those agents receive & become chargeable with some part of the trust property, or unless they assist with knowledge in what they know to be a dishonest & fraudulent design on the part of the trustees.—BARNES v. 1543. ——]—In general cestuis que trust may proceed against an agent of their trustee where he has not confined himself to the duties of an agent, but by accepting a delegation of the trust, or by fraudulently mixing himself up with a breach of trust has himself become a trustee by construction of law i.e., a trustee de son tort. But it is essential to the character of a trustee that he should have trust property either actually vested in him, or so far under his control that he is in a position to require that it should be vested in him. A man ought not to be held responsible as a trustee for money under his control unless he can, if he will, put the money into his own pocket, or pay it away as he pleases to some one else.—Re

At the same time it may be observed that, if the conduct of G. amounted to a breach of trust, & T., being aware of that breach of trust, became a party to it, the ct. would probably have dealt with him as with an actual trustee, to the extent of his participation; on the other hand, if there were no actual or concerted breach of trust, T. would, at the most, be regarded as only a constructive trustee (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—PORTLOCK v. Testator's widow became his sole acting trustee & extrix.

Deft., who was admitted as a solr. two years after testator's death in 1833, was employed by the extrix. as her solr. He received moneys from her & invested them at interest at her request, & in her name. He also called in other moneys owing to testator's estate & invested them. He received the proceeds of the investments & paid the debts & legacies; & the surplus remained invested on the same securities at the request of the extrix. Deft. made in respect of the moneys placed by the extrix. in his hands certain alleged payments, both of principal & interest, & continued to do during her life. She died in 1844. Subsequently in 1846, when £800 became payable on the securities, deft. alleged that, upon an account being taken between him & the estate of the extrix., there was no balance in her favour, or a small balance in his favour. He thereupon renewed the securities in his own name. Deft. admitted knowledge of the trusts, but submitted that, during the lifetime of extrix., he acted under her instructions as solr., & was not called upon to take cognisance or notice of any breach of trust committed by her in respect of pltf., or any other cestui que trust.—Held: the acts of deft. were more than the acts of a mere agent; he had assumed the character of trustee, & a breach of trust having been apparently committed, he must be held accountable on that footing.—MORGAN v. Where property is given to a man subject to certain defined trusts there remains no right in any one but the donee when those trusts are exhausted. He also gave his "trustees" another sum to be expended on a window in a church; & directed them out of his residuary estate to palisade & keep in repair the graves of his family. He then gave certain real & leasehold hereditaments to his "friends, D. & J.," upon certain durable trusts. The will then contained the usual trustees' receipt clause. After giving some other legacies, testator gave the residue of his real & personal estate, money, securities for money, etc., unto his "two friends, D. & J.," share & share alike, as tenants in common, to hold to their heirs & assigns for ever. He then gave his trust & mtgce. estates to D. & J., subject to the trusts & equities, & so far as he was interested as mtgce. to be disposed of for the purposes of that his will. The will then contained a power of appointment of new trustees, which provided for the vesting of "all & singular the trust estate, moneys, & securities" in the new trustees upon the same trusts, etc. Testator then appointed his "two friends, D. & J., exors. in trust" of that his will. Trustees' receipt, indemnity, & reimbursement clauses followed; & the will concluded with a direction to the trustees to employ a certain solr., he winding up the whole of testator's affairs after his decease at his request: — Held: the trustees took the residue beneficially. — *ROMANS v. The will contained a bequest of the personalty to the brothers E. & A. & the sisters, & appointed E. sole exor. This paper not being forthcoming, the trustee of the deed, offering to pay the debts, claimed to be entitled to retain the trust premises for his own benefit. On a bill filed, however, by the trustees of the will, a conveyance to them was directed, the Lord Chancellor holding that the will gave them a title as against the trustee of the deed, who had nothing to do with the question how the premises would be disposed of in consequence of the trustees of the will not being able to carry the trusts into full effect. — *ONSLOW v. The residue was not severed from the trust with which testatrix had clothed all her property in the hands of her exors., but although a trust was intended to be created, it failed for want of adequate expression of it.—*YEAP CHEAH NEO v. 1572. — [J.—] Where testator gives the ultimate remainder of a fund, after the termination of a life interest, to be disposed of at the discretion of the trustees of his will, & makes a general gift of all his residue, a trustee by representation of the last surviving trustee named in the will is not entitled to take the fund beneficially, & it will pass under the general gift of residue.—Re BOOTH, HATTERSLEY v. COWGILL (1917), 80 L. J. Ch. 270; 116 L. T. 465.

1573. — Property not exhausted by trust.—Testatrix, by will made in 1837, bequeathed residue of real & personal property to trustees, "their heirs, exors., administrators & assigns," upon trust to sell & convert such parts of her estate as should not consist of money or stock in the public funds, & to stand possessed thereof upon trust to pay thereout two life annuities, & subject thereto, upon such trusts as she should thereafter by any codicil or codicils direct. Testatrix died without making any further bequest. By an order made in an administration suit, the trustees were declared entitled to the residue of the real estate, & the Crown to the personality. One of the trustees & an annuitant had since died. A petition was presented by the surviving trustees for the payment of the sum arising from the real estate which had been set apart to answer the annuity:—Held: the trustees took as joint tenants, & the surviving trustees were therefore entitled.—TAYLOR v. HAYGARTH (1862), 6 L. T. 95, L. C.

1574. — Indemnity & reimbursement clause.—A gift of property to trustees on trust for sale, followed by the declaration of a particular trust which does not exhaust the whole of the property thus given, will be treated as creating a primary general trust of the whole of such property, so that there will be a resulting trust of the unexhausted residue in favour of testator's heir & next of kin. The insertion of a trustee's indemnity & reimbursement clause will further strengthen the conclusion thus drawn from the presence of the trust for sale.—Re WEST, GEORGE v. GROSE, [1900] 1 Ch. 84; 69 L. J. Ch. 71; 81 L. T. 720; 48 W. R. 138; 44 Sol. Jo. 80.

1575. — Declaration against heir.—Testator gave & devised all his freehold & lease-hold estates to E. his nephew, his heirs & assigns for ever, "upon the trusts & for the uses following": The trusts declared were of a very limited nature, consisting merely of a life interest in a small part of the estate to M., a joint interest to E. & M. in a leasehold house & furniture, together with a direction to pay a trifling annuity & some small legacies. There was no further declaration of the trust or use:—Held: upon the construction of the entire will, there was no resulting trust for testator's son & heir-at-law; there being a declaration in the will that his son was not to enjoy an acre of his property, & other circumstances to show the intention of testator that E. should take the undisposed of property beneficially.—HUGHES v. EVANS (1843), 13 Sim. 496; 7 Jur. 523; 60 E. R. 192.

1576. — Failure of trust.—Testatrix devised real estate to her trustee & his heirs, in trust out of the rents to maintain her son W. until he attained twenty-one, "and when & so soon as" he should attain twenty-one, testatrix devised it to him in fee. But in case he should die before attaining twenty-one, to his children, if any, or if none, then to debts. The son did attain twenty-one, & died without issue in the lifetime of testatrix. There being no heir or next of kin of the testatrix:—Held: the trustee was entitled to hold the real estate beneficially.—COX v. PARKER (1860), 22 Beav. 168; 25 L. J. Ch. 873; 27 L. T. O. 1586. —.]—(1) Testator devised all his real estate to three persons & their heirs on trust to permit & suffer his wife to take the net rents & profits for life, subject to a certain rentcharge secured to testator's daughter by her marriage settlement. Remainder to that daughter for life, for her sole & separate use independent of her husband, remainder to the husband for life, with several contingent remainders over.—Held: the legal estate in fee remained in the trustees, & was not divested by the declaration of trust to permit the wife to take the net rents & profits. If, however, the devise had been on trust to permit the wife to take the rents & profits simply, then the use would have been executed by the statute.

(2) When an estate of inheritance is devised on certain trusts, the rule of construction is to hold so much of the legal estate to be vested in the trustees, & no more, as is requisite for carrying the testator's intention into execution.

(3) It is now clearly settled that, whenever a conveyance is made to trustees on trust to pay over to a specified person the rents & profits arising from the land, they take the legal estate in the premises; but that, if the terms of the trust be, that they are to permit & suffer the tenant for life to receive the profits, then the use is executed in that person, & the legal estate is divested out of them. It is clear, also, that, whenever testator shows his meaning to be that the trustees are to have anything to do in executing the trusts of his will; if he order, for example, that they are to receive the rents, etc., the legal estate must remain vested in them; & in the case of Gregory v. Henderson, No. 1806, post, where there was a devise to trustees to permit & suffer testator's widow to receive & take all the rents & profits & that her receipts for all rents, with the approbation of the trustees, should be good & valid, the ct. held that the legal estate remained in them, on the ground that there was some duty for them to perform (PARKE, B.).—BARKER v. GREENWOOD (1838), 4 M. & W. 421; 1 Horn & II. 389; 8 L. J. Ex. 5; 3 Jur. 25; 150 E. R. 1494.

1587. —.]—Testator made the following will: "Subject to my debts, I bequeath to my wife the clear rentals of my two leasehold houses, Nos. 17 & 19, P. Street, for her life, to be paid to her every month; & after her decease I leave No. 17 (& other property) to my son R.; & I direct that the rents shall be received & the property be under the management of my exors. After R.'s decease I direct his share of the property be equally divided between his children; but, should he die without leaving lawful issue, I direct the same to be equally divided amongst the surviving children of my daughter M. I appoint my son-in-law J. & his wife M. my exors."

The exors. proved the will, & collected the rents of the property, & paid the rents of No. 17 to the widow during her life, & after her death, to R., who died without leaving issue.—Held: though there was no direct bequest, the exors. took the legal estate in No. 17 as trustees, but only to the extent of the trust; & after the death of R. the legal estate became vested in the surviving children of M.

The rule of construction in such cases is that the trustees take estates co-extensive with the trusts they have to perform; & that if the performance of the trust require only that the legal estate shall be vested in them for a limited time, they take it only for that period (QUAIN, J.).—*STEVENSON v. The widow & son were appointed exors. Testator died in May, 1871, & the will was proved by the exors. In June, 1881, the widow & son put up for sale part of the freehold estate, under conditions of sale providing that requisitions must be delivered within ten days from the delivery of the abstract; time to be of the essence of the contract. The purchaser made a requisition that the legacies must release the estate from their legacies. The vendors refused to procure their concurrence, on the ground that the real estates were charged with debts, & that the vendors could sell discharged from the legacies. The purchaser then asked whether any debts remained unpaid. The vendors declined to answer the question, & the point was then raised, after the time for sending in requisitions had expired, whether any charge of debts was created. The vendors persisting in their refusal to answer the question whether any debts remained unpaid, the purchaser took out a summons to have it declared that no charge of debts was created by the will, & if it was, then that the vendors were bound to answer the inquiry as to debts:—Held: as the exors. took the whole

v. Trusts for Separate Use.

1611. Trustee takes legal estate.]—Lands are devised to trustees & their heirs, in trust to pay several legacies & annuities, & then to pay the surplus of the rents & profits to A. during her life, for her separate use, or as she should direct; & after her death, the trustees were to stand seised to the use of the heirs of her body, with other remainders over:—Held: this was a use executed in the trustees & their heirs during the life of A. & she had only a trust in the surplus rents & profits during her life; & the subsequent limitation to the trustees, to the use of the heirs of her body, was a use executed in the persons entitled to take by virtue thereof; & therefore, there being only a trust estate in the ancestor, & a use executed in the heirs of her body, their different interests could not unite so as to create an estate tail by operation of law in the ancestor.—SAY & SEAL (LORD) v. JONES (LADY) (1729), 3 Bro. Parl. Cas. 113; 1 E. R. 1212, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. JONES (LADY) v. SAY & SEAL (LORD) (1728), 8 Vin. Abr. 262, L. C.

1612. —.]—HARTON v. HARTON, No. 1700, post.

1613. —.]—Testatrix devised lands to C. & his heirs, in trust, to & for the sole & separate use of her daughter, S., & to convey, assign & assure the same to S., her heirs & assigns, for ever, free from & independent of the debts, etc., of any present or any future husband, & to empower & permit her to take & receive the rents, etc., & to give receipts for the same, or to appoint any person to receive them, as if she were sole & unmarried. S. afterwards made a will, whereby she devised the lands to her husband, for life, with remainder over, & died:—Held: the legal estate vested in the trustee during her life, & the devise by S., during her coverture, was void.

It is admitted that at the time of the devise by S., the legal estate & the premises in question was in her trustees for the purpose of securing her against the rights of her husband (PARK, J.).—DOE d. STEVENS v. SCOTT (1828), 4 Bing. 505; 1 Moo. & P. 317; 6 L. J. O. S. C. P. 84; 130 E. R. 862.

1614. —.]—Testatrix devised estates to N. in fee, in trust to receive & apply the proceeds to the use of S., the sister of testatrix, for her life, & from & immediately after the decease of S., to convey the same to such uses as S. should by deed or will appoint. There was no devise over. S. died in the lifetime of testatrix:—Held: the estate devised to N. did not lapse by reason of S.'s death, but vested in N. at the death of testatrix. The estate so vested in N. was an absolute legal fee.

A devise like the present, to a trustee to receive the rents & profits, & pay them over to a married woman for her separate use, & afterwards to convey them as she shall direct, vests the legal estate in the trustee. . . . I admit that, for a great number of years past, the ct. have held that trustees take that quantity of interest which the purposes of the trust require, & the question is not whether the maker of the instrument has used words of limitation or expressions adequate to convey an inheritance, but whether the exigencies of the trust require a fee or can be satisfied by a less estate (per CUR.).—DOE d. SHELLEY v. EDLIN (1836), 4 Ad. & El. 582; 5 L. J. K. B. 137; 111 E. R. 906.

1615. —.]—Testator, by his will, directed his trustees to pay & discharge his debts, etc., & subject thereto gave & devised a freehold messuage, etc., to them, in trust to permit & suffer his wife to live & reside therein during her life free from rent, & after her decease he gave & devised the same unto his exors. & trustees, & the survivor of them, his exors. & administrators, in trust to permit & suffer his daughter to receive & take the rents thereof for & during the term of her natural life, free from the debts, control, or engagements of her then or any future husband; & after her decease he gave & devised the same unto his exors. & trustees, etc., upon trust to pay & apply the rents thereof to & for the use & benefit of his grandson M., the eldest son of his daughter, in the event of his not having attained the age of twenty-one at the time of her decease, & from & immediately after his attaining that age he gave & devised the same unto M. for & during the term of his natural life. Then, after certain contingent devises to the trustees which never took effect, he devised & bequeathed the residue of his property unto & between his wife & his daughter "in equal shares & proportions, share & share alike, the share of my daughter also independent of the debts, control or engagements of her present or any future husband in manner aforesaid:—Held: the co-heirs of testator's daughter took a legal estate under the residuary devise.

We think, however, that the words "in manner aforesaid" are satisfied by supposing that testator intended to give her the residue, as well as the particular estate, to her separate use; & that they cannot have the effect of giving the estate, by implication, to the trustees. If they could, still the estate to them would only be co-extensive with the object to be attained, viz. the protection of her interest during her life. It would, therefore, determine on her death, & the co-heirs-at-law would still take the legal estate (CRESSWELL, J.).—DOE d. MÜLLER v. CLARIDGE (1848), 6 C. B. 641; 18 L. J. C. P. 105; 12 L. T. O. S. 400; 13 Jur. 173; 136 E. R. 1399.

1616. —.]—Testator devised real estate unto & to the use of three trustees, their heirs & assigns, upon trust, to pay the rents to a married woman, for her separate use for her life, & after her death, in trust for all her children, who, being sons, should attain twenty-one, or being daughters should attain that age or marry, & their heirs & assigns for ever:—Held: the trustees took the whole legal fee.

My opinion is that, although there is authority, & quite as much principle as authority, for saying that a devise unto & to the use of trustees & their heirs, without any restrictive words, may, by the context, be restricted to an estate pur autre vie, yet that mode of interpretation cannot be here adopted (KNIGHT-BRUCE, V.-C.).—RILEY v. GAR-

equal shares, if more than one, & to their respective heirs & assigns, with remainders over. After making other specific devises & bequests, Testator devised & bequeathed the residue of his estate & effects, subject to & charged with the payment of his debts, to one of his trustees absolutely, for his own use & benefit. The daughter D. survived testator, & she afterwards married & had three children, but she died before any of them had attained twenty-one:—Held: by reason of the direction that testator's debts should be paid, the trustees took the whole legal estate in fee simple in the specifically devised estate.—*MARSHALL v. 1627. ———.—Testatrix, who died in 1875, after directing her debts to be paid by her exors. thereafter named, specially devised a freehold messuage to her sons H. & W. & their heirs, upon trust to allow H. to use & enjoy same for his life, & after his decease upon trust for all & every one or more of the children of H. as he should by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment in trust for all & every one or more of the children of H. who being sons should attain twenty-one, or being daughters should attain that age or marry, & appointed her said sons H. & W. her exors. H. having died in 1892, without having exercised the power of appointment, leaving two children, infants & unmarried, the question arose whether the remainder to the children was a legal contingent remainder which had failed for want of a freehold to support it, or whether the legal estate in fee was vested in the devisees & exors.:—Held: the direction to pay debts was sufficient to show that testatrix did not mean to avail herself of the machinery of Statute of Uses in the specific devise to her sons & their heirs, or to make them mere conduit pipes of the legal estate, but she intended that the legal estate should pass to, & not through, them "in trust" according to the modern signification of the term.—*Re BROOKE, BROOKE v. There were also powers by deeds to charge the lands with younger children's portions, & to lease for twenty-one years. While the mtges. remained outstanding, & the trusts for payment of debts unperformed, the eldest son, by deed, reciting the will & power, conveyed lands to trustees & their heirs, on trust by the rents & profits to raise & pay a jointure to his wife, during her natural life only; & charged the lands with portions for younger children, if any; which deed also contained a covenant for quiet enjoyment against the settlor & testator, during the wife's life:—Held: by such deed the trustees of the jointure took no legal estate.—*WYKHAM v. 1637. ———.]—One devised a rentcharge to his wife for life together with the interest in £1,200; & after her decease devised the rentcharge to trustees & their heirs to sell & dispose of same & distribute the purchase-money amongst certain persons; & after giving a few small legacies directed his household goods, etc., to be sold; & the money arising from the sale of the rentcharge & from his household goods, etc., & from all other his estate & effects of what nature or kind soever & whosoever, he directed should be first liable to the payment of legacies, & the residue to be divided into certain parts which he bequeathed to certain persons; with a proviso that the receipt of the trustees to a purchaser of the rentcharge should be sufficient without seeing to the application of the purchase-money; & then he appointed the trustees & his wife his exors. —Held: the trustees did not take the legal estate in the real property of the deviser.

A power of sale does not of itself give the legal property. Where a man directs his exors. to sell, till sale the land descends to the heir-at-law (LAWRENCE, J.).—HILTON v. KENWORTHY (1803), 3 East, 553; 102 E. R. 708.

1638. ———.]—(1) Testator, by his will, dated July 26, 1825, devised as follows:—"I give & devise unto my wife E., to W. & J., their heirs, exors., & administrators, all my real & personal estates whatsoever, upon trust to pay the rents, interest, & produce thereof unto my wife during her lifetime, & after her decease to pay & apply the rents, issues, & profits thereof for & towards the maintenance of my children during their lives, with benefit of survivorship; & after their several deceases, I give & devise the share of her so dying unto her children & unto his or their heirs, as tenants in common. I give, direct, ordain, & appoint unto my wife E., to W. & J., their heirs, exors., & administrators, power & authority to sell, dispose of, mortgage, lease & otherwise in all manners manage my estate, both real & personal, as if I were living. I appoint my wife E., & W. & J., the exors. of this my will, & also guardians of my children." Testator died in 1825, leaving his widow E., one of plffs., & three infant daughters unmarried, the youngest of whom died in 1844; & the eldest in 1832 married, & had several children living at the date of the hereinafter-mentioned contract of sale. J. never acted under the will, & in 1833, executed a deed disclaiming all interest under the will. The other party, W., died in 1840. In 1845, E., testator's widow, entered into a contract to sell certain land of which testator was seised in fee simple at the time of his death. In an action by E. against the vendee for the recovery of the purchase-money:—Held: she took an estate in fee simple in the land in question.

1639. ———.]—A will contained the following words—viz.: "as it may probably happen that the arrangements made by this will cannot be carried into effect without a sale of the whole or at least a great portion of my real & personal estates, I recommend great caution in the sale thereof, for I believe that my landed property is daily increasing in value," followed by a nomination of exors. & trustees, "for duly carrying the disposition of all the property, thereby given or alluded to, into effect":—Held: this was not sufficient to divest a legal estate previously devised to children & to vest it in the trustees.—LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. v. BRIDGER (1864), 4 New Rep. 261; 10 L. T. 689; 10 Jur. N. S. 650; 12 W. R. 948.

1640. ———.]—Testator, without expressly devising his real estate, empowered his trustees & exors. to manage & to sell & invest the proceeds. He directed them, under the management of his wife, to carry on his farm for the maintenance of his family, & subject to that trust directed his real & personal estate to be held on trust for his children equally, some of whom were to bring into hotchpot property of their own:—Held: the trustees had the legal estate in the realty, on the death of the wife, though the children were all of age, could sell & convey.—COOKE v. SIMPSON (1877), 46 L. J. Ch. 463.

1641. ——— Construction of private Act.—J. devised lands by will to trustees. The will contained no power of sale. In 1873 a private Act of Parliament was passed, reciting that it was desirable that the lands should be sold, & enacting "from & after the passing of this Act the legal estate in the lands and hereditaments devised by the will of J. shall, for the purposes of this Act, vest in W., J., & R." The Act went on to give the trustees power to sell all or any part of the lands:—Held: the legal estate was vested in the trustees for all purposes.—UNDERWOOD v. PENNINGTON (1877), 37 L. T. 320, P. C.

1642. ——— Power of leasing.—Devise to trustees, their heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, in trust, to let the freehold estates for any term they thought proper, at the best improved yearly rent, to pay one-third of the rents of the freehold estates to his wife for life, & one-third of the personalty to her absolutely, & then to lay out the other two-thirds of the personalty in the funds; & to pay the dividends & the rents of two-thirds of the freehold estates, & after the death of the wife, the other third of the rent of the freehold estate to his daughter for her own separate use, & after her death the freehold estates & two-thirds of the personal estate to the daughter's children, to be equally divided amongst them, & to be paid them at the respective ages of twenty-one years; & if his daughter died without leaving issue, then his freehold estates to his wife for life, & after her death to his heir at law, as if he had died intestate:—Held: the trustees took an estate in fee.

If these leases were to be made out of their estate, they must have the fee (ABBOTT, J.).—DOE d. TOMKYNs v. WILLAN (1818), 2 B. & Ald. 84; 106 E. R. 298.

1643. — — —.]—Testator devised to trustees & their heirs, certain premises described in his will, upon trust to permit his daughter to enjoy the same, & take the rents during her life exclusively of her husband; & from & after her decease, upon trust to the use of such child or children, & for such estate as she, notwithstanding her coverture, should by any deed or will appoint; & for want of such appointment, then to the use of the heirs of her body; & for default of such issue, to his own right heirs for ever. Then, after devising several other lands to the trustees in the like terms, he concluded thus: "I hereby will, etc., that the trustees, & each of them, shall, may & do, in every respect give receipts, pay money, & demise the aforesaid premises, or any part thereof, as shall be consistent with their duty & trust, or otherwise":—Held: the trustees took a fee simple in the lands devised to them.

If leases made in pursuance of this direction would take effect out of the estate of the trustees, they must take the fee (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—DOE d. KEEN v. WALBANK (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 554; 9 L. J. O. S. K. B. 276; 109 E. R. 1248.

1644. — — — Power of management.]—COOKE v. SIMPSON, No. 1640, ante.

1645. — — — Trustees having several powers—Only one requiring legal estate.]—Testator devised four estates, three of which he settled to uses in strict settlement under which an infant was now tenant in tail of the C. estate. The fourth estate he limited to trustees for a term of one thousand years upon trust out of the rents & profits to discharge the incumbrances upon all the estates in a certain order, & subject thereto he settled the estate to the uses of the two estates other than the C. estate. The will contained a provision as to each estate that if any person who, if the provision had not been inserted therein, would for the time being be entitled to the possession or receipt of the rents & profits of such estate as tenant for life or in tail should be under the age of twenty-one years, then & in such case & as often as same should happen the trustees of the will should enter into possession or receipt of the rents & profits of the estate, & should during the minority of such person keep up the mansion house & manage the property with power (inter alia) to hold manorial cts. & accept surrenders of leases; & should maintain the infant, & apply the surplus rents & profits in the same way as those of the fourth estate. Upon an originating summons to determine the validity of the minority clause:—Held: there was no necessity for implying any estate at all in the trustees for that without any such estate they could enter & take possession & exercise the powers entrusted to them, & the mere inclusion in those powers of one, that of holding manorial cts., which could not be exercised without their having the legal estate did not operate so as to change the whole character of the settlement. At most it was only a power, & not a trust, to do something which the law would not allow. The minority clause was therefore valid.—Re STAMFORD & WARRINGTON (EARL), PAYNE v. GREY, [1912] 1 Ch. 343; 81 L. J. Ch. 302; 105 L. T. 913; 28 T. L. R. 159; 56 Sol. Jo. 204, C. A.

1647. — — —.]—To trespass for breaking & entering pltf.'s close, deft. pleaded, (a) the user of a right of way for twenty years; (b) a user of the way for forty years. Replication to the former plea, that the corp. of L., being seised in fee of the locus in quo, by indenture of feoffment demised it to H. for three lives & twenty-one years; that the corp. delivered seisin to H., who became & was seised of the close during the period of twenty years in the plea mentioned, & the term so demised was existing in full force, & not expired, surrendered, or otherwise become void. The replication to the other plea stated, in similar terms, the demise of the locus in quo by the corp. of L. to H., & then alleged that H., being so seised of the locus in quo, by indenture between C. of the first part, H. of the second part, & M. & W. of the third part, granted to M. & W. a right of way over the locus in quo, Rejoinder to replication to first plea, that the term so demised was not existing during the period of twenty years in that plea mentioned, modo et formâ. Rejoinder to replication to second plea, that H. did not grant to M. & W. the right of way, modo et formâ. At the trial, it appeared that the corp. of L., being seised in fee of the locus in quo, by indenture of Feb. 17, 1800, demised it to H. for three lives & twenty-one years. By indenture of July 23, 1803, after reciting the above indenture, H. assigned to C. the demised premises for securing payment of £1,200, lent by C. to H. By indenture of Feb. 9, 1804, after reciting the demise to H. by the corp., the assignment by H. to C., & also reciting that H. had agreed to sell part of the land to M. & W. for a sum out of which the sum due from H. should be paid to C.; C., at the request of H., bargained, sold, assigned, & transferred, & H. granted, bargained, sold, assigned, & transferred to M. & W. part of the demised premises, together with the right of way in question. In 1812, H. died, having made his will, whereby, after bequeathing his estates to his wife for life, he devised the same, after her death, to J. & M., in manner following, "upon trust to pay & apply the rents, issues, & profits of the same to & for the life & benefit of my daughter M., & her assigns, during her life, & independent of her present or any future husband; & from & after the decease of my daughter, I give, devise, & bequeath my real & leasehold estates as aforesaid unto & equally among all & every the children of my daughter M., share & share alike, as tenants in common; & if M. shall die without leaving lawful issue her surviving, then I give, etc., the same to my granddaughter A." In 1816 the wife of H. died, & by indenture of Dec. 11, 1817, the corp. of L. assigned to the trustees the reversion in fee simple of the locus in quo:—Held: pltf. was entitled to a verdict on the rejoinder to the replication to the first plea, since the trustees under the will of H. took only an estate during the life of testator's daughter, & therefore the lease for lives did not merge in the grant of the reversion.

The gift over is by words as strong as those by which the property is given to the trustees. It is as if testator had said, "I direct that the estates of the trustees shall cease on the death of M., & I then give the corpus of the property to my children" (PARKE, B.).—*COOKE v. where testator made a gift in this form :—" I give to A. upon trust to pay to or permit C. to receive the rents ? " . . . there is an old decision, which has always been recognised as good law—Doe d. Leicester v. Biggs, No. 1584, ante—which has decided that under a will so framed the legal estate passes, not to the trustee, but to the person who takes the life interest (JESSEL, M.R.).

(2) It being admitted that where law is given to a trustee upon trust to pay the rents over to anybody, the trustee must take the legal estate, because otherwise he could not pay at all, as he could not receive the rents (JESSEL, M.R.).

(3) Where there is an indefinite devise to trustees & their heirs upon trust to pay or allow somebody to receive the rents during life, followed either by a simple remainder to another person in fee simple, or in fee tail, or as another person shall appoint, but giving an absolute interest; or followed by a new devise to a person in fee simple, or in fee tail, or giving an absolute interest—in either of those cases the estate of the trustees by implication is to be limited to the life of the person who takes the first life interest (JESSEL, M.R.).—*BAKER v. We are to collect this the devisor's intention from the whole will (LORD KENYON).—DOE d. COMPERE v. HICKS (1797), 7 Term Rep. 433; 101 E. R. 1061.

The will contained a power authorising A. & B. & the survivor of them, & the heirs & assigns of such survivor, to "convey in exchange" any parts of the property, & to "convey upon partition" any of testator's undivided shares, with a direction that for those purposes it should be lawful for them by deed to revoke the uses, estates, trusts, & limitations of the property in shares so exchanged or conveyed in partition, & by the same or any other deed to "grant & convey" them to the requisite uses, "or for the purposes aforesaid to limit, appoint, or declare such use or uses," etc., as should be necessary. J. died in the lifetime of S. :—Held : the intention of testator clearly was to create a succession of legal limitations in settlement, & the ct. could not hold the legal fee to be in A. & B. merely because if it was not in them the contingent remainder to the children had in the events which had happened failed for want of an estate of freehold to support it.—*CUNLIFFE v. 1657. ———.]—By a will made in the year 1833 testatrix devised a freehold message unto trustees, their heirs & assigns, upon trust for her daughter during her life, & after her decease upon such trusts for the lawful child or children of the daughter as she should by deed or will appoint, & "in default of such appointment" in trust for the daughter's right heirs. Testatrix directed that the receipts of her daughter should be a discharge to the trustees, that the message should be enjoyed by her daughter free from the debts, control, or engagements, of any husband with whom she might intermarry, & that the trustees might reimburse themselves. Testatrix authorised the trustees, their heirs or assigns, also to sell the message with the consent of her daughter "or other the persons or person who shall be beneficially interested under the trusts." The daughter after her mother's death granted the message to debts, in fee simple, & died without having been married. Plff., her heir-at-law, having brought an action to recover the message :—Held : the message was devised to the trustees in fee simple at law, the limitation to the right heirs of the daughter in default of an appointment to her children was a remainder & not an executory devise, both the estate for life devised to the daughter & the remainder to her right heirs were equitable estates, consequently the estate for life & the remainder to the right heirs coalesced pursuant to the rule in Shelley's Case (1581), 1 Co. Rep. 93, the daughter could make a valid disposition of the fee simple, & debts were entitled to the message.—RICHARDSON v. HARRISON (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 85; 55 L. J. Q. B. 58; 54 L. T. 456, C. A.

1659. ———.]—By a settlement made in 1908 the settlor, being then entitled for a contingent reversionary equitable estate in fee simple to freehold hereditaments & for a corresponding estate to copyhold hereditaments & investments in personally directed to be held upon the same trusts as capital money arising under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), from the freehold hereditaments granted unto a trustee, first, the freehold & copyhold hereditaments, & secondly the investments, to hold the same as to the freehold hereditaments & the investments "to the use of the trustee according to the customs of the several manors of which they are respectively held"; & it was thereby agreed that the trustee, his exors. or administrators, or other the trustee or trustees for the time being should stand possessed of the freehold hereditaments upon trust for the settlor during his life, & after his death upon such trusts in favour of his widow, children, or remoter issue, or the respective husbands or wives of such children as he should appoint, & subject thereto, in trust for his sons and daughters in tail as therein mentioned, with an ultimate trust for the settlor, his heirs & assigns. The copyhold hereditaments were to be held on corresponding trusts, & the investments were to be applied, first, in discharging an incumbrance created by the settlor, & as to the residue, if any, in the purchase of freehold hereditaments to be assured to the trustee or trustees in fee simple upon the same trusts as were thereby declared of the freehold hereditaments thereby assured. On the death of the trustee in 1913 :—Held : as to the freehold & copyhold hereditaments the trustee took a life interest only, & that the trusts of the settlement came to an end on the death of the trustee; as to the investments no words of limitation appropriate to real estate were necessary to pass an absolute interest to the trustee, s. 22 (5) of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), having made no alteration in the law in this respect, & the trusts of the settlement did not come to an end on the death of the trustee.

It is perfectly clear that the intention of the settlor was to transfer his whole estate & interest in the property to the trustee to be held by him for the benefit of the beneficiaries under that settlement : & the question is whether, having regard to that intention, I can give effect to it notwithstanding the fact that in the conveyance to the trustees there are no words of limitation such as "heirs" or "in fee simple" (SARGANT, J.).—*Re MONCKTON'S SETTLEMENT, MONCKTON v. iii. Objects of Trust.

1660. General rule—Estate dependent on requirements of trust.—The first question in this case is what estate the trustees took in the premises, because the devise is to them three, & the survivor & survivors of them, & no words of limitation are annexed to their estate; nor is it said to the heirs of the survivor, but it is given them "upon the trusts hereinafter-mentioned." Now if they did not take a fee, then their estate would not be sufficient to answer the trusts thereafter-mentioned, & so all such subsequent trusts would be void. But upon this point we are all of opinion that the trustees take fee simple by implication, for the intent of testator plainly appears, viz. that they should have an estate sufficient to satisfy & answer all the trusts in the will which must be an estate of inheritance (per CUR.).—*SHAW v. I give to B. & S. all my other real estate, in trust, out of the rents & profits thereof, to pay my wife the jointure of £700 settled by me on her; & also to pay out of the rents & profits of my freehold estate unto F. during her life, an annuity of £100; & thereout also to pay C., during the joint lives of her & F. an annuity of £400; & after the decease of F. if C. should survive her to pay C. an annuity of £400; & after the decease of C. in case she shall have only one child then in trust to pay out of the rents & profits of my estates, the yearly sum of £200 for the maintenance of such child, until he or she shall attain the age of twenty-five years, & after that, in trust to raise the sum of £1,000 to pay to him or her at that age; & my will is, that so much as my residuary personal estate shall fall short of paying my debts & legacies hereby given, shall be by my trustees raised & paid out of the rents & profits of my several estates, & by mtge. of all or any part thereof; & after payment of the interest of the money so to be part borrowed & the expenses of keeping my estates in repair, & all such costs as my trustees shall expend by means of the trusts, in trust to pay out of the overplus rents & profits thereof, £60 yearly, for the maintenance of the eldest son of B., until he shall have attained the age of twenty-three years; & I hereby give full power to my trustees, & I do order & direct that they shall settle a jointure on any woman such eldest son shall marry, of £60 per annum; & in trust to apply the overplus rents & profits of my estates in paying off the money so to be borrowed on mtge.; & after payment thereof, to pay the rents & profits of my estates to B. during his life, to his own use; & after his decease, then my trustees shall stand seised of my real estates to, for, & upon the uses following (that is to say): to the use of J., the eldest son of B. during his life, & after the determination of that estate, to the use of M. & his heirs during the life of J. upon trust to preserve contingent remainders; & after his decease to the use of the first son of J. & the heirs male of his body; & in default of such issue to the use of the second, third, fourth, & all other sons of J. successively in remainder, & the several heirs male of the bodies of such sons. There were similar limitations over in default of issue, each life estate being followed by a gift to trustees to support contingent remainders.—Held: the trustees took an estate in fee simple.

Those cases, however, in which it is laid down that the cts. look solely to the trusts to be performed, even where there are words of inheritance, must be read with this qualification that due effect is to be given to the language of the will, unless we can collect from the context an intention to give a more limited estate (PARKE, B.).—BLAGRAVE v. 1686. ———.]—Testator by his will dated in 1688 appointed his wife extrix, thereof, & directed payment of his debts without saying by whom, & after bequeathing certain pecuniary legacies, he gave the residue of his real & personal estate to two other persons upon trust as to his real estate to pay to or permit & suffer his wife to receive the rents & profits for her life, & after her death upon trust to pay to or permit & suffer his niece to receive the rents & profits for her life for her separate use; & after declaring certain trusts with regard to his personal estate, he directed his trustees after the death of the survivor of his wife & niece to pay two pecuniary legacies, & after payment thereof to stand possessed of his real estate & the residue of his personal estate upon certain other trusts:—Held: there was a charge upon the real estate of the debts & immediate legacies, & also of the two future legacies, the charge of the debts & immediate legacies being unaccompanied by any express direction to the trustees to pay, did not vest the legal estate in them, the form of the gift to the widow, in the absence of any trust for her separate use, vested the legal estate in her for her life, the purposes of the will not requiring that the legal estate should vest in the trustees during her lifetime.

Although testator here purports to devise all the residue & remainder of his estate to the trustees, their heirs, exors., administrators & assigns it does not follow necessarily that the trustees take the whole legal estate. It is established by a long series of decisions that they only take such legal estate as enables them to carry out the trusts imposed upon them. . . . It was admitted in the argument that the statement given in Jarman on Wills 5th ed. p. 1145, was a correct statement of the law. That statement is in these words: "The mere fact, that the devised property is charged with debts or legacies, will not vest the legal estate in the trustees, unless they are directed to pay them or the will contains some other indication of an intention to create a trust for the purpose." Now, the trustees are not exors. & are not expressly directed to pay the debts or the legacies payable on testator's death, & it seems to me that under these circumstances it cannot be inferred that the existence of the charge operates to give them the legal estate. . . . There is here no direction that the beneficial estate for life taken by the widow is to be for her separate use. The language is upon trust that "they my trustees & the survivor of them & the heirs, exors., administrators & assigns of the survivor do, & shall pay to or permit & suffer my wife to receive & take the rents & profits thereof during her life." According to the decision in Doe d. Leicester v. Biggs, No. 1584, ante, primâ facie, unless there is some context to the contrary to take away the effect of the words that would give her the legal estate during her life. . . . The rule which is established in that case [Harton v. Harton, No. 1700, post] is . . . most accurately & briefly stated by LORD DAVEY in Van Grutten v. Foxwell, No. 1704, post, where he says: "It is a convenient rule that where there are recurring occasions for the exercise of active duties by the trustees & no repeated devises to them to enable them to perform their duties, the legal estate, if once in the trustees, is to be deemed to be vested in them throughout, notwithstanding the duration in the meantime of what would but for the recurring duties be construed as uses executed in the beneficiaries" (STIRLING, J.).—Re ADAMS & PERRY'S CONTRACT, [1899] 1 Ch. 554; 68 L. J. Ch. 259; 80 L. T. 149; 47 W. R. 326; 43 Sol. Jo. 278.

1687. Exception to rule—Gift of life estate & remainder without change of words.—The rule that trustees take only so much of the legal estate as is sufficient to enable them to perform the duties imposed on them does not apply where the gifts of the life interest & the remainder are made without any change of words, as where there is a devise to trustees, their heirs & assigns, "in trust for A. for life," & after his death, "in trust for his children."—*TUDBALL v. E. Commencement and Duration.

(a) In General.

1688. Death of surviving trustee—Without proving or acting in will—Legal estate vests in trustee.—The fact of a surviving trustee under a will dying without proving or acting in the will, will not prevent the legal estate in the trust property devised to him from vesting in him, unless he has actually renounced probate of the will or disclaimed the trusts by deed, & the devisees of the trust estates of such trustee, acting under his will, cannot, by disclaiming the trusts of the original testator's will, divest themselves of the legal estate in the trust property thereby devised by their testator.—KING v. PHILLIPS (1852), 22 L. J. Ch. 422; 20 L. T. O. S. 203; 16 Jur. 1080; 1 W. R. 45.

1689. When trustees' estate does not come into being—Purpose dependent on contingency—Contingency not arising.]—Devise of particular lands in aid of testator's personal estate, to trustees, for the payment of debts, legacies, & funeral expenses, "All the rest, residue, & remainder of his real & personal estate to his wife, her heirs, exors. & administrators." The personal estate is sufficient. The lands devised in aid, pass to the wife under the residuary clause. So if the personal estate had proved deficient in part only, the wife would have been entitled to the remainder.—GOODTITLE d. HART v. KNOT (1774), 1 Cowp. 43; 98 E. R. 958.

1692. ———.]—Real estate was by deed expressed to be conveyed to trustees upon charitable trusts. The deed was not enrolled, & the grantor died within a year after the execution of the deed. On his death the trustees named in the deed entered into possession, & applied the rents & profits according to the trusts of the deed:—Held: the deed was not voidable only, but was absolutely void under Charitable Uses Act, 1735 (c. 36), s. 3, & was not valid as conveying the legal estate, & void only as creating charitable trusts.—CHURCHER v. MARTIN (1889), 42 Ch. D. 312; 58 L. J. Ch. 586; 61 L. T. 113; 37 W. R. 682.

1693. Determination of trustee's estate—Occurrence of event specified by settlement.]—A. devised to trustees, their heirs & assigns, all his freehold & copyhold estates, upon trust to pay the rents thereof to C. for life for her separate use; & after her death he directed them to stand seised of such estates in trust for such persons & purposes as she should by will appoint; & in default of appointment, he devised the estates to her in fee.

After A.'s death, the trustees were admitted tenants of the copyholds; & they all died during the lifetime of C.

By her will C. appointed certain persons her trustees, & directed them to sell the copyholds & assure them to the purchaser, his heirs & assigns. After C.'s death, her trustees sold the copyholds by auction, & declined to show the purchaser the devolution of the copyhold title from A.'s surviving trustee, on the ground that under A.'s will his trustees only took an estate for the life of C., & that there was an executory devise to her in default of appointment, which had taken effect:—Held: (1) under A.'s will his trustees took an estate of inheritance in quasi fee simple; (2) the legal estate in the copyholds remained vested in the surviving trustee of A.'s will, & the title thereto must be deduced accordingly.

When you find words of devise to trustees & their heirs, then those words are to have their full natural effect, as giving an estate of inheritance to the trustees, unless something is found on the face of the will which cuts that estate down to some determinate event (STIRLING, J.).—Re TOWNSEND'S CONTRACT, [1895] 1 Ch. 716; 61 L. 1699. —.]—Trust to sell & pay debts—Debts paid by sale of part of property—Estate in residue continues.]—Testator devised personally to trustees, to pay debts, & invest the surplus, & to receive the interest, & pay it to his wife during her life & widowhood, & afterwards to apply the interest, or a sufficient part, to the maintenance of his daughter I., until she should attain the age of twenty-five, & then to pay & assign the principal & unapplied interest to her ; but, in case she should happen to die before attaining that age, leaving lawful issue, then in trust to pay the same to such issue, share & share alike, if more than one, as soon as they should respectively attain twenty-one, & to pay the interest towards their maintenance in the meantime ; but, in case I. should happen to die under twenty-five & without leaving lawful issue, testator bequeathed the whole surplus of the personality to W. & D. share and share alike. By the same will, he devised to D. an annuity of £200 for life, charged on his land, to be paid by the above-mentioned trustees ; & he devised to the same trustees (one of whom was W.) & the survivors & survivor, & the heirs of the survivor, all his lands, charged with the annuity, & with so much of his debts, legacies, & funeral expenses, as the residue of the personality would not extend to, in trust to receive the rents, issues, etc., & apply them to the use of testator's wife, during her life & widowhood, & afterwards to apply the rents, etc., to the maintenance of I. until she should attain the age of twenty-five, & afterwards in trust for I. & her heirs ; but, in case it should happen that I. died without leaving lawful issue, then testator devised the lands to W. & D. in fee, as tenants in common. The will also empowered the trustees, in order to pay debts, etc., in case the residue of the personality should be insufficient, to sell any part of the lands, & to grant, alien, & convey the same lands, or any part thereof, in fee simple. Testator's wife died in his lifetime ; I. survived testator, & attained the age of twenty-one, but died under twenty-five, leaving no issue. The personality not being sufficient to pay the debts, the trustees sold part of the land :—Held : (1) the trustees took a legal fee simple in all the land, such estate being requisite for the purposes of the trusts ; (2) on testator's death, I. took a vested equitable estate tail & W. & D. took equitable remainders, & therefore, I. by suffering a recovery in which the trustees did not join, created no legal estate ; but the equitable remainders of W. & D. were barred.

(3) Another trust, imposed upon the trustees by the will, is to pay the rents & profits of the estate to the wife of the testator for life, or during her widowhood ; that would give them a freehold interest in the estate ; but as she died in the lifetime of the testator, it never took effect (LORD DENMAN).—DOE d. EPPE (1860), 3 L. T. 291; 9 W. R. 69.

1704. —[—]—(1) Testator devised lands to trustees in trust to receive the rents & profits for the use & benefit of such of his child or children as should be living at his death, & to apply such rents & profits or so much thereof as the trustees should deem right & proper in the maintenance & education of such child or children until majority or marriage, & from & after majority or marriage in trust to permit & suffer such child or children, as they should severally attain the age of twenty-one or be married, to take the rents & profits, if more than one, in equal shares for her, his, & their own use & benefit for her, his, or their lives; & if he left only one child, then to permit & suffer such one child to take the rents & profits for her or his sole use & benefit for her life; & he declared that from & after the death of such child or children, the trustees should stand seised of the lands in trust unto & to the use of the heirs of the body & bodies of such child or children, if more than one to be equally divided between them, such lands to be legally conveyed to such heirs of any child or children in equal shares as they should respectively attain the age of twenty-one or be married, & to their respective heirs & assigns for ever, with power in the meantime to apply the rents & profits in the maintenance & education of such heirs of his child or children; & if he should die leaving no child or children, or issue of any child or children, or if such child or children as he should leave & the issue of such child or children should die before he or they should attain the age of twenty-one or be married, then a gift over. Testator died leaving only one child surviving him; that child married & left a son who reached twenty-one:—Held: the legal estate vested in the trustees throughout.

1713. ——— Unless liability restricted by express stipulation.]—A. & B., trustees for C. & D., accepted, as part of a trust estate, stock in a Scottish banking co. By the deed of co-partnership there was to be no limit whatever to the shareholders' liability. They signed the deed of transfer "as trust disponees," & accepted the stock "as trust disponees aforesaid, subject to the articles & regulations of the co. in the same manner as if they had subscribed the contract of co-partnership." Their names & addresses were entered in the stock ledger, the register of shareholders, followed by the words "as trust disponees" for C. & D. The individual names of A. & B. did not appear in any list of shareholders issued to the public. The bank suspended payment with immense liability. The liquidators placed A. & B. on the first part of their list of contributories as liable to calls "in their own right." In a petition to rectify the list of contributories, by transferring the names of A. & B. from the first part to that part entitled "second part—contributories as being representatives of others" :—Held : the trustees, A. & B., were partners of the co., & as such were personally liable for payment of all calls made on them in respect of the stock.

A person who, in his capacity of trustee or exor., might choose to carry on a trade for the benefit of those beneficially interested in the estate, in the course of which trade debts to third persons arose, could not avoid liability on those debts by merely showing that they arose out of matters in which he acted in the capacity of trustee or exor. only, even though he should be able to show, in addition, that the creditors of the concern knew all along the capacity in which he acted (LORD PENZANCE).

I know of no reason why an exor., either under English or Scottish law, entering into a contract for payment of money with a person who is free to make the contract in any form he pleases, should not stipulate by apt words that he will make the payment, not personally, but out of the assets of testator (LORD CAIRNS, C.).—*Muir v. 1714. Liability of trustee as member of company.]—If trustees invest their trust money as partners in a joint stock co., they become personally liable, not only to the creditors of the concern, but also in questions of contribution inter socios. Should they desire to restrict their liability to the funds of the trust estate, they must stipulate expressly to that effect not only with the directors but with all the other shareholders.

By the law of England, if an exor. or trustee joins a partnership or co., he is personally liable for all the consequences, & if he acted within the scope of his authority he must seek indemnity from the trust estate.—LUMSDEN v. BUCHANAN (1865), 4 Macq. 950 ; 13 L. T. 174, H. L.

Then followed three witnessing parts, whereby he assigned or released to the other trustees of the bank the securities previously mentioned, " & all other moneys, securities, property, & effects " then vested in him, solely or jointly with the other trustees named, in trust for the bank. In the same year the co. went into liquidation for the purposes of reconstruction, & sold all its assets, including the leases, to a new co. of the same name; but there was no formal assignment of the leases, & the old co. was shortly afterwards dissolved. In 1901 these leases were sold by order of the ct., subject to conditions which limited the time for sending in requisitions & objections to title. After the prescribed period the purchaser objected that the vendors had shown no legal title to the leases. The lessor had received rent from the new co. & its successors in title from 1884 until the present time, & the vendors offered to procure the consent of the lessor to the assignment of the leases to the purchaser:—Held: the purchaser was precluded by the conditions from insisting upon his objection as to the outstanding legal estate, which had become vested in the Crown as bona vacantia, inasmuch as the objection related, not to the root of the title, but to the subsequent devolution thereof.

1750. Whether order made in chambers.]—An action for the administration of the estate of F. was commenced by writ, & an order for accounts was made in chambers under R. S. C., Ord. 15. Subsequently an order was made in chambers that plff. & deft. should transfer into ct. a sum of stock. By a further order made in chambers, after stating that deft. could not be found, the right to transfer the stock was vested in plff., & he was directed to transfer it into ct. The Bank of England being dissatisfied with this order by reason of its being made in chambers, it was arranged that a motion should be made to the ct. for an order directing the bank to act in accordance therewith :—Held : taking all the Acts of Parliament together, & considering the effect of R. S. C., Ord. 35, r. 1, & the course of practice ever since, there was so much doubt as to the jurisdiction as to render it unsafe to make such a vesting order in chambers, & the order directing the bank to act in accordance with it ought to be discharged.—*FRODSHAM v. 1755. Proof of appointment of new trustees—Deed executed abroad—Necessity for proof of handwriting of witness.]—An appointment of new trustees, not required to be, by deed or to be attested, was made by deed executed abroad by the donee of the power, who was resident abroad, & his execution of it was attested by a witness also resident abroad. A vesting order was then applied for, one of the old trustees being of unsound mind, & was supported by proof of the handwriting of the signature of the appointor to the deed :—Held : petitioners must prove the handwriting of the attesting witness, or, failing that, must show that they had endeavoured to find a witness in England who could speak to his handwriting, & failed in doing so, in which case the order might be drawn up on proof of the handwriting of the appointor.—Re RICE (1886), 32 Ch. 1811. ———.—]—An irrevocable power of attorney to sell land & give receipts for the purchase-money is not avoided by the donor of the power subsequently becoming an alien enemy.

Deft., a German by birth but for many years resident in England, although never naturalised, being about to proceed to Germany, executed a power of attorney on May 20, 1915, by which he appointed his solr. his attorney to sell his leasehold house & to execute such transfers & deeds as were necessary. The power of attorney was made irrevocable for twelve months. On May 26, deft. obtained a Govt. permit from the police to travel to Tilbury with the object of embarking for Germany by way of Flushing, & started on that day. On June 2, 1915, the leasehold premises were sold to the pltf. by public auction, & a deposit was paid & an agreement signed by him. There was no evidence as to the date when deft. reached Germany, but it was some time between May 26 & June 11, 1915. In an action brought by the pltf. for a declaration that the agreement for sale had been dissolved by the act of the deft. in becoming an alien enemy:—Held: the power of attorney having been given by deft. at a time when he was not an alien enemy, & being irrevocable for a year was not avoided by his subsequently becoming an alien enemy; the agreement entered into by the attorney in execution of the power did not involve any intercourse with the enemy, & was not therefore within the mischief of the common law or of the Trading with the Enemy Proclamation of Sept. 9, 1914, or of the Trading with the Enemy Acts, & was accordingly valid; the sale could therefore legally be carried out by the attorney & if necessary be completed by a vesting order under Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53).—*TINGLEY v. 1816. —.—.]—The persons having power to appoint new trustees of a marriage settlement, viz. the husband & wife, appointed a new trustee in the place of one who had absconded abroad, & jointly with the continuing trustee. The trustee who had absconded declined to join in the appointment, & to execute the necessary transfers. The property subject to the trusts of the settlement consisted of policies of insurance, & mtges. It became therefore, impracticable, having regard to Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 34 (3), to vest such property in the trustees without the assistance of the ct. A petition for a vesting order was accordingly presented, under the Trustee Acts 1850 (c. 60), & 1852 (c. 55), by the husband & wife & the continuing trustee:—Held: the order asked for might be made; but the petition must be amended by adding the name of the proposed new trustee as co-petitioner.—Re KEELEY'S TRUSTS (1885), 53 L. At the date of the petition he was out of the jurisdiction, & could not be found. The mtgor. & S. & T. presented a petition under Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60), for an order vesting D.'s estate in S. & T. The trustees refusing to convey the legal estate, B. presented a petition asking for a vesting order:—Held: the general rule that the heir of a person named in a will must be ascertained as soon as possible applied; B. was ascertained to be “the right heir male of A.” upon A.’s death in 1857; & he was therefore entitled to a vesting order.—Re GRAYSON (1879), 48 L. 1842. — Title in doubt.—A refusal by a trustee to convey is not wilful within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1852 (c. 55), s. 2, if the title of the person asking for the conveyance is disputed & the trustee entertains a bonâ fide doubt as to it. A copyhold was vested in a trustee under the will of M. The beneficial interest was vested as follows: A., B., & C. one-sixth each, D. one-fourth. As to the remaining fourth, it was questionable whether under the will of E. it had passed to A., B., C., & D., in equal shares, or to S., since deceased, of whose will A. & F. were the trustees. The copyhold was sold to X. & A., B., C., & D. as beneficial owners, & according to their respective shares & interests, & A. & F., as trustees, conveyed it by deed to X., the purchase-money being paid thus: to A., B., & C. one-sixth each, to D. one-fourth, & the remaining fourth to A. & F. C. shortly afterwards brought his action against the trustee under M.’s will, & A. & F., as trustees of S.’s will, to establish that no share had passed under S.’s will, & that the purchase-money ought to have been differently apportioned. The judge held that the fourth share had passed under the will of S., & that the purchase-money had been rightly apportioned, & he accordingly dismissed the action. After this X. applied to the trustee to surrender to him, which the trustee declined to do. X. then petitioned for a vesting order. Before the petition was heard, A. gave notice that she reserved all her right under the will of E.:—Held: the refusal of the trustee was not

C. survived his co-trustees A. & B., but afterwards died intestate as to the trust property. C. left a brother D., who also died intestate, leaving co-heiresses. A petition was presented for the appointment of new trustees of the lease & a vesting order. A question then arose as to the persons in whom the lease would be legally vested & the proper wording of the vesting order. It was sought to amend the petition by varying the proposed vesting order so as to vest the manor in the new trustees "for the same estate as C. would have had if he had been alive," & reference was made to the form in Seton, Vol. I., p. 539 :—Held : no form ought to be adopted in which the heir was not named, except in cases where it was in fact inconvenient or impossible to identify the heir ; & the ct., on a broad view, ought to regard the fact that the estate might have been dealt with, since the death of the last surviving trustee, in such a way that parties not before the ct. might be prejudiced by a vesting order in the form proposed, but under the circumstances of the case, & the ct. being satisfied that no parties could be prejudiced, the vesting order might be made in the form proposed.—*Re SARUM (BP.) Legal estate in infant trustee.]—A will, attested by two witnesses, contained a devise of freeholds in England to A., testator's son & heir, for life, with remainder to trustees, & a devise to them of estates in St. Kitts upon trust to sell & to invest the proceeds in estates in England, to be held upon the same trusts. A. was in possession of the English, & he received the rents of the St. Kitts estates during his life; & with his concurrence, the trustees made efforts, though ineffectual, to sell the latter. After the death of A., intestate, the trustees contracted to sell one of the St. Kitts estates, but the purchaser refused to complete, on the ground that the will was inoperative in the island, & that the estates descended upon the heir:—Held: A. had elected to take under the will, & his infant heir was bound by his acts, & was a trustee under Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60), for the person claiming under the will.—*DEWAR v. o. Failure of duty—Payment of claim without satisfactory proof—No averment of bad faith.]—In a petition for removal of a trustee petitioner averred that the trustee had paid out of the trust funds a claim on the trust estate, without satisfying himself that it was properly vouched. It was not averred that in doing so he had acted in bad faith. The ct. refused the prayer of the petition, on the ground that no malversation of office had been averred.

1982. ———.]—Deft. corp. was the trustee of a debenture trust deed. A large majority of debenture-holders brought an action to have the corp. removed from being trustee. The corp. had suggested that their salary should be increased, but had withdrawn the suggestion on the objection of the co. Petitions had been presented to wind up the corp., who had been in financial difficulties, but their difficulties had been surmounted & the petitions withdrawn, and they were now solvent & working efficiently, and it did not appear that the interest of the debenture-holders had suffered or been in danger:—Held: no sufficient cause had been shown for removing the corp. from being trustee.—*ASSETS REALISATION CO. v. 1985. Duty inconsistent with Interest—Trustee becoming lessee of trust property.]—Testator gave power to his trustees, to become lessees of the trust property. One of them availed himself of it, & the other trustee did not actively interfere in the management of the trust. The trustee lessee was removed by the Master of the Rolls, at the instance of the cestuis que trust, on the ground of the inconsistency of his duties of lessee & trustee, & upon appeal on that & other grounds.—*PASSINGHAM v. 1986. Want of sympathy with objects of trust.]—The only conduct complained of as an alleged breach of trust, is the fact of the trustees having more or less, assisted H. & H. in enforcing their mtge. . . . I do not find any other breach of trust . . . rendering summary interference necessary; & therefore though . . . it may . . . be very expedient to appoint new trustees in the place of persons whose conduct, though not, as I think, amounting to a breach of trust, clearly indicates a total want of sympathy with the feelings & interests of those of whose rights they are the guardians, yet I do not see any ground warranting me in interfering on motion (LORD CRANWORTH, V.-C.).—*A.-G. v. 1987. ———.]—My attention has been drawn to some observations which fell from me in the case of A.-G. v. Hardy, No. 1986, ante, as to what the ct. would do in the case of appointing new trustees & as to whether it would dismiss trustees who although they had not misconducted themselves had nevertheless shown themselves not to sympathise with the body for whom they were trustees. I extremely doubt whether I did not there go too far, what I said was merely an obitu dictum, & I wish not to let this case pass over without noticing it, so that if ever the question should arise, I may not have that dictum of mine quoted without having this quoted at the same time, that I wish to withdraw it (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).—*A.-G. v. 1994. — To get in purchase-money.]—Property in Germany, belonging to a limited co., was vested in certain persons as trustees for securing the payment of debentures. The trustees, professing to act under a power of sale in the trust instrument, the terms of which the ct. held were not complied with, caused certain proceedings to be instituted in a German ct., the result of which was that the trust property was sold at an undervalue by the officer of the ct., part of the property being purchased by a person who was manager of the property to the co. & was held by the ct. to be an agent & holding a fiduciary position. The trustees took no steps, notwithstanding a long period had elapsed, to get in any of the purchase-moneys:—Held: the breach of trust thus committed justified the removal of the trustees from office, & the purchase by the agent must be declared to be for the benefit of the trust for the debenture-holders.—*REID v. Where money is due to cestuis que trust who have settled it, the trustee is entitled to a release from the cestuis que trust, but to a receipt only from the persons to whom they devise it to be paid (ROMILLY, M.R.).—Re CATER'S TRUSTS (No. 2) (1858), 25 Beav. 366; 53 E. R. 676.

2023. — Conclusiveness of release.]—Degree of weight to be attached to deeds of release executed by cestuis que trust within a few days of their respectively coming of age, when such releases profess to proceed upon the examination of complicated accounts.

The bill stated that an account had been made out, showing that a certain sum was due to pltf., & it alleged that debts set up that account & the payment of the balance, as a final settlement. The bill charged the contrary, & that much more was due to pltf., as would appear if certain accounts were rendered. A deed of release had, in fact, been executed by pltf., at the time of the payment of the balance in question; but the bill made no mention of it. As this deed of release acknowledged the receipt of certain sums, it could not be wholly set aside; but the ct. was of opinion, under the circumstances of the case, that it did not deprive pltf. of his right to the accounts which he sought.—*WEDDERBURN v. Where a bill is filed to set aside a deed of release as having been improperly obtained, pltf. alleging that he, as a cestui que trust, had had no opportunity of examining the accounts of the estate of testator, & that the deed contained untrue recitals, & a plea, accompanied by an answer, is pleaded to the bill, setting forth the deed of release, denying that the deed had been improperly obtained, & averring that the accounts therein referred to were accurate, but not setting forth the accounts themselves:—Held: such plea was bad, for not setting forth the accounts. Semble: a deed of release cannot in any case be successfully pleaded without setting forth the accounts upon which it is founded.—*BROOKS v. 2033. Loss of right—Failure to render accounts.—Exors. & trustees, in pursuance of a power contained in a will, carried on the business of a licensed victualler after the death of testator, & incurred debts to trade creditors. An action was commenced for the administration of the estate of testator. The trade creditors took out a summons in the action asking for an order declaring that they were entitled to the trustees' right of indemnity against the estate so as to get payment out of the estate. The trustees had made default in rendering proper accounts, but not in payment of money. There was a sufficient fund in ct. to pay all the debts :—Held : in order to deprive the trustees of their indemnity, there must be a default in payment of money & not merely a default in the rendering of accounts.—Re KIDD, KIDD v. B. Who may Claim.

2034. Executor of surviving trustee.—Testator, by his will, gave certain leasehold premises to trustees to sell, & appointed them also exors. They all proved the will, and a bill was filed, by parties interested under the will, against them for an account, & the master made his report, approving of purchasers of the leaseholds in lots; pending the suit all three trustees died, & the last survivor made a will, & appointed an executor, who being applied to, as representative of the original testator, to concur in the necessary assignments of the leaseholds, refused to do so without an indemnity; it was referred to the master to inquire whether he was entitled to such indemnity, & the master being of opinion that he was not, plf's. presented their petition to confirm that report, & order the exor. to concur in the assignments. The ct. refused the application, & held that he was entitled to an indemnity, & referred it to the master to approve of the terms.—COCHRANE v. ROBINSON (1840), 11 Sim. 378; 10 L. J. Spicer v. Tod, No. 2048, post, is an authority in point & shows that where trustees have accepted the trust, the ct. will interfere & compel them to allow their names to be used as plffs. in an action on the deed upon an indemnity being given to them (TINDAL, C.J.).—ARCHARD v. C. Liability for.

2037. Liability of creator of trust.—(1) It is a general rule of equity that when a person accepts a trust at the request of another, & that other is a cestui que trust, the cestui que trust is liable personally to indemnify the trustee against all losses accruing in the due execution of the trust.

(2) Where the loss in respect of which such indemnity is sought occurs after the death of the cestui que trust the trustee is in the position of a creditor of the cestui que trust, & entitled to recover as a creditor from legatees to whom his estate has been paid.

J. & P. at the request of a settlor, accepted transfers of shares in an unlimited co. upon trust for a tenant for life & remaindermen. J. & P. were exors. of the will of the settlor, & distributed the residue of his estate. Subsequently in the lifetime of the tenant for life large calls were made on the shares, & the remaindermen under the settlement disclaimed:—Held: J. & P. as trustees were entitled to be indemnified against the liability of settlor's residuary estate, & to recover the capital which they had distributed among the residuary legatees.—JERVIS v. WOLFERTAN (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 18; 43 L. J. Ch. 809; 30 L. T. 452.

2040. —[The right of a trustee to be indemnified out of his trust fund for money expended by him in its preservation, is strictly limited to the trust fund.

Under the provisions of a private estate Act the trustee of a term of years in certain settled estates, of which W. had been tenant for life, was bound to apply the rents of the estates, first, in the payment from time to time of the interest upon certain incumbrances existing before the passing of the Act, & subject thereto in the payment from time to time of the interest on sums to be raised by W.

by mtges. created under the powers conferred by the Act, & of the premiums on policies of life assurance, constituting the collateral security for the repayment of those sums, the equity of redemption being reserved to W. The rents having become insufficient, the trustee, in order to save one of the policies from lapsing, paid a premium out of his own moneys. He did this without any request from the mtgee. or from the owner of the equity of redemption of the policy. The life insured having dropped, & the proceeds of the policy having been received by the mtgee.:—Held: the trustee was not entitled to any lien on the proceeds in respect of the premiums which he had paid, he not being a trustee of the policy.—Re WINCHILSEA'S (EARL) POLICY TRUSTS (1888), 39 Ch. ship & entered into joint covenants with the lessors.

On Nov. 15, 1886, all the original partners, including the two trustees, entered into an agreement to transfer the assets & liabilities to a limited co. The co. agreed to indemnify them against the partnership liabilities & to take all reasonable steps in their power to bring about a novation to the co. of all liabilities of the partnership & the several partners. On Nov. 27, 1886, one trustee died. On Nov. 4, 1887, the surviving trustee in pursuance of the agreement assigned the lease to the co. on the usual covenant for indemnity. About the same time he also conveyed other freehold & leasehold partnership property to the co. in pursuance of the agreement, without reserving any part to cover the indemnity. On Feb. 18, 1891, the surviving trustee died. In 1909, the co. having made default, the surviving trustee's exors. were compelled to pay £5,874 for arrears of rent, breach of covenants of the lease, & costs:—Held: neither the agreement, nor the assignment & conveyances in pursuance thereof, nor the change of the trust relationship thereby effected amounted to any novation of the surviving trustee's original right to indemnity & contribution against the partners, & his exors. were therefore entitled to enforce this right against the partners or their estates.—*MATTHEWS v. A. brought a bill against C. to be reimbursed, & C. brought a cross bill for a conveyance of the estate. Lord Chancellor Maclesfield held that C. should have no conveyance until A. was paid all the money expended by him about the premises. But this decree was reversed in the House of Lords, there being no contract between A. & C. relative to the money so expended; & the credit being given by A. to B. personally.—*DANSON v. 2057. ———.]—Costs incurred by a trustee in an action respecting the trust estate are not costs in the discretion of a judge who did not try the action, within R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 1, but are charges & expenses incurred in the execution of the trusts; & if such a judge acting in the administration of the estate makes an order as to such costs, his decision is subject to appeal.

Real estates were devised to trustees in trust for S. during her life, in such terms as gave her the legal estate, & after her death in trust to sell. S. desired to sell the estates under Settled Land Act, & applied to the surviving trustee for the title deeds. The trustee, acting under the advice of his solr., refused to give them up, & S. brought an action of detinue in the Q. B. Div., & recovered judgment against him with costs. The trustee took out an originating summons in the Ch. Div., & obtained an order for payment of the costs incurred in the action out of the trust estate:—Held: (1) the costs of the action of detinue were not costs in the discretion of the judge of the Ch. Div. within R. S. C., Ord. 6, r. 1, & his decision was subject to appeal; (2) the trustee, not having shown reasonable cause for defending the action, was not entitled to retain out of the trust estate the costs of the action beyond the amount which he would have incurred by applying for leave to defend it.

A trustee is entitled as of right to full indemnity out of his trust estate against all his costs, charges, & expenses properly incurred; such an indemnity is the price paid by cestuis que trust for the gratuitous & onerous services of trustees; & in all cases of doubt, costs incurred by a trustee ought to be borne by the trust estate & not by him personally. The words "properly incurred" in the ordinary form of order are equivalent to "not improperly incurred" (LINDLEY, L.J.).

If a trustee brings or defends an action unsuccessfully & without leave, it is for him to show that the costs so incurred were properly incurred. The fact that the trustee acted on counsel's opinion is in all cases a circumstance which ought to weigh with the ct. in favour of the trustee; but counsel's opinion is no indemnity to him even on a question of costs (LINDLEY, L.J.).

While I agree that trustees ought not to be visited with personal loss on account of mere errors in judgment which fall short of negligence or unreasonableness, it is on the other hand essential to recollect that mere bona fides is not the test, & that it is no answer in the mouth of a trustee who has embarked in idle litigation to say that he honestly believed what his solr. told him, if his solr. has been wrong-headed & perverse (BOWEN, L.J.).—*Re BEDDOE, DOWNES v. 2060. Right to indemnity.—A trustee has a right to be indemnified from any liability he incurred on behalf of his cestui que trust; generally he had funds in his hands to do so, & the ct. never deprived him of that security without making him every allowance for expenses properly incurred; his conduct is always liable to investigation at the instance of his cestui que trust (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—*PARSONS v. i. Costs in Connection with Appointment.

2067. Costs of former trustees—Paid to personal representatives of survivor.]—In a partition action an order was made directing the taxation of the costs of the parties, including in the costs of defendants, the trustees, "one moiety of any costs, charges, & expenses properly incurred by them as trustees of the will of testator beyond their costs" of the action. The taxing master disallowed the costs of former trustees, who were dead, paid to the exor. of the survivor in consideration of his transferring the trust property, also costs of examining into the state of the trust property, & the validity of the power, before the appointment, also costs of the donee of the power in appointing. On summons to review taxation:—Held: (1) the trustees were bound to pay the costs of the old trustees properly incurred; (2) it was not only the right, but the duty, of the new trustees to see what the estate consisted of & that the power was properly exercised; also they were entitled to the costs of the donee of the power which they had paid. The trustees were therefore on principle entitled to the costs disallowed, subject to the discretion of the taxing master as to items; but having failed on another objection, no costs of the summons were allowed.—*HARVEY v. The premises were insured, but there was a dispute as to whether the policy had lapsed by non-payment of premiums. Cost of rebuilding house—Destruction by fire—Reimbursement limited to funds in court.]—Testator devised his mansion house & other real estate to trustees for the term of one thousand years, upon certain trusts, & subject thereto, he devised same upon legal limitations, under which plff. was tenant for life. Shortly after testator's death the mansion house was burnt down. The sole acting trustee had expended, in addition to insurance moneys, a sum of £2,000 in rebuilding the mansion house, which amount he had borrowed on his own personal security & on a charge of the estate. It was admitted that this expenditure was very beneficial to the estate & that the value thereof was increased. There were in ct. sums of Consols, arising from the sale of part of the estate, & such funds were liable to be reinvested in land:—Held: it appearing that the estate had been benefited by the outlay of the trustee to the full amount of the funds in ct., & that the outlay had been bonâ fide made under the impression that it would be repaid out of the estate, the ct. would, although considering the conduct of the trustee irregular, order that he should be recouped his outlay to the extent of the funds in ct., but no further.—*JESSE v. In 1837 a sum of money was paid into ct. as compensation money for the slaves on the estates. Shortly after this B. was appointed receiver & consignee. Advances were made beyond the amount by C., who received the dower & the sums received fell short of the sums advanced:—Held: this receipt of dower could not be considered as indefinite payments, but only for the purpose of paying off the charge, & afterwards for the separate use of A.; & the dower so received ought to have been applied in satisfaction of the charge, & the surplus, after such satisfaction, could only be applied as A. directed, & was subject to no lien except such as might be acquired by lending money to A., independently of the deed of conveyance.

This was accordingly done:—Held: during coverture she could dispose of her life interest, held for her separate use, but not of her reversionary interest, & the trustee having, at her request, advanced the fund to her husband, whereby it was lost, was held liable to replace it, but her life interest was made answerable for the trustee's indemnity.—*HANCHETT v. iv. Calls on Shares.

2087. Right to indemnify.]—In 1841 pltf. advanced to deft. a sum of money upon the security of his promissory note, & an undertaking, when required, to transfer certain shares in a trading co. as a further security, deft. agreeing to indemnify pltf. against all calls or other payments which thereafter might be required in respect of the shares. In 1842, in pursuance of the undertaking, the shares were regularly transferred into pltf.'s name, & such transfer was duly registered in the transfer register of the co. In 1843 the mtge. debt was paid off, & pltf., at the requisition of deft., applied to the directors of the co. to transfer the shares into the name of deft., & took all the necessary steps on his part to obtain such transfer. Dft. concurred in the application, & signed the requisite notices to the co. The directors were bound, under the terms of their settlement deed, either to permit a transfer or to purchase the shares. Some delay in the transfer was occasioned by the act of the directors; & during the pendency of the negotiation, a creditor of the co., which in the meantime had become insolvent, recovered judgment to a large amount against the public officer of the co., & proceeded to make the judgment available against pltf. as a registered shareholder. Upon bill by pltf. against deft. for an indemnity, etc.:—Held: deft. after payment of the mtge. debt, & the requisition to pltf. to procure a re-transfer, was equitable owner of the shares, & pltf. was a trustee for deft. of such shares, & as such entitled to an indemnity from his cestui que trust against the claims made in respect of the trust property.—PHENE v. GILLAN (1845), 5 Hare, 1; 15 L. J. Ch. 65; 5 L. T. O. S. 389; 9 Jur. 1086; 67 E. R. 803.

2089. — Trustee retaining shares.—With consent of cestui que trust.]—A., by trust disposition, & settlement, directed her trustees, after paying debts & certain legacies, to pay the interest of £2,000 to her daughter B. for life, & after B.'s death to pay the capital sum to her child or children. There were similar trusts as to another sum of £2,000 in favour of her daughter C., & C.'s child or children. Power was given to the trustees to "continue to hold" all shares or stocks in cos. which might belong to A. at the time of her death, "should they consider it advisable or expedient to do so," without any personal responsibility for loss thereby sustained. The property included £850 stock in an unlimited Scottish bank. The trustees sold £650, part of the bank stock, to satisfy claims on the estate, & at the request of B., though against their own opinion, they appropriated the remaining £200 in part satisfaction of the £2,000 to which she was entitled. The bank was afterwards wound up, & the trustees became personally liable to the payment of calls on the £200 stock:—Held: (1) the retention by the trustees, with the consent of the cestui que trust, though contrary to their own opinion, of the £200, part of the bank stock, was not a breach of trust; but they were not entitled to an indemnity against the calls out of the corpus of the estate.

(2) It was argued that the maker of a trust is personally bound to indemnify the trustees for all costs & liabilities properly incurred in the execution of the trust, but I do not think this is the law. No doubt any one who requests another to incur a liability which would otherwise have fallen on himself is, in general, bound, at law as well as in equity, to indemnify him; this principle applies to many cases, & where a trust is for the benefit

v. Damages Recovered against Trustee.

2091. Damages for personal injury—Negligence of servant.]—A trustee in the due execution of his trust directed the bailiff employed on the settled estate to have certain trees felled. The bailiff ordered the woodcutters usually employed on the estate to fell the trees. In doing so they allowed a bough to fall on a passer by, who brought an action against the trustee, & recovered heavy damages:—Held: the trustee was entitled to indemnity out of the true estate.

The trustee in this case appears to have meant well, to have acted with due diligence, & to have employed a proper agent to do an act the directing which to be done was within the due discharge of his duty. The agent makes a mistake, the consequences of which subject the trustee to legal liability to a third party. I am of opinion that this liability ought, as between the trustee & the estate, to be borne by the estate (KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.).—BENNETT v. WYNDHAM (1862), 4 De G. F. & J. 259; 45 E. R. 1183.

The adjoining owner then claimed to be entitled to be paid direct out of testator's estate the amount so recovered:—Held: as the injury had been occasioned by the trustee in the reasonable management and working of his testator's estate, he was entitled to be indemnified out of the assets, & consequently, the adjoining owner was entitled to stand in the place of the trustee & to claim the benefit of this right to indemnity so as to obtain payment of the damages & costs so recovered direct out of testator's estate.—Re RAYBOULD, RAYBOULD v. There was a considerable settlement. The son in the twenty-eighth year of his age being discharged under a deed of composition, the legacy was decreed to him; the trustees & his children not opposing it; but the ct. observed, that if he should not be discharged, as in case it should end in a bkrcpy., the trustees would not be indemnified.—DE MIERRE v. The daughter occupied the house till her death: afterwards the trustee lived in it. The daughter held to have had an equitable life estate in the house, etc., as excepted from the general devise to the trustee, who therefore upon account was not allowed for rates & taxes paid, & expense of the garden defrayed by him during her life: but allowed for them afterwards, because under this will necessary for him to occupy either himself or by a servant.—*FOUNTAIN v. 2099. Expenses occasioned by wrongful devise of trust estate.—Liability of estate of deceased trustee.]—Trustee for sale devising the estate upon the same trust not good. Testator devised all his real & personal estate to three trustees, upon trust that they or the survivors or survivor of them, or the heirs of such survivor, should, as soon as conveniently might be after his decease, but at their discretion, sell all the real estates for such price or prices as they should consider the value, etc., & he authorised the trustees & their heirs to enter into contracts, & conveyances, etc., & he declared that the receipt or receipts of the trustees or of their heirs, exors., or administrators or survivor of them, should be good discharges to the purchasers, etc.; & he directed his trustees, their heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, to stand possessed of the proceeds of the sale of the real estate & the conversion of his personal estate, which he thereby directed upon certain trusts.

Two of the trustees declined the trust, & the other, who was also heir-at-law of the testator, accepted the trust, but died before selling any part of the estate, having made his will, whereby he devised & bequeathed all estates vested in him as a trustee unto A. & S., their heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, upon the trusts affecting the same respectively, & appointed them exors. of his will. A. & S. entered into a contract to sell part of the trust estate, & the question now argued was, whether they as devisee & exors. of the original trustee could make a title to the estate in question:—Held: they could not, & the trustee was wrong in devising the estate.

2100. Costs of conveyance.]—A conveyance of freehold estates, & a covenant to surrender copyhold estates, were made to a person who was surety in some bonds for the party conveying, upon trusts for sale, & the satisfaction of mtges. affecting the estates & the bond debts. No notice of the conveyance was given to the creditors, the trustee was admitted to some of the copyholds, but proceeded no further in the execution of the trusts of the deed. Three years afterwards, the person conveying died, & it was held, that the conveyance was void, but that the trustee could not be called upon to part with the estate, if any, conveyed to him, or give up the deeds, without being discharged from the bonds of which he was surety, & having the costs expended by him as trustee repaid to him.—*WILDING v. By an order of the ct., £100 a year out of the income of the estate, was directed to be paid to one of those children, a lady, until the further order of the ct. By a marriage settlement the lady assigned to the trustees the whole of her share under the will of testator, together with the accumulations, upon trust for herself for life, with remainder to her children. The £100 a year was continued to be paid after marriage to her trustees, & by them allowed to be received and expended by the mother. The mother was still living; & the estate had not yet become divisible under the will. Upon bill by the children:—Held: notwithstanding the order of the ct. the £100 a year payable thereunder formed part of the capital funds comprised in the settlement, & ought to have been invested by the trustees, & they were ordered to make good the amount, subject to the right, as against the mother, to be recouped the amount out of her life interest in the fund.—*BARRATT v. A portion of this field was taken by a railway co., who subsequently paid the money into ct. The trustees built houses on the remainder of the land, & now petitioned for payment of the purchase-money out of ct., to defray the expenses of the erections. On an affidavit being produced showing that the cestuis que trust agreed, previous to the erection of the buildings, to concur in the petition, & that the investment of the purchase-money in that manner was greatly for the benefit of the estate, the order for payment was made.—Re PARTING-

2109. Expenses of carrying on trade.—On the marriage of S. a lunatic asylum was assigned to trustees, on trust, at the request of S. & his wife, during their joint lives, to sell the asylum & the goodwill thereof, & stand possessed of the proceeds of sale upon certain trusts declared by the settlement; but the trustees might allow S. to carry on the business for his own benefit until the sale. S. carried on the business for some time, & then became bkpt. The surviving trustee entered into possession & carried on the business of the asylum until it was sold at a large price. During this period A. supplied the trustee with goods for the purposes of the asylum. He afterwards recovered judgment against the trustee for the price of the goods, & then brought an action claiming payment of the judgment debt out of the proceeds of sale:—Held: as by the settlement there was no dedication of the trust premises for any trade purpose, & no specific part of the trust estate was directed to be employed in the carrying on of the trade, the trustee had no right to charge the trust estates with moneys expended by him in carrying on the trade, & A. could not be in a better position than the trustee.

the trustee of a settled estate, with the consent of the patron of the living & the Ecclesiastical Comrs., & the tenant for life having entered, with the approval of the trustee, into possession & paid the interest on the unpaid purchase-money to the vicar, & this payment having been continued to be made by subsequent life tenants to the vicar for the time being, the purchase-money never having been paid, plffs. brought this action to obtain specific performance of the contract, or, in the alternative the enforcement of a vendor's lien.

The trustee had power to invest the trust funds in the purchase of land, but, when the contract was entered into, he had no money belonging to the estate under his control for the purpose of being invested, as the personal estate had been advanced on the security of some policies of insurance on the life of the third tenant for life of the settled estates, whose death did not occur until some time afterwards:—Held: as at the date of the contract the trustee had no trust funds under his control available for the payment of the purchase-money, there never was any contract which was valid against the settled estates, the trustee therefore had no right to an indemnity out of the settled estates, & plffs. had no right by subrogation; & plffs. were only entitled to a lien upon the land sold for the unpaid purchase-money.—*ECCELESIASTICAL COMRS. v. E. Priority of Right.

2115. Priority over general creditors.]—After testator's death, the exor. of the trustee, who had become liable to the trust estate by reason of the default of his co-trustee, advanced out of his own moneys considerable sums for the benefit of the estate, & he now claims to be allowed these sums of which the parties interested under the will have had the benefit. What is contended is, that he may be paid only pari passu with other creditors; but this would be quite contrary to the practice of the ct. in dealing with trustees. I think, before any of the creditors are paid, the trustee must be recouped the amount he has advanced to the estate, & the residue will then become available for the general creditors (per CUR.).—*SPACKMAN v. The trustees had no authority to pledge the deeds. They were afterwards compelled to pay the amount. Upon a bill filed by them that they might be reimbursed by a sale:—Held: they had a lien on the deeds, but were not entitled to a sale of the property to reimburse their outlay.

The right of the trustee to reimbursements rests on an implied contract. But if I held such an implied contract to exist . . . I should destroy the whole trust (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*DARKE v. 2127. In respect of right of indemnity.—Against liabilities under lease.—Whether right passes to trustee in bankruptcy.—Where a trustee who holds property to secure his own right of indemnity in priority to all claims of his cestui que trust becomes bkpt., & the retention of such property, e.g., leaseholds with onerous covenants, is necessary to give full effect to such right, the legal estate in the property & right to possession vest in the trustee in bkpcy. to the extent to which they were vested in the bkpt.

In 1894, R. was the assignee of leaseholds with onerous covenants as trustee for his wife; in 1895, R. was adjudicated bkpt.; in 1896 the trustee in bkpcy. assigned the leaseholds back again to R. as trustee for his wife, & R. obtained his discharge. In 1908 the lessors, who had had no notice of the fact that R. was a trustee, or of his bkpcy., brought an action against R. for arrears of rent, & for damages for breach of covenant to repair. R. pleaded the bkpcy. proceedings as a defence:—Held: the leaseholds vested in the trustee in bkpcy., who held them subject to satisfying his own lien & right of indemnity, for R.'s wife; the leaseholds passed back again to R. by the assignment of 1896; & the bkpcy. was no defence to the action, & R. was liable as assignee.

The trustee would have been bound to admit a proof by plffs. If so, it seems to me impossible to doubt that the trustee, as representing the bkpt.'s estate, had a charge or lien upon the leasehold property precisely similar to that which deft. before his bkpcy. would have had in respect of liabilities presently enforceable (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—*ST. Pltf. is clearly entitled to recover, unless there be some answer to the action. The answer proposed on the part of deft. was that the money had been expended by deft. for the use of the lunatic, & therefore he was entitled in an action for money had & received, to set it off against the claim that the lunatic may have upon him. But, considering the evidence given in the first case, especially the evidence of the mother herself, there can be very little doubt that she took the lunatic to the asylum; that she directed deft. to go down & bring the lunatic up; that she interfered continually; that she managed; that she gave directions; that she prevented communication with the rest of the family. The tendency of all the evidence is to show that the contract with the keeper of the asylum was with the mother. Under these circumstances the case on the part of pltf. is perfectly clear, & in reality no answer is given in point of fact (POLLOCK, C.B.).—NOTTIDGE v. RIPLEY (1850), 14 L. T. O. S. 445.

2134. Against agent of trustee.]—N. & C. were exors. of a will & trustees of the residuary real & personal estate of testator who died in 1859. N. & F. were tenants for life of the residuary estate in equal shares. In Jan. 1873, C. was residing abroad, & N., being about also to go abroad, gave to P., the solr. of the exors. & trustees, an authority on behalf of both trustees to receive the rents of the real estate & pay the outgoing. Under this authority P. received the rents, & at his death a considerable sum was due from him in respect thereof. P.'s estate proved insolvent, & the usual creditor's decree was made for administration. Subsequently to the decree F. assigned to N. all F.'s interest in the sum due from P. N. was indebted to A. & B. as trustees for P. in a sum the repayment of which was secured by a mtge. of real estate belonging to N., & this sum was paid into ct. in the suit to a separate account, under an order made without prejudice to any question as to set-off. N. afterwards presented a petition claiming to be entitled to set off the debt due from P. against the mtge. debt, & seeking to have the amount of the debt due from P. paid out of the fund standing to the separate account:—Held: (1) as regards F.'s interest there could be no set-off, inasmuch as it was not assigned to N. until after the decree; (2) the debt due from P. being either due to both trustees & exors., or if due to N. alone, due to him in his character of trustee & exor., could not be set off against a debt due from him individually.—*MIDDLETON v. 2135. Against amount due out of trust estate—

On bankruptcy of one trustee.]—In an administration action, where a sum is found to be due from the estate to two trustees jointly, one of whom is insolvent & a debtor to the estate, the sum due to the two will not be set off against the sum due from the one; but the persons beneficially interested in the estate are entitled as a matter of right, to an inquiry whether any & what part of the sum due to the two is, as between the two, due to the insolvent trustee, & to have the sum so found to be due set off against the sum due from him.

In such a case, the insolvent trustee is not, since Bankruptcy Act, 1889 (c. 71), entitled to receive his costs of the action out of the estate until he has made good the debt which he owes.

If in such a case the trustees' costs consist in part of separate costs of the solvent trustee, in part of separate costs of the insolvent trustee, & in part of costs common to the two, the solvent trustee is not entitled to the whole of such costs, but only to his own separate costs, & to so much of the common costs as the taxing master apportions to him.—*McEWAN v. SUB-SECT. 4.—REMUNERATION.

A. In General.

See Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 42.

2136. Whether entitled to remuneration.—The rule that a trustee shall not be allowed to make a profit of his trusteeship is a rule of common sense, based upon principles of human nature, & applies to every trustee.—Broughton v. Broughton (1855), 5 De G. M. & G. 160; 25 L. J. Ch. 250; 1 Jur. N. S. 965; 43 E. R. 831; sub. nom. Broughton v. White, Broughton v. Broughton, 26 L. T. O. S. 54; 3 W. R. 602.

Annotations.—Apld. Nicholson v. Tutin (1857), 3 Jur. N. S. 235; Crosskill v. Bower, Bower v. Turner (1863), 32 Beav. 86. Consd. Re Doody, Fisher v. Doody, Hibbert v. Lloyd, [1893] 1 Ch. 129. Reid, Field v. Hopkins (1890), 44 Ch. D. 524. Mentd. Pollard v. Doyle (1860), 3 L. T. 432; Re Barber, Burgess v. Vinicombe (1886), 34 Ch. D. 77; Re Corrells, Lawton v. Elwes (1887), 34 Ch. D. 675; Re Andrew, Mellor v. Smith (1895), 39 Sol Jo. 363; Bath v. Standard Land Co., [1911] 1 Ch. 618.

2137.—There is no relation between the parties except the fiduciary relation of trustee & cestui que trust, which of itself precludes the possibility of P. making a profit by any part of the transactions in which, since the period of the sale, he has been engaged. . . .

You cannot give salary to a trustee who is made liable for his irregularity. I do not like to use a harsher expression, for I do not think that there is a suspicion of any improper dealing on the part of anybody in any one of these transactions. But salary he cannot have (BACON, V.-C.).—Re Norrington, Brindley v. Partridge (1879), as reported in 13 Ch. D. 654.

Annotations.—Mentd. Re Crowther, Midgley v. Crowther (1895), 64 L. J. Ch. 537; Re Irwin, Barton v. Irwin (1895), 39 Sol Jo. 233.

2138.—Express provision for payment.]—A trustee has no right to exact or charge any remuneration or bonus in respect of great advantages accrued to the cestuis que trust from services incident to the performance of the duties imposed by the deed of trust. A settled account by a cestui que trust, allowing a bonus to the trustee, set aside.

A trustee who accepts the office without any stipulation on the subject . . . has no right to say, at any moment when he chooses to do so, that he will exact a certain sum for his past services (STUART, V.-C.).—Barrett v. Hartley (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 789; 14 L. T. 471; 12 Jur. N. S. 426; 14 W. R. 684.

2139.—Agreement with cestui que trust.]—There may be cases where the ct. will establish an agreement, made with a trustee for an extraordinary allowance, beyond the terms of the trust.

Whether upon general grounds a trustee may make an agreement with a cestui que trust for an extraordinary allowance, over & above what he is allowed by the terms of the trust, I think there may be cases where this ct. would establish such agreements, but at the same time would be extremely cautious & wary in doing it.

In general this ct. looks upon trusts as honorary, & a burden upon the honour & conscience of the person entrusted, & not undertaken upon mercenary views; & there is a strong reason too against allowing anything beyond the terms of the trust, because it gives an undue advantage to a trustee, to distress a cestui que trust, & therefore this ct. have always held a strict hand upon trustees in this particular. If a trustee comes in a fair & open manner, & tells the cestui que trust that he will not act in such a troublesome & burdensome office, unless the cestui que trust will give him a further compensation, over & above the terms of the trust, & it is contracted for between them, I will not say this ct. will set it aside, though there is no instance where they have confirmed such a bargain (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—*AYLIFFE v. 2142. — Trustee of share of firm—Employed by firm as salaried employee.]—L. was a trustee of his father's will. His father had been one of the managing directors of a partnership firm, & by the will L. was nominated to be a partner in the firm in the place of his father, but he was to hold the share in the partnership to which he thus succeeded upon the trusts of the will. L. had, prior to his father's death, acted as salesman of the firm at a salary. He continued so to act after his father's death, & after his admission as a partner, under an agreement with the other members of the firm. The agreement to employ L. was made bond fide, & was for the interest of the firm, & thus of the trust estate:—Held: L. received his salary as salesman by virtue of his agreement with the firm, & not by reason of the trusts of the will, & consequently, he was entitled to retain the salary in addition to certain remuneration which he obtained under the will for acting as managing partner, & he need not account for the salary to the trust estate.—*Re LEWIS, LEWIS v. The trustees, having notice of the doubt as to the validity of the recovery, could not safely proceed in the execution of the trusts of the will as to that particular estate until that doubt was removed; & it is the duty of the ct., by its decree, to adopt such course for the protection of the trustees as shall have the effect of removing the doubt before it proceeds to deal with the estate as a part of the subject of the trust (LEACH, M.R.).—*TALBOT v. Shortly before his son, the only child of the marriage, attained twenty-one A. requested the trustees to prepare for a transfer of the fund to himself & his son, such transfer as to the greater part of the fund to be into A.'s own name. Not long before this A. had complained to one of the trustees of his son's extravagance, & had said to the solrs. of the trustees that a son ought to be dependent on his father. On the son's coming of age, A. made an appointment of the fund to him, & they then applied to the trustees to transfer it into their joint names. The son was living with the father's solr.:—Held: the trustees had been rightly allowed their costs of a suit to obtain such transfer; for that they were justified in declining to make it without the sanction of the ct., though the son was represented by a separate solr., & declarations were made that there was no bargain between him & the father for the father's benefit.—*KING v. At the date of the purchase the interest of the beneficiaries had vested absolutely, but the trust estate had not been realised, & its ultimate value was uncertain; but it was capable of being realised in the ordinary course of administration. Before purchasing his brother's share the trustee had in his possession a valuation of the trust estate made for the purpose of a loan on his own share. If the valuation turned out to be any where near correct, the trustee would make a profit of some hundred pounds on the purchase. The trustee never informed his brother of the valuation. On the brother being made bkpt., the trustee in bkpcy. brought this action for reduction of the sale:—Held: the non-disclosure of the valuation rendered the sale null & void.—DOUGAN v. MACPHERSON, [1902] A. C. 197; 71 L. J. P. C. 62; 86 L. T. 361; 50 W. R. 689, H. L.

E. Avoidance of Purchase.

2230. General rule - Sale set aside.—DYSON v. LUM, No. 2191, ante.

2231. Parties to action.—(1) The tenant for life of an estate, who was also devisee in trust in remainder for the children of testator, with a power of appointment by will amongst them, purchased & obtained from the objects of the power, a release of their reversion at an undervalue, & devised the estate to her son in fee charged with debts & legacies. The son took possession of the estate, & paid off the legacies & charges. Fourteen years & a half after the death of the tenant for life, & seventeen years after the purchase of the reversion, the assignee of one of the vendors, an object of the power, who had become insolvent, filed his bill to set aside the sale:—Held: the lapse of time was a bar to the relief; & the mere circumstance of the poverty of the cestui que trust was not sufficient to excuse the delay.

(2) Bill by one of several cestuis que trust against the devisee of the trustee to set aside the sale of an estate, which was made to the trustee by all the cestui que trust for one sum, & conveyed by one instrument:—Held: all the cestuis que trust were necessary parties to the suit.—ROBERTS v. 2238. ———.]—On the death of an intestate, leaving four sons & one daughter, the two eldest sons took out administration to his estate.

By deed of family arrangement the five children, of whom the youngest son was an infant, mortgaged to trustees their respective interests in their father's estate for £1,084, that being the amount of the two-fifth shares therein of the daughter & the infant son, as shown by an account set out in a schedule, & based on a valuation made a year previously, in which the figures had been altered to correspond with the increase or decrease in the various items since the valuation, & which showed a balance giving £542 to each child. Subject to the mtge., in respect of which specified sums were to be paid by the three eldest brothers, the trustees were to hold the property in trust for the three eldest brothers. The sums to be paid by the latter were to form a sinking fund for the reduction of the principal of the shares.

By her subsequent marriage settlement the daughter recited that she was entitled to the £542 under the former deed, & settled that on trust for herself for life, then for her husband for life, then for children as she should appoint by deed or will; in default of appointment, for sons at twenty-one, & daughters at twenty-one or marriage; if no children, & she survived her husband, for herself absolutely; or if she were not the survivor, then as she should appoint by will, or, in default of such appointment, for her next of kin.

In an action commenced, more than nine years after the deed of arrangement, by the daughter, her husband & infant children, against her brothers & the trustees of the deed of settlement, to have chapels contained powers of raising money, by mtg., for the purposes of the trusts.—Held: any of the trustees of the chapels might be mtgees. under this power, & if they were such mtgees., they might exercise all the rights of mtgees., although in opposition to the trusts.—*A.-G. v. A., by his will appointed a certain portion for plff., to be vested in her at the age of twenty-one years, or on marriage, & directed that a certain part of the interest & dividends thereof should be applied towards her maintenance & education, but did not make any appointment, or give any directions relative to the sum of money raisable for that purpose under the said term:—Held: upon the construction of the settlements, plff. was entitled to have her share of the money provided by the term, raised for her benefit, until the period when her portion should become payable; it was not improbable that it should be the intention of parents to provide a larger fund for the education of children than the mere income of their future portions, the portions of younger children of great families being seldom large, although they have universally the same expensive education as the eldest child.—*POULETT v. The husband married again & at the date of the decree there were four children of the first marriage, two daughters & one son who had attained twenty-one, one son under age & a child of a deceased daughter:—Held: the trust for maintenance & education did not cease upon the children attaining twenty-one.—*FREWEN v. Settlement with power to appoint fund to children—Provisions as to maintenance during minority—Appointment exercised with direction to pay income to parent for maintenance of children—Inquiry directed by court as to proper amount to be paid as maintenance.]—By a settlement made on the marriage of the father & mother of plffs., certain personal property was settled upon trust for the wife for life, & after her death for her children for such interests & in such manner as she should appoint, & in default upon trust for all the children equally. The settlement contained a power to the trustees to apply the income of the presumptive shares of the children in their maintenance during their minorities, notwithstanding their father might be of ability to maintain them. The wife died, having executed an appointment whereby she appointed the property among the children equally, & directed the income to be paid to her husband during his life for the maintenance of the children:—Held: the direction to pay the income to the husband was not justified by the power; & the ct. directed inquiries as to the proper amount of maintenance to be allowed under the power in the original settlement.—*WHITE v. 2261. Settlement on wife for life—No power of anticipation—Effect of provision for maintenance.]—

By an antenuptial settlement a fund was declared to be held by the trustees upon trust for the intended wife for life, for her separate use, without power of anticipation, & after her death in trust for the intended husband for life, & after the decease of the survivor, in trust for the children of the marriage as the intended husband & wife should jointly appoint, & subject thereto & to a separate power of appointment in the survivor, in trust for the children equally, to be vested in sons at twenty-one & in daughters at twenty-one or marriage. There was also a power for the trustees, at the request of the husband & wife, during their joint lives, to advance, for the benefit of any child whose portion should not be vested, any part of his or her presumptive portion, & to apply for or towards the maintenance or education of any such child or children all or any part of the income of such his or her presumptive portions. The only children of the marriage were two sons & a daughter. The husband & wife appointed the trust fund to the three children equally, to be vested in sons at twenty-one & in the daughter at twenty-one or marriage, with trusts for accruer in the event of any child dying before attaining a vested interest. By the same deed the husband & wife requested the trustees to pay for five years after the date of the deed certain sums for the maintenance of the three children, & after the expiration of that period, to pay £150 towards the maintenance & education of the children during the residue of the life of the wife:—Held: the maintenance clause did not enable the wife to affect her life interest by such a prospective provision, at all events as regarded any period beyond the minority of the sons, or the minority or marriage of the daughter.—HORLOCK v. HORLOCK (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 644; 42 E. R. 1023, L. J. J.

2262. Discretionary power to apply money towards maintenance of child—Bill filed for administration of estate—Power not lost.]—Testator empowered trustees at their discretion to pay during the life of his wife a moiety of the income of the trust funds for or towards the maintenance or education of his daughter or otherwise for her benefit:—Held: the trustees had not deprived themselves of this discretionary power by filing a bill to administer their testator's estate.—SILLBOURNE v. NEWPORT (1855), 1 K. & J. 602; 1 Jur. N. S. 608; 3 W. R. 653; 69 E. R. 600.

2263. Trust for maintenance of lunatic—Whether lunatic can be maintained out of own property—

While income of trust in hands of trustees—Liability of trustees to personal representatives of lunatic.]—Testator, by his will, gave all his real & personal estate to trustees, upon trust, during the life of J., a person non compos, but not found so by inquisition, to apply the whole or any part of the income of the real & personal estate for his "maintenance, attendance, & comfort." Testator then directed a sale of his real estate after the decease of J. the sales moneys to be deemed part of his personal estate, & the rents & profits of his real estate until a sale to be deemed part of the income of his personal estate, & then made a disposition of all his personal estate to certain residuary legatees. During the life of J. the trustees maintained him wholly out of the income of the real & personal estate of testator, without trenching on his private property, & accumulated the savings to a considerable sum. After the decease of J. the trustees sold the real estate, & then, doubts arising as to the rights of parties to the savings, & also to the sales moneys, the produce of the real estate, paid the whole into ct. —Held: (1) the expression "comfort" in the trust for J. was so wide as to justify the application by the trustees of all the income devoted to that purpose, however large; (2) the whole not having been so applied, the gift was not such a gift for the benefit of J. as that the savings belonged to J. or his personal representative, as part of his personal estate; (3) semble: no bill will lie against the trustees after the decease of J. for neglect of their duty, even if they had inadequately looked to his comfort during his life; (4) semble: if the trustees had suffered any recourse to be had to the private property of J. for his "maintenance, attendance, & comfort," while any of the income of their testator's estate was in their hands & unapplied, the personal representative of J. could have maintained a bill to be recouped the amount out of testator's estate. —Re SANDERSON'S TRUST (1857), 3 K. & J. 497; 26 L. 2284. Discretion to apply sum for maintenance—To make up fixed sum—Discretion refers to mode of application—Not to amount to maintenance.]—Testator, whose wife was of unsound mind, gave his estate to trustees, in trust "to apply from time to time at their uncontrolled discretion such annual sum "for the maintenance etc." of his wife, as, together with her own income, "shall not exceed £500 per annum." —Held: the discretion referred to the application & not to the amount, & the widow who had recovered was entitled to have her income made up to £500 a year out of testator's estate. —BULLOCK v. BULLOCK (1864), 34 Beav. 85; 11 L. T. 561; 11 Jur. N. S. 29; 13 W. R. 212; 55 E. R. 565.

2285. Maintenance to widow during minority of infant—Abandonment of child by widow—Right of trustees to refuse payment.]—A widow who was by the terms of the will to be allowed money by the trustees during the minority of an infant, her son, abandoned the child, for whom other guardians were appointed by the ct., & afterwards having cohabited with a married man, & by him had several illegitimate children, lived with them in a house to the use of which she was entitled under the will. The trustees under these circumstances refused to make her any allowance out of the trust moneys: —Held: she could not compel the trustees so to do, but was disqualified from making any claim by her abandonment of the child independently of other misconduct. —MELLOR v. MELLOR (1871), 20 W. R. 51.

2286. Discretion of trustees as to payment—To fulfil intention of testator.]—Testator gave his property to trustees on trust during the life of his son to pay, apply, & dispose of the annual produce of a certain portion of it for the maintenance & support of his son & his present or any future wife, & the maintenance, education & support of their children, or any or either of them his son & his wife & children in such manner & such proportions as the trustees should in their discretion think fit & proper, without being answerable or accountable to any person for the way in which they should apply the same; & after the decease of his son, to pay & apply the annual proceeds in like manner unto & for the benefit of any widow for life, & any children, until they should attain twenty-one or marry, & subject to those trusts in trust for the children. The son died in 1849, leaving a wife & six children, the youngest of whom attained twenty-one in 1870. In 1851 the widow married again. The settlement made on the marriage did not comprise the above annual proceeds, & the trustees continued to pay them to the wife as part of her separate estate & on her separate receipt. The second husband, who was living apart from his wife, claimed to be entitled to the income during her life: —Held: the trustees had a discretion to pay the wife the income for her separate use. —*AUSTIN v. Sect. 5.—Maintenance and advancement: Sub-sects. 1 & 2.]

Testatrix directed trustees to stand possession of a fund upon trust to pay the income to T. during his life, or until he should become a bkpt. or liquidating debtor, or should cease to be entitled to receive such income for his own benefit; & in case any of those events happened, then "to pay to him or apply for his benefit during the remainder of his life" either the whole or so much only of the income as the trustees should, in their uncontrolled discretion, think fit, & "subject to the aforesaid interest," upon trust for other beneficiaries. T. assigned his interest, & subsequently became bankrupt:—Held: the trustees might, in the exercise of their discretion, expend the whole or any part of the income for the maintenance of T., & any part not so applied by them went to the persons entitled under the gift over. Semble: payment of the debts of T. might be an application of the income for his maintenance.—Re BULLOCK, GOOD v. LICKORISH (1891), 60 L. J. Ch. 341; 64 L. T. 736; 39 W. R. 472; 7 T. L. R. 402.

2268. Discretionary trust of residue—After death of tenant for life—Prior death of legatee.]—Testator devised a share of his residuary estate, after the determination of a life tenancy therein, to trustees, upon trust "to pay or apply all or any portion of the income or corpus of the same in or towards the support or maintenance, or otherwise for the benefit of, their brother R. in such manner & proportions in every respect & at such times as they shall deem most conducive to his welfare." R. died during the continuance of the interest of the tenant for life. On the share subsequently falling into possession, the legal personal representative of R. claimed it as part of R.'s estate. The trustees had not attempted to deal with the share while reversionary:—Held: the effect of the gift was to empower the trustees to apply so much of the share as might be required for the personal benefit of R.; the trustees had not waived that discretion or been guilty of default, or refused to exercise it; but no trust was to be implied in R.'s favour as to the whole of the share, therefore under the circumstances, the share did not pass to the legal personal representative of R., no transmissible interest in the fund having ever vested in him.—Re STANGER, MOORSOM v. TATE (1891), 60 L. J. Ch. 326; 64 L. T. 693; 39 W. R. 454.

2269. Legacy to vest on attaining twenty-one—Power to pay share for advancement or benefit of beneficiary—Trustees may apply interest on legacy for maintenance.]—Testatrix directed trustees to pay a legacy, part of the proceeds of sale of her estate, to an infant to vest in him at twenty-one years of age, & empowered the trustees to apply the whole or part of the share to which any beneficiary might be contingently entitled towards the advancement or otherwise for the benefit of such beneficiary. Testatrix did not stand in loco parentis towards the infant legatee:—Held: under this power the trustee might apply interest on the legacy as from the death of testatrix for the maintenance of the infant.—Re CHURCHILL, HISCOCK v. LODDER, [1909] 2 Ch. 431; 79 L. J. Ch. 10; 101 L. T. 380; 53 Sol. Jo. 697.

Annotation.—Distd. Re West, Westhead v. Appland, [1913] 2 Ch. 345.

2270. Annuity given "for maintenance"—Death of annuitant.]—A "further annuity" of £300 given by testator to his widow, for the maintenance & education of his infant daughter, does not cease to be payable by reason of the death of the widow during the minority of the daughter.—Re YATES, YATES v. WYATT, [1901] 2 Ch. 438; 70 L. J. Ch. 725; 85 L. T. 398; 49 W. R. 646; 45 Sol. Jo. 652.

2271. Separate trusts for maintenance—No right of contribution.]—Discretionary power was given to applts. as trustees under a will to pay to testator's daughter £800 a year, the unpaid portion thereof to fall into the residue of his estate. A like power was given to one of applts. & a resp. as trustees under the will of her sister to pay such sums as they might think fit in & towards her maintenance, the residue of the income of testatrix's estate to be paid to her nephew, the corpus to go in equal shares to his children on his death. The trustees under the first will paid £400 a year to the daughter, but on the death of testatrix they reduced the allowance to £100 a year, while the trustees of the second will paid from £700 to £800 a year.

In a suit by the nephew & the trustee of his insolvent estate for an order that the daughter's maintenance should be provided for by a proportionate contribution from the two estates:—Held: there was no common obligation & no right to contribution. The trusts were different in their terms to be exercised at the discretion of different trustees, & the resulting obligations were separate & independent.—SMITH v. COCK, [1911] A. C. 317; 80 L. J. P. C. 98; 104 L. T. 1, P. C.

2272. Direction to accumulate—One child attaining twenty-one—No interest in subsequent accumulations.]—Testator bequeathed the residue to trustees, for the maintenance of his five children during their respective minorities, & he directed them to accumulate the surplus income, "for the benefit of the residuary legatees, & form part of the residue of his estate," & subject as aforesaid, on trust to pay, etc., the residue to his five children at twenty-five in certain shares, but their shares to be vested at twenty-one, etc.; & at that age, they were entitled to receive all the interest, upon what should then appear to be their "respective shares." He authorised advancements to be made to his sons, to be deducted out of their shares before any "final division." One child having attained her proper age received her share of the then aggregate fund:—Held: she retained no interest in the subsequent accumulations accruing during the minorities of the other children.—*ROUTH v. 2276. Power of advancement in tenant for life—Assignment of interest as security for annuity—Tenant for life cannot exercise power.]—A tenant for life of trust moneys, with a power for appointing, & raising in his lifetime a part of the fund for the advancement of his children, assigned the interest & dividends of the whole fund as a security for an annuity granted by him; he afterwards, in exercise of the power, appointed a part of the fund to be raised for the advancement of one of his children:—Held: by the assignment of the dividends, he had precluded himself from exercising the power for advancement, as it would tend to diminish the security for the annuity, notwithstanding the dividends were of much greater amount than the annuity.—NOEL v. HENLEY

2277. Power of advancement in two trustees—Direction for appointment of new trustee on failure of one—Advancement by sole acting trustee.]—Testator appointed two trustees, & gave them a power of making advancements to his children; & he directed if either declined to act, a new trustee should be appointed. One alone, the mother of the children, acted, & made, as was alleged, advancements without the concurrence of the other trustee, or the appointment of a new trustee:—Held: the proper discretion had not been exercised, & no inquiries could be directed as to the alleged advancements with a view to their being allowed.—PALMER v. WAKEFIELD (1840), 3 Beav. 227; 49 E. R. 88.

2278. Sum actually advanced exceeds sum authorised—Whole interest not required for maintenance—Power to advance whole interest—Guardians permitted to receive excess of interest.]—Where the sum required for the advancement of an infant was a reasonable sum, but exceeded the sum authorised to be advanced, & the whole amount of the interest was not required for the infant's maintenance, but there was a power to advance the whole of the interest towards the maintenance of the infant, the ct. permitted the infant's guardians to receive the excess of interest, until the difference between the amount required & the sum authorised to be advanced should be made up.—TERRY v. HENDERSON, COSGRAVE v. HENDERSON (1850), 15 L. T. O. S. 452.

2279. Power to advance for "preferment, advancement, or establishment in the world"—Beneficiary in embarrassed circumstances—Trustees not authorised to advance in such a case.]—Testatrix gave £1,000 to trustees to pay the interest to petitioner for life, & afterwards the capital to be divided between his children. There was also a power to the trustees, if they should think fit, to advance all or any portion of the £1,000 for the "preferment, advancement, or establishment in the world" of petitioner. A portion of the £1,000 had been advanced under this power. Petitioner had had twelve children, five of whom were alive: & being in embarrassed circumstances, now asked, with the consent of the children & of the trustees, that the remaining portion of the money might be paid over to him under the power in the will:—Held: this was not such a case as was contemplated by the power.—LUARD v. PEASE (1853), 22 L. J. Ch. 1069; 1 W. R. 527.

2280. — "Or otherwise for his benefit"—Power to advance to pay debts—Interest on debts absorbing beneficiary's income.]—Testator bequeathed a fund upon trust for L. during his life, & after his decease for his children as he should by will appoint, & in default of appointment for his children, who being sons should attain twenty-one, or being daughters should attain that age or marry, in equal shares. Testator empowered the trustees, at any time or times during the life of L., to apply any part of the fund not exceeding one moiety in or towards the preferment or advancement of L. or otherwise for his benefit as the trustees should in their discretion think fit. 2282. Power of advancement during minority.—Cannot be exercised in favour of person over twenty-one.—Under a will a mother was tenant for life of a fund, to her separate use, without power of anticipation. After her death the fund was to go to her children as she should appoint by deed or will, & in default of appointment, among her children equally, the shares of sons being vested at twenty-one, & the shares of daughters at twenty-one or marriage. The trustees had power to advance the whole or any part of the share to which each of the children "being a minor" was actually or presumptively entitled:—Held: there was no power, even with the consent of the mother, to make an advancement to a son who had attained twenty-one.—CLARKE v. HOGG (1871), 19 W. R. 617, L. J. J.

2283. Consent of tenant for life to exercise of power.—Tenant for life assigning interest by mortgage.—Tenant for life unable to consent.—Trustees cannot exercise power.—A. being tenant for life of a fund under a settlement which empowered the trustees with his consent to advance part of the presumptive share of a child, assigned his life interest in the fund by way of mtge. to pltf.:—Held: the trustees might be restrained from making any advancement to a son of A. during A.'s life, he having by executing the mtge. lost his power to consent.—NOTTIDGE v. GREEN (1875), 33 L. T. 220.

2284. Interest paid on sum advanced in testator's lifetime.—Right of testator's widow to receive interest.—Testator had advanced by way of loan to deft., one of his children, a sum of £2,000, upon which sum interest was paid during testator's lifetime. Testator, by his will, devised & bequeathed all his property, both real & personal, to trustees on trust to permit his widow to receive the income actually produced by such property, howsoever constituted or invested, during widowhood, & subject thereto on trust for his child, if only one, or all his children equally if more than one, who being a son or sons should attain the age of twenty-one years, or being a daughter or daughters should attain that age or marry. The will contained a proviso that any advances made by testator to any child or to the husband of any child in his lifetime, together with interest on such advances, as charged against such child or her husband in his private memorandum book in his own handwriting, should, according to the amount thereof, be taken in full or in part satisfaction of his or her share in testator's property, unless testator should otherwise declare by writing under his hand. The sum advanced to deft. was charged against him in the testator's memorandum book, & such book contained an entry as follows: "This is the memorandum book named in my will as containing the advances made by me to my children or their husbands to be taken in satisfaction of their respective shares in my estate":—Held: testator's widow was entitled to receive from deft. during her life, as part of the annual income given to her by the will, interest on the sum of £2,000.—*LIMPUS v. 2285. Advancement on account of expectant interest.—Interest in the event of issue.—Presumption in favour of possibility of issue.—If property is given to a person in the event of another having children, the ct. will treat the first person as having an interest in the property during the life of the other, even although such other is a woman past the natural age for child-bearing.

Under a will the children of L. were entitled to shares in certain trust funds in the event of H. having children, & in the event of H. having no children the funds were undisposed of. The will gave the trustee power to make advances to the children of L. on account of their "then expectant presumptive or then vested" shares. H. was a widow of fifty-four years of age & had never had a child:—Held: the power of advancement was exercisable during the life of H.—Re HOCKING, MICHELL v. LOE, [1898] 2 Ch. 507; 67 L. J. Accumulation for fixed period.—For person then entitled to real estate in strict settlement—Disentailing deed by tenant for life.]—Testator devised his real estate to trustees to the use of his wife for life, & after her decease to the use of the first & every other son of his son H. successively in tail male with divers remainders over, & he directed that during a certain period the trustees should accumulate the rents & profits of his real estate & hold the same & the accumulations thereof upon trust for the person or persons who at the expiration of the period should “under the trusts & limitations of this my will be entitled to the use & enjoyment” of his real estate.

Upon the death of testator's widow the first tenant in tail executed a disentailing assurance, & although the period of accumulation had not expired, claimed to be entitled to the receipt of the rents & profits of the estate & to the accumulations:—Held: before the disentailing deed pltf. was in possession & enjoyment of his estate tail under the limitations of the will subject to the trust for accumulation, & notwithstanding the disentailing deed he was still in possession under the limitations of the will although he had become owner in fee; upon the cesser of the period of accumulation he, his heirs or assigns, would be entitled under the limitations of the will, & no one else could be so entitled; & consequently the trust for accumulation could no longer be enforced, & he was entitled to be let into possession.—*Re TREVANTON, TREVANION v. 2288. Accumulations of unapplied income—Income of residuary estate—Part of capital of residuary estate.]—By her will, testatrix who died in 1915 gave her residuary estate upon trust to pay or apply or any part of the income thereof towards the maintenance & education or otherwise for the benefit of her granddaughter F. until she attained twenty-one or married, & if she attained twenty-one without having previously married, to pay the income to F. during her life, & if she married before or after attaining twenty-one, to pay the income of one moiety of the residuary estate to F. during the remainder of her life, & to pay or apply the income of the other moiety towards the maintenance of J., & after the deaths of F. & J. respectively, to hold the respective moieties upon trust for their children respectively. F. married in 1917 & attained twenty-one in 1918:—Held: accumulations of unapplied income of the residuary estate existing at the date of the marriage formed part of the capital of the residuary estate, & did not pass to F.—Re WOLF, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. LAZARUS, [1920] 1 Ch. 184; 89 L. J. Ch. 11; 122 L. T. 457.

2289. ———.]—Testatrix by her will gave, devised & bequeathed all her real & personal estate not thereby otherwise disposed of to trustees upon trust to sell, call in & convert the same, & after paying her funeral & testamentary expenses & debts, & the legacies bequeathed by her will or any codicil thereto, to invest the residue of the moneys, with power from time to time to vary such investments & to stand possessed of the residuary trust moneys & the investments for the time being representing the same, thereafter called the residuary trust fund, upon trust to pay certain annuities, & subject thereto in trust as to two-thirds thereof for the children of her niece living at her, testatrix's, death, who being males attained the age of twenty-five years, or being females attained that age or married in equal shares. Then after providing that the share of any child dying under the age of twenty-five years without having been married should accrue to the other children's shares, testatrix declared that the share or shares original or accruing to which each of such children acquiring a vested interest should be entitled in the residuary trust funds should be settled upon trusts under which each child took a life interest only.

Pltf. was a daughter of testatrix's niece who had married, & she took out this summons to have it determined whether or not she was absolutely entitled to the accumulations of the income of her share between the date of testatrix's death & of her attaining a vested interest:—Held: pltf.'s share in the residuary trust funds directed to be settled included not only the corpus but also the accumulation of income of the share, & pltf. was therefore not entitled to the accumulation but only to income produced from their investment.—*Re MELLOR, ALVAREZ v. He appointed exors. & also trustees, & with all necessary powers to fulfil the will. At a meeting of the trustees & exors., for the purpose of settling testator's affairs, the exors. paid over to the trustees (inter alia) the sum of £500, to be set apart for the payment of the legacies to the daughters when they attained the age of twenty-one. This sum was afterwards lent by the trustees to the pltf. on a promissory note which described them as "trustees acting under the will of the late W.," testator:—Held: a payment of principal & interest to one of the legatees within six years was sufficient to take the case out of the above Act, & the trustees had a right to maintain an action on the note.—MEGGINSON v. 2298. ———]—By his marriage settlement R. assigned funds to trustees upon trusts under which he took a protected life interest, & the trustees were empowered to pay his debts & for that purpose to raise money upon his request in writing. In Nov. 1906, he committed an act of bkpcy., on which he was adjudicated bkpt. in Apr. 1907. In Dec. 1906, he signed a request to the trustees to raise £800 for payment of his debts. They borrowed the money from G. & executed a mtge., in which they covenanted "as such trustees but not otherwise" to repay the money with interest at 6 per cent. G. brought this action to enforce his security:—Held: the covenant did not bind the trustees personally.—Re ROBINSON'S SETTLEMENT, GANT v. HOBBS, [1912] 1 Ch. 717; 81 L. J. Ch. 393; 106 L. One of the trustees was entitled to one-twelfth of the trust fund, subject to the life interest of pltf. The trustees were the only defts. to this bill. On an objection for want of parties:—Held : (1) notwithstanding 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42, r. 9, & s. 51, the question at issue in the cause could not be tried in the presence of the trustees only, without any of the absent persons beneficially interested under the settlement; (2) it was not necessary that all such persons should be made parties, although some of them, not being next of kin of the settlor, must be so; & cause ordered to stand over, that one of the infants, not being next of kin, might appear by counsel at the hearing.—*READ v. (2) An action having been brought by a settlor's trustee in bkpcy. against the trustees of the settlement of the settlor's own property to set aside limitations cutting down his life interest in the event of his bkpcy., the beneficiaries taking under the limitations over were subsequently added by pltf. as defts. at the suggestion of defts. the trustees, & at the trial appeared to defend separately from their co-defts. the trustees. The action being successful, the trustees were allowed to retain their costs as between solr. & client out of income in their hands, but the beneficiaries, having chosen to defend, although they had been unnecessarily, but not improperly, made parties, were not allowed any costs.

2316. —.]—In a foreclosure action, the trustees & exors. of the will of a deceased mtgor. sufficiently represent the estate of the mtgor. for all the purposes of the action; & it is not necessary to bring the cestui que trust before the ct.—Re MITCHELL, WAVELL v. MITCHELL (1892), 65 L. T. 851.

2317. —.]—L. by a memorandum dated Mar. 25, 1879, made an equitable mtge. of certain property to B. & J. L. died in 1886, having by his will given all his real & personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale & conversion, & in the events which happened to set aside the sum of £700, & stand possessed thereof upon trust to pay the income to his son S., until the youngest child of his son should attain twenty-one, & then, if his son's children should not receive £700, to which they would then be entitled under a certain settlement, upon trust for the children, & subject thereto he gave all his real & personal estate in trust for his son S. He appointed S. & other trustees & exors. of his will; but, owing to their death or disclaimer, S. became the sole trustee of, & alone proved the will. In 1890 the equitable mtgees. B. & J., commenced a foreclosure action making S. & his eldest daughter, the only one of his children who had attained twenty-one, & a second mtgee. defts. An order for foreclosure absolute was made on Mar. 20, 1891, & on Aug. 1, 1891, B. & J. entered into a contract for sale of the mortgaged property as absolute owners. The purchaser objected that the infant children of S., ought to have been parties to the foreclosure action; that they were not foreclosed, & must join in the conveyance. The vendor declined to make them parties:—Held: as S. was exor. as well as trustee of L.'s will, his infant children were sufficiently represented by him, & the requisition was sufficiently answered.—Re BOOTH & KETTLEWELL'S CONTRACT (1892), 62 L. J. Ch. 40; 67 L. T. 550; 3 R. 93.

2318. Action for sale & partition.]—In an action for sale & partition, plffs. were trustees for sale of two-thirds of certain leasehold property, & defts. were trustees for sale of the remaining third part after the death of a tenant for life. The cestuis que trust not being parties:—Held: the trustees for sale sufficiently represented their cestuis que trust, & a sale & partition were directed without notice to the parties beneficially interested.—STACE v. GAGE (1878), 8 Ch. D. 451; 47 L. J. Ch. 608; 38 L. T. 843; 26 W. R. 605.

2319. Action for recovery of title deeds—Trust estate fraudulently mortgaged.]—A son who was heir-at-law to his father, who was one of the exors. & trustees of his father's will, though he had not proved the will, & whose Christian names & description were identical with those of his father, after his father's death, executed mtges. of freehold & leasehold property of the father & applied the mtge. money to his own purposes. He handed over the title deeds to the mtgees. The transaction took place without the knowledge of his mother & sister, who were co-trustees & co-extrices. with him, & who had proved the will. The will had not been registered in the Middlesex Registry, though the property was situate in that county. The mtge. deeds were registered. They purported to be executed by the absolute owner of the property, & the solr. who acted for both parties believed the son to be the absolute owner. The son told him nothing about the father's will. The solr. searched the Middlesex Registry. The son took a beneficial interest under the trusts of the father's will. After the son's death the fraud was discovered, & the mother & sister, as trustees of the father's will, brought an action against the mtgees., claiming a declaration that the mtges. were void against them, & delivery up of the title deeds. The other beneficiaries under the will were made defts.:—Held: inasmuch as, by virtue of R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 7, trustees may sue on behalf of their cestuis que trust, beneficiaries ought not to have been made parties to the action.—Re COOPER, COOPER v. VESEY (1882), 20 Ch. D. 611; 51 L. *Made without consent of beneficiaries.]—*Trustees of land without power of sale made a contract of sale without the consent of the beneficiaries. No ratification was alleged, but at the trial a ratification was attempted to be set up, an action being brought against the construction of a settlement the trustees of the settlement sufficiently represent the interests of children otherwise unrepresented, whether in existence or not, who may be entitled under the trusts of the settlement.—*Re WHITING'S SETTLEMENT, WHITING v. C. Effect of Refusal or Inability of One Trustee to Join.

2322. Whether all trustees must join—Trustee not signing deed.—In a marriage settlement the husband covenanted with three persons, that if his wife survived him, his heirs or exors. should pay her an annuity for her life. Two of the trustees did not sign the deed. The other trustee brought an action on the covenant alleging in his declaration that the other two had not signed the deed:—Held: the declaration was bad, & the three trustees should have joined.—PETRIE v. BURY (1824), 3 B. & C. 353; 5 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 152; 3 L. J. O. S. K. B. 29; 107 E. R. 764.

2323. Retired trustee—Whether necessary party—Action for foreclosure by co-trustee.—Where a marriage settlement contained the usual power to appoint new trustees, & one of the trustees relinquished his trust, & a memorandum to that effect was indorsed on the settlement, but no new trustee was appointed in his room, & after his retirement the remaining trustees lent out the trust money on mtge.:—Held: the retired trustee was a necessary party to a bill of foreclosure of the mtged. estate.—ADAMS v. PAYNTER (1844), 1 Coll. 530; 14 L. J. Ch. 53; 4 L. T. O. S. 193; 63 E. R. 530; sub nom. ADAMS v. PAYNTER, ADAMS v. LLOYD, 8 Jur. 1063.

2324. Death of trustee—Right of surviving trustee to sue in own right—Action for use & occupation.—Deft. being in possession of certain premises under a lease from two trustees for a term which had expired, a new lease was granted for a further term, but was executed by one of the trustees only. Deft. paid rent to both trustees until one of them died; & for the rent due after his death the other trustee brought an action for use & occupation:—Held: he might maintain the action in his own right, & was not bound to sue as surviving trustee.—WHEATLEY v. BOYD (1851), 7 Exch. 20; 21 L. J. Ex. 39; 18 L. T. O. S. 65; 155 E. R. 838.

2325. Trustee implicated in loss of trust estate—Trustee made defendant.—It is quite familiar to us in equity for two trustees to file a bill to recover the trust estate, & if the third trustee has been implicated at all in the loss of it, to make that one trustee a deft., although you order the trust fund to be restored to all for the benefit of the cestui que trust (JESSEL, M.R.).—LUKE v. SOUTH KENSINGTON HOTEL CO. (1879), 11 Ch. D. 121; 48 L. J. Ch. 361; 40 L. T. 638; 27 W. R. 514, C. A.

D. Defences Available to and against Trustees.

2326. What defence available against trustees—Action on covenant in lease—Performance of covenants with assignees of cestui que trust.—It is no defence at law to an action on an indenture of lease by the trustee of a party who has become bkpt., that defts., the lessees, have performed their covenants with the assignees of the cestui que trust.—BRITTEN v. BRITTEN (1834), 4 Tyr. 473; 3 L. J. Ex. 181; sub nom. BRITTEN v. PERROTT, 2 Cr. & M. 597; 149 E. R. 898.

2327. — Bankruptcy of trustee.—LAMB v. VICE, No. 2344, post.

2328. — Admissibility of statements of cestui que trust.—In an action by trustees, plffs. are not bound by the statements of a party admitted to be cestui que trust, unless the nature of the interest of such party in the trust estate be shown. Semble: if it distinctly appear that such party alone is entitled to the benefit resulting from the action, his statements will be admissible in evidence for deft.—MAY v. TAYLOR (1843), 6 Man. & G. 261; 6 Scott, N. R. 974; 12 L. J. C. P. 314; 1 L. T. O. S. 256; 7 J. P. 690; 7 Jur. 515; 134 E. R. 891.

2329. — Fraud of trustee—Cestui que trust not party to fraud.—In covenant upon a separation deed, by which B. the husband, covenanted to pay to A. as trustee for the wife, certain quarterly payments. B. pleaded, that he was induced to make the indenture, & to covenant as in the declaration mentioned, through & by means of certain false & fraudulent misrepresentations of A. by him made to B., that is to say, by A., before & at the time of the making of the indenture by B. falsely & fraudulently representing that E. the wife of B., was a virtuous & moral person, & that he, A., was a virtuous & moral person, & fit to be trustee for her for the purposes of the indenture, whereas in truth E. was not, nor was A. a virtuous & moral person, etc.; that A. had treacherously, etc., seduced E. then being the wife of A. & subsequently to the marriage—which last-mentioned facts A. before & at the time of the making of the indenture suppressed & concealed from B.; that A. so fraudulently procured B. to make the indenture, in order that the trustees alone:—Held: the proper parties were not before the ct.—GARFORTH v. MACKAY (1888), 6 N. Z. L. R. 534.—N.Z.

The jury having found this plea proved. On motion for judgment non obstante veredicto:—Held: plea sufficiently showed the deed to be so tainted with fraud as to be incapable of being enforced in a ct. of law; & the plea might be sustained as a general plea of fraud, notwithstanding the absence of a direct averment that A. knew, at the time he seduced E., that she was the wife of B., & it was no answer to this defence, that pltf. was suing as a trustee, whose cestui qui trust was not shown to have been party to the fraud alleged on the record.—EVANS v. Pltf. clearly was a trustee for M.; he might sue on the bond in pltf.'s name, or pltf. might sue for the benefit of M. Nothing is more common than for a cestui que trust to sue on a bond in the name of his trustee. Deft. moved ex parte for leave to serve the trustee with a notice under R. S. 2357. — — — — —.]—To entitle a third person, not named as a party to a contract, to sue either of the contracting parties, the third person must possess an actual beneficial right which places him in the position of cestui que trust under the contract. By a deed of separation between husband & wife, the husband covenanted with the trustees to pay to them an annuity for the use of the wife & two eldest daughters, & also to pay to the trustees all the expenses of the maintenance & education of the two youngest daughters, provided that the trustees permitted them to go to such school as the husband should direct, & provided also that the covenants by the trustees were duly observed & performed: provided, also, that the two youngest daughters should live at such place, being reasonable & proper for the purpose, as the husband should direct, & should be maintained and educated at his expense, the husband & wife to have all reasonable access to them; & the trustees covenanted with the husband that they would, during the continuance of the separation, keep him indemnified against all liability for the maintenance of the wife & the two eldest daughters, & against all molestation by them, & the wife would not take any proceedings against the husband for alimony, except as aforesaid; & that they, the trustees, would, on the husband defraying all the expenses connected therewith, carry out his desires as to the school at which the two youngest daughters should be educated, & the place at which they should live, & would permit them, if they so desired, & without any interference on the part of the wife, to accept any invitation of the husband to reside with him. On one of the two youngest daughters subsequently attaining sixteen, the husband refused any longer to maintain her, whereupon she brought an action, by her next friend, against the husband & the trustees of the separation deed to enforce the husband's covenant, the trustees having refused to allow their names to be used as pltf.s., & the judge gave a judgment for enforcing the covenant:—Held: upon the construction of the deed, pltf. was not in the position of cestui que trust under the covenant so as to entitle her to maintain the action, but liberty was given to her, under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 16, r. 2, to amend the writ, by adding the trustees, the wife, & the other daughters, or any of them, as pltf.s. They [the trustees] cannot be compelled to sue; but they may be willing, when they know that the covenant cannot be enforced without their being pltf.s., to allow their names to be used, on receiving a proper indemnity (COLTON, J.).—GANDY v. GANDY (1885), 30 Ch. D. 57; 54 L. J. Ch. 1154; 53 L. T. 306; 33 W. R. 803; 1 T. L. R. 520, C. A.

2358. Right to sue in own name.—Assignee of debt.—(1) In a bill to carry into effect the trusts of a creditors' deed a simple allegation by pltf. that he is the assignee of the debt of one of the creditors is not sufficient to give him a right to sue.

(2) In a bill to carry into effect the trusts of a creditors' deed relief was sought in respect of a fraud alleged to have been committed by deceased debtor, & a purchaser in reference to a sale of the trust property, it being averred that the trustee had refused to sue in respect of such alleged fraud.

A mere allegation that the trustee in such a case has refused to sue, without stating any application to him for that purpose, or by whom, is insufficient.—JERDEIN v. BRIGHT (1861), 2 John. & H. 325; 30 L. J. Ch. 336; 4 L. T. 12; 9 W. R. 267; 70 E. R. 1081; subsequent proceedings (1862), 6 L. T. 270.

The application was refused by a judge at chambers, whose decision was upheld by a Div. Ct., on the ground that the discretion of the trustees had been exercised at their request by the judge in directing the receiver appointed in the administration suit to pay pltf. the moneys to which he was entitled under the life interest given to him by his wife:—Held: the decision of the Div. C. Breach of Trust by Trustee.

2399. Neglect to furnish satisfactory accounts.]—(1) It is not of course to appoint a receiver against a trustee of real estates, when the trustee is willing to act.

(2) Where none but the party applying for a receiver can be affected by the expense of such an appointment, it forms a strong ground for making the appointment.

(3) In such case, & where the trustee had neglected to furnish satisfactory accounts, a receiver was appointed on petition after decree.—BAINBRIDGE v. BLAIR (1835), 4 L. J. Ch. 207.

2400. Omission to get in personal estate—Injury to infant legatees.]—Testator devised his real & personal estates to trustees, who were also exors. upon trust, to raise thereout, by sale or otherwise, £4,500, & invest the same in govt. or mtge. securities, & pay so much of the annual proceeds as should be necessary for the maintenance of his granddaughter, M. until her age of twenty-five years, & then to pay the annual proceeds to her for her life, & upon her death to divide the principal among her children, & if she died without children, among testator's other grandchildren, B., C., & D., & as to the residue of testator's real & personal estate, he directed his trustees to pay the rents, interest, & annual proceeds of it to B., C., & D. equally till the eldest should attain twenty-five, & upon that event happening, to convert so much of the residue as should not consist of money into money, & divide the same equally among B., C., & D.; & power was given to the trustees to advance to B. & D. part of their expectant portions before they attained twenty-five:—Held: it was the duty of the trustees to set apart & invest as soon as possible the sum of £4,500, & for that purpose, to sell testator's real estates, notwithstanding that none of the grandchildren might have attained twenty-five; & in consequence of the non-performance of this duty by the acting trustee & exor., & other acts of misconduct on his part, a receiver was appointed.

It is a good ground for the appointment of a receiver, that an exor. & trustee has, by omitting to get in testator's personal estate, deprived infant legatees of the maintenance or means of advancement provided for them by the will.—*RICHARDS v. 2388.1. Misconduct or incapacity of trustee.]—The ct. will grant an order for an injunction to restrain a trustee from interfering with the trust estate where fraud is charged, & by the same order direct the appointment of a receiver.—VERNON v. KINZIE (1845), 2 O. S. 40.—CAN.

... Trustee removed by court—Trust almost at an end.]—The ct. having removed trustees, & it appearing that the period of the trust had almost expired, & that nothing remained but to wind up the estate, a receiver was appointed instead of new trustees.—GARESCHIE v. GARESCHIE (1895), 4 B. C. R. 310.—CAN.

rents in consequence of disputes among the trustees, had been permitted to fall into arrear, on a bill filed by pltf., who was entitled to the rents & profits for her life, against the trustees, the ct. ordered a receiver to be appointed, & the costs of the suit to be paid by the trustees.—WILSON v. WILSON (1838), 2 Keen, 249; 48 E. R. 624.

2402. Committing waste—Farm lands converted into racecourse.—S., by his will, appointed B. together with certain other persons his exors. & trustees, who all, with the exception of B., disclaimed; in consequence of which B. acted alone in the trusts of the will. It having appeared that B. had, during his acting in the trust, been guilty of improvident expenditure, & among other things, had converted farming lands into a racecourse: Held: although no corrupt intention appeared to have prompted B. in committing wilful waste, but he had acted solely under a mistaken notion of his duties of a trustee, yet his conduct was quite sufficient to justify the ct. in appointing a receiver.—WHITEHEAD v. BENNETT (1845), 6 L. T. O. S. 185; 10 Jur. 3.

2403. Deposit of title deeds of trust estate—As security for personal loan.—Testatrix bequeathed a leasehold estate to trustees & exors., in trust for sale, & gave one of such exors. a beneficial interest for his life in one-fourth part of the estate. The latter exor., being at the time indebted to the estate of testatrix, made an assignment of his beneficial interest by way of mtge., to secure a private debt which he owed to a creditor, & deposited the title deeds with the creditor.

Surely it is clear that, on a bill filed by pltf. [exors.] against T. [the depositor of the title deeds] stating such a case, a receiver would be appointed (TURNER, V.-C.)—COLE v. MUDDLE (1852), 10 Hare, 186; 22 L. J. Ch. 401; 20 L. T. O. S. 107; 16 Jur. 853; 68 E. R. 892.

Annotation:—Mentid. Re Whistler & Richardson (1887), 57 L. T. 77.

2404. Loss of portion of trust fund—Trustee of benefit society.—Where a portion of a trust fund has been lost that is prima facie a breach of trust & a sufficient ground for the appointment of a receiver on an interlocutory application.

On a bill filed by pltf. insured in a society, whose funds were liable to pay the insurance money, on behalf of himself & other persons so insured, charging a loss of the fund through the negligence of the directors & on the answer & affidavits showing that the secretary had absconded with part of the funds, & that some of the directors were in needy circumstances:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the appointment of a receiver & to an injunction.

It is admitted that funds have been lost of which it was the duty of defts. to take care. That loss is prima facie evidence of a breach of the duty of defts., sufficient to authorise the interference of the ct. by the appointment of a receiver (KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.)—EVANS v. COVENTRY (1854), 5 De G. M. & G. 911; 3 Eq. Rep. 515; 24 L. T. O. S. 186; 19 J. P. 37; 3 W. R. 149; 43 E. R. 1125, L. J.

2405. Failure to comply with order for payment into court.—Under the general power to appoint receivers given by Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 60), s. 25 (8), & having regard to R. S. C. 1883, Ord. 42, rr. 4, 8 the ct. has jurisdiction to enforce a judgment for payment of money into ct. by a defaulting trustee by the appointment of a receiver of his equitable interest in property in this country; & order accordingly where from the debtor being out of the jurisdiction service of a writ of attachment could not be effected.—*Re CONEY, CONEY v. 2407. Necessity for order of court.—Ex p. HAMILTON, No. 2516, post.

2408. Trustee's right to pay in.—(1) A surviving trustee of a settlement paid into ct. under Trustee Act, 1847 (c. 96), a sum of £166 19s. 11d. which was the produce of one-eighth part of a sum of stock, which stock, on the death of A. was divisible amongst certain parties, to one-eighth of which pltf.'s wife was entitled.

Semble: this would have been a breach of trust on the part of the trustee if the parties had not given him an authority, express or implied, to sell the stock. The trustee had not paid into ct. a small sum of £1 7s. 0d. being the one-eighth of a dividend in the stock to which pltf. was also entitled:—Held: although trustees were bound to pay into ct. the whole of the trust fund, yet, as the retention of this small sum was not made the ground of complaint against the trustee, nor was the question raised by the bill, pltf.'s bill must be dismissed.

(2) The question whether there was or was not any difficulty in the execution of the trust, was not a point open to any cestui que trust to take, & a trustee having funds in his hands was at liberty to pay them into ct. if he were so minded. . . . A trustee paying funds into ct. was bound to pay in the whole, & not retain a small sum which the parties might have no means of recovering (LORD CRANWORTH, V.-C.)—MITCHELL v. COBB (1851), 17 L. T. O. S. 25.

2409. Refusal to pay in—Justification.—Semble: trustees are always justified in not paying money into ct., as it may turn out there was no occasion for so doing.—MOUNTAIN v. YOUNG (1854), 18 Jur. 769.

2410. Quantum to be paid in.—MITCHELL v. COBB, No. 2408, ante.

2411. — Failure to comply with direction to accumulate residue—Order to pay in interest thereon.]—Where there is a direction in the will to accumulate a residue, with which the exor. & trustee does not comply he will not be allowed to pay the bare residue into ct., but must pay also interest from the expiration of one year after testator's decease up to the date of filing the answer.—*AMISS v. 2417. Bequest of grandchildren—Dispute between parent of children & trustee—As to investment during minority.—Testator bequeathed to each of his six grandchildren £200 & in case any of them should not have attained twenty-one at the death of testator, he directed his trustees, who were also his exors. & residuary legatees, to pay interest for the legacies of such children, after the rate of 5 per cent. towards their maintenance & education. Upon differences arising between the father of the children & the trustees as to the investment of the money pending minorities, the trustees file their bill to obtain the direction of the ct., & for leave to pay the amount into ct.:—Held:

the trustees might pay the principal money into ct.—ABRAHAM v. HOLDERNESS (1842), 6 Jur. 290.

2418. To enable trustee to get rid of trust.—The intention of the Trustee Act is not that money paid into ct. should remain there but for the present relief of trustees (KINDERLEY, V.-C.).—Re LLOYD'S TRUST (1854), 2 W. R. 371.

2422. Whether trustee entitled to pay in.

(1) Trustees not entitled as of course to their costs of paying a fund into ct. under Trustee Relief Act, where such payment has been vexatious, & not justified by the possibility as to the title to the fund.

(2) Where, however, the person entitled to the fund, & objecting to its being paid in, claims by representation, trustees will have their costs, as the possibility of a disposition by deceased person through whom the claim is made is not excluded.—Re LANE'S TRUST (1854), 24 L. How far discharged from liability.—Discharge in proportion to sum paid in.—A trustee paying into ct. a sum of money under Trustee Relief Act, 1847 (c. 96), although such sum may be less than the amount of the trust fund in his hands, is discharged as to the money so paid in; & after such payment the parties beneficially interested can proceed only under the Act to recover the money so paid in; & the ordinary jurisdiction of the ct., as against the trustee, is confined to the balance which may remain due from the trustee in respect of the trust fund after such payment.—*GOODE v. 2454. ——The payment of a trust fund into ct. under Trustee Relief Act, 1850 (c. 60), does not give the ct. jurisdiction over the rest of the estate, but upon the question of costs, or the paying in the fund, or of the petition for payment out, or how the money is to be disposed of, the ct. has jurisdiction. The Act operates as a complete discharge to the trustee as to the fund paid in, & no further, & where a trustee retains a part of a trust fund in his hands, to answer the costs of payment into ct.: the ct. has no jurisdiction over that portion.—Re BARBER'S TRUSTS (1863), 2 New Rep. 571; 32 L. 2459. Payment in of moneys over which trustees have discretionary power—Whether court will exercise power.—Testator by his will declared it should be in trustees' discretion to advance all or any part of the principal of a fund to his son, or to his children, if he should be dead, in or towards his or their maintenance or advancement in the world, it being his wish that his son, if living, should have the whole benefit of such moneys if he should conduct himself steadily & to the satisfaction of his trustees, with gifts over, in the event of the whole of such moneys not having been advanced by the trustees. The son having assigned his interest under the will, the trustees, after the widow's death, paid the fund into ct. under Trustee Relief Act, 1850 (c. 60), but did not suggest that the son had conducted himself otherwise than steadily & to their satisfaction:—Held: upon the construction of the will, this was, in effect, a trust for the son with a power for the trustees to deprive him of the fund if he should not conduct himself steadily & to their satisfaction, the trustees having declined to exercise that power, it was not competent to this ct. to exercise it, & the fund was ordered to be transferred to the assignee.—Re COLE'S TRUST (1858), 4 K. & J. 199; 32 L. The trustees paid the legacy of one of the daughters into ct. under Trustee Relief Act, 1847 (c. 46). Application was now made for the advance of a sum of £3,000 to the husband of the daughter whose share had been so paid in, for the purpose of furnishing him with a professional residence. The surviving trustee of the will consented to the advance being made:—Held: the trustees, by paying into ct., had terminated their discretion, & the discretion being a personal one could not be exercised by the ct., & the advance could not therefore be made to the husband.—Re NETTLEFOLD'S TRUSTS (1888), 59 L. Whether [trustees entitled to costs.]—Trustees, after being warned by J. & W., their cestuis que trust, that if they paid the trust fund into ct. under the 'Trustees' Relief Act, they, the cestuis que trust, should object to the trustees being allowed the costs of paying the fund into & taking it out of ct., nevertheless paid the fund into ct. under the Act, stating by their affidavit, not that they had any doubts as to the title of their cestuis que trust, but that, "to the best of their knowledge & belief J. & W. were the only persons interested in or entitled to the trust fund, & that the facts mentioned in that affidavit were stated upon their own knowledge, & they had acquired such knowledge as trustees of the trust fund." The cestuis que trust then presented their petition

The settlement contained a power for the cestuis que trust in case the trustees therein named, or either of them, should die, or be desirous of being discharged from the trusts, to appoint any other person or persons to be a trustee or trustees in the place of any such trustee or trustees so dying or being desirous to be discharged. One trustee died, & the other two were desirous of being discharged, upon which two new trustees only were substituted. Trustees who under such circumstances pay the trust fund into ct. under Trustee Relief Act will not, as a rule, be entitled to their costs.

(a) By Petition.

i. In General.

See R. S. C., Ord. 54B., r. 3 (2) (b); Ord. 55, r. 2 (1); C. C. R., 1903, Ord. 38.

2501. When petition proper mode of procedure.]—(1) A fund paid into ct. under Trustee Relief Act, can be dealt with only on petition. Such petition may be presented by a beneficiary not named in the trustees' affidavit.

(2) A person claimed by action a fund paid into ct. by trustees who had not named him in their affidavit. The judge declared pltf. entitled to the fund, & directed a petition to be presented asking for payment to him.—PELLING v. GODDARD (1878), 9 Ch. D. 185; 47 L. J. Ch. 646; 38 L. T. 811; 26 W. R. 476.

2502. — Sum over one thousand pounds—Title of applicant depending only on proof of birth.]

—The generality of R. S. C., Ord. 55, r. 2 (1), is not qualified by sub-sect. 5; therefore, an application under Trustee Relief Acts for payment out of a fund to an appet. whose title depends merely upon proof of his birth should be made by summons & not by petition, although the fund exceeds £1,000.—Re BROADWOOD (1886), 55 L. J. Ch. 646; 55 L. T. 312.

2503. — — — —.]—Where the title to a fund in ct. depends only upon proof of identity on the birth, marriage or death of any person the mere fact that the fund exceeds £1,000 will not justify the making of an application for payment or transfer of the fund out of ct. by petition instead of by summons in chambers.—BATES v. MOORE (1888), 38 Ch. D. 381; 57 L. J. Ch. 789; 58 L. T. 513; 36 W. R. 586.

2504. — — — —.]—Money had been paid into ct. by exors. under Trustee Relief Act to the credit of an account entitled "In the matter of the trusts of the sale moneys of certain real estate formerly belonging to E., deceased, & subject to the trusts of a certain Royal warrant dated Aug. 6, 1861." The fund had originally been about £1,500. On an application by summons under R. S. C., Ord. 55, £600, part of the fund, was ordered to be paid out but as to the remainder the summons stood over for further evidence as to the death of an annuitant. The further evidence having been obtained the application was renewed, the summons asking for payment out of the balance to appet.:—Held: the case was not within R. S. C., Ord. 55, at all, & the application ought to be made by petition & not by summons.—Re EVANS (1886), 54 L. T. 527.

2505. — — — —.]—Where a sum paid into ct. under Trustee Relief Acts exceeded £1,000, the ct. refused to order payment out on summons.—Re RHODES (1886), 31 Ch. D. 499; 55 L. J. Ch. 477; 54 L. T. 294; 34 W. R. 270, 501.

2514. Necessity for attendance of trustee.]—R. S. C., Ord. 65, r. 27 (19), as to a tender for costs on the service of a petition, does not apply to a trustee whose duty it is to appear & protect the fund of which he is the trustee & which is the subject-matter of the petition.—LOWE v. MOORE (1906), 22 T. L. R. 640.

ii. Jurisdiction of Court on Petition.

2515. Whether over all questions concerning the fund.]—Under Trustee Relief Act, 1847 (c. 96), the ct. has power to decide all questions that may arise concerning the fund in ct., just as in a suit, & may, if necessary, direct any issue to determine the sanity of any person, or for like purposes.—Re ATLEN'S TRUSTS (1854), Kay, App. li.; 69 E. R. 340.

2516. — Fund paid in by mistake.]—(1) Where a marriage settlement had been prepared, containing clauses not contemplated by parties on the other side, & the money which was to form part of the settled fund actually vested in the trustees for the purpose of the intended marriage, the trustees, in consequence of a misunderstanding between the parties, paid the money into ct., under Trustee Relief Act, 1847 (c. 96). Upon a petition of the settlor & his daughter to have the fund repaid to them:—Held: as the whole affair had proceeded under a mistake, & was incomplete, the ct. had jurisdiction over the fund, & accordingly directed it to be paid out to petitioner, the father.

(2) Trustee Relief Act, 1847 (c. 96), enacts, that where trustees, exors., etc., having in their hands any money belonging to any trust whatever, or the major part of them, shall be at liberty, on filing an affidavit shortly describing the trust, to pay the same, with the privy of the Accountant-General of the Ct. of Ch., into the Bank of England to the account of such Accountant-General, in the matter of the particular trust, in trust to attend the orders of the ct.; & the Accountant-General is empowered, without any order of the ct., to receive such trust moneys paid into the bank in his name by trustees, without any order of the Ct. of Ch.—*Ex p. 2523 Whether confined to questions as to fund in court.—In 1887 a sum of India stock representing the proceeds of a policy on a life that had dropped was held in trust for A., the widow of the assured, for life & after her death for his three children by her, one of whom was a daughter who was married before the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), came into operation.

In 1890 A. as to her life interest, & the daughter & one of the sons as to their respective reversions in one-third of the trust funds, mortgaged the same for £400, & the daughter, who did not acknowledge the mtge. under Malin's Act, received one-third of the money. Her husband was no party to this transaction & subsequently died. In 1893 the trustee, at the request of all the beneficiaries & on a covenant of indemnity from the two sons, paid off the mtge. out of the trust funds; & after his death, & on the appointment of a new trustee, the balance of the India stock was under an order transferred into ct. A. died in 1917, & on a petition by the daughter for payment out of the fund in ct. she claimed that the mtge. did not bind her or operate to charge her share in the trust funds, & that, as between herself & her brothers, she was entitled to be paid out of the fund in ct. an amount equal to one-third of the original trust funds:—Held: the fund in ct. was divisible into equal thirds, for the ct. was not administering the trust estate & petitioner, whatever her claim might be against deceased trustee's estate, had no personal right or claim against the other cestuis que trust.—Re BARROW'S POLICY TRUSTS, [1918] 1 Ch. 452; 87 L. 2543. ——— Previous order declaring rights.]—Freehold hereditaments in the city of London, to a moiety of which A. was entitled after the death of a tenant for life, subject to four life annuities of £50 payable from the death of the tenant for life, were taken by the Metropolitan Board of Works, & the money paid into ct. under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 18). In 1866 an order was made on petition, whereby a sum of £7,000 was ordered to be invested to provide for the annuities when they should become payable, & the balance of a moiety of the fund, after providing for the tenant for life's interest, was directed to be paid to A. In 1868 one of the expectant annuitants died; in 1869 the tenant for life died; & in 1870 another order was made on petition, whereby a sum of stock which would have been sufficient to pay an annuity of £50, was ordered to be transferred to A.

A second annuitant having died in May, 1883, A. claimed a sum of £1,666 13s. 4d. Consols, being so much of the residue of the investment of £7,000 as had sufficed to provide for the second annuity of £50:—Held: the orders of the ct. in 1866 & 1870, amounted to "an order declaring the rights of " A. within the meaning of R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 55, r. 2 (1); & the application ought to be by summons.

2567. Trustee—Settlement of share of fund established by private Act—Settlement without consent of directors of fund.]—A fund was established under a special Act as a provision, upon the principle of a life insurance, by officers of the Customs for their widows, children & relatives. Under the Act, directors of the fund were appointed, with power to frame rules for the management of the fund, & with discretion to admit nominees of the subscribers, other than relatives, to the benefit arising out of any subscriptions. By the Act a restriction was placed on alienation by widows, children & other claimants without consent of the directors. By the rules, each subscriber had power to direct how his portion of the fund should be applied for the benefit of his widow, children or relatives, or his nominees, who should have been duly admitted by the directors. A subscriber, a widower, made, on the occasion of his daughter's marriage, an appointment of his share of the fund to the trustees of his daughter's settlement, the trusts being for his daughter for her life, remainder to her husband for life, remainder to the children of the marriage. The trustees were never formally admitted under the rules, though their names were sent in for that purpose by the settlor. The daughter predeceased her father. On his death, the directors paid his share into ct. under Trustee Relief Act, one moiety of it being claimed by the surviving son of the subscriber:—Held: the settlement on the daughter's marriage was such a settlement for the benefit of his daughter as the subscriber had a right to make, & the formal admission by the directors of the trustees as the nominees of the settlor was unnecessary, & the fund must be paid to them.—Re POCOCK'S POLICY (1871), 6 Ch.
